It was supposed that the captain never swore because he had been a minister, but it was only one of the lieutenants who had been a minister, and he had decidedly fallen from grace. The right of swearing had been a question of continued discussion aboard ship. The executive officer swore because he was all bile, the navigating officer because he was jolly, and when the captain remonstrated with him he said: "What can I do? The whole shipload of men are swearing, captain, ensigns and seamen, and I've got to beat them all to show my position, haven't I?" However that was, excitement generally followed a public swearing by the captain, except on one day when the excitement preceded it. That day the sea was calm and nothing much was going on aboard ship save the constant watch of the blockaded Cuban port and the sea horizon. The air was clear, the sun was bright, and for some unusual atmospheric reason everything that appeared over the horizon was tremendously magnified. A puff of smoke was seen beyond the sky line and all hands watched eagerly for the appearance of the steamer. Up she came, puffing away, and in the clear light she looked like the Great Eastern. She flew no signal flags, she looked strange, and she bore down on the blockading cruisers as straight as a die. On she came, growing larger and larger, while the crew waited breathlessly for some word from the captain. The officers on the bridge stood watching her fixedly, muttering because they could not make her out. Finally the captain said: "Well, she doesn't answer our signals, and it's not our fault if she gets hurt." Then turning to the bugler he said: "Sound 'clear ship for action.'" This process was no mean job, but when a scrap was in sight it could be done quickly, and in five minutes all hands were ready to answer the call to quarters. Again there was anxious waiting. Then a queer change came over the appearance of the approaching craft. She had gotten well out of the horizon zone, and as she came near enough for the water to be seen foaming at her bow she grew peculiarly small. Officers and men began to look foolishly at each other, and still the stranger grew smaller. Looks of surprise grew to looks of disgust, and despite the fact that they were standing at quarters, the men began to act as if they were unconscious of the approaching vessel, as though no one had ever suggested a scrap. The steamer, shrunken to a tug, turned broadside as she came within hailing distance, displaying a large white flag at the stern labeled "New York ——," and a tin horn voice spoke through a megaphone: "Can you please tell me where the main fleet is, and if you expect to encounter the enemy's ships?" Then it was that the captain swore.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Magnificent Gift Modestly Made.

The Presbyterian hospital, New York, was this week made the recipient of a handsome gift in a rather unusual manner. On the condition that the name of the donor be not divulged, $200,000 was appropriated for the erection of another building, to afford quarters for the nurses and members of the resident staff, who at present occupy nearly one-third of the ward building of the hospital. The donation may be said to be rather the building than the money, as the structure is to be built at the expense of the benefactor on property at present owned by the hospital. It is expected that the new building will be completed within a year.—Utica Globe.

In the Desert...

A Story Illustrating the Horrors of War

By H. B. WELSH....

"He is living yet, thank God!" said the colonel. And he thought of his sister, who, after much pleading and resolution, had, along with Dr. Margaret Crawford, come as far as Berber. "We must send him back to Berber," said the colonel. "We are on the march almost incessantly now, and he cannot live unless he is properly attended to. We shall send him there at once."

And so, under an escort of Arab "boys," Cleland was taken by river and rail to Berber, the "Queen of the Soudan."

Adrienne and Margaret were there, the latter attending to a few sick soldiers who had been left in the hospital. The time was not up for her entering upon her duties, and she felt that she could not leave the Soudan until she learned whether Paul was living or dead.

Adrienne had told her all Rayburn's dying confession, and now, when probably it was too late, Margaret recognized the fact that the barrier she had thought insurmountable was no barrier after all.

As Margaret was stooping over a sick man one day, one of the native attendants came to tell her Mrs. Breynton wished to see her. Margaret went to the door, and at first sight of Adrienne's face she grew pale as death, and leant for support against the doorway.

"Tell me—you have heard that he is dead?" she gasped, rather than spoke.

"No, my dear." Adrienne passed her brave, unshrinking hand round the woman Paul loved and supported her with it.

"He has been found, he is coming here; but he is ill, unconscious, Margaret. Still, God may be merciful, and we shall pray until He must hear us, Margaret."

Margaret lifted her pale face, glowing with a strange joy, and clasped her hands.

"I shall nurse him, at least," she whispered. "Oh, thank God!"

* * * * *

And she did, until the ebbing life began—very slowly, but quite perceptibly—to flow again.

It was one evening—ah, should Margaret ever forget it as long as she lived?—while she sat beside him on her camp-stool, looking through the open window at the brilliant moonlight making a pool of light for itself on the brown sand of the desert, that Cleland, quite suddenly and quietly, is if he were awakening from sleep, opened his eyes and looked at her.

"Margaret, is that you? I dreamt you were there. My darling, are we both dead, and is this my first awakening on the other side?"

"No, no, Paul! You are still on earth, thank God, and I am here beside you, never more to leave you now, if you wish it so, dear, for the barrier is gone for ever."

A strange flash came into the sick man's eyes, but for a moment he was silent.

At last he spoke.

"I do not know if I am still dreaming or if I have heard aright. Margaret, say it again, and I shall be satisfied. You are mine for ever now?"

"For ever, Paul, if you will have me," she answered, with a sob in her throat.

He drew her face to his, and then their lips met in one long, long kiss—such a kiss as surely those who have loved each other on earth may give when they meet for the first time "beyond the bourne of time and space."

Presently Adrienne came in. She approached the bedside, and as she came near she paused, a strange expression on her lips and in her eyes; for she saw then that happiness had come to Paul and Margaret at last.

Paul saw her and smiled, holding out his weak, thin hand.

"You, too, my friend! Surely I am recompensed for all I have suffered by knowing that I have the friendship of one noble woman and the love of another. Yes, it is true, Mrs. Breynton. Margaret and I are quite happy, and we owe our happiness she has told me, to a large extent to you."

"And bless you both," said Adrienne. She held his hand in her own, and then, turning to Margaret, kissed her with brave unquivering lips.

(The End.)

HER SISTER'S SECRET

I had vowed never to enter the Dormers' house again; but when they sent word that Maisie was dying I went there as fast as a hansom would carry me. We had always been such friends—the child and I. But she was not a child now, at seventeen.

"We never quarreled," she said, holding my hand tightly. "There is not much time to quarrel now. You won't will you, Fred?" I shook my head. A lump in my throat kept me from speaking. "Promise me before I tell you—something."

"My poor little Maisie!" I cried brokenly. "I promise." She had been a pet of mine from the days when she was a toddling baby and I a big, awkward boy.

"It is about you and Lucy—when you quarreled." She stopped abruptly.

"Yes?" Lucy was her elder sister. We had been engaged.

"You wrote her an explanation—a satisfactory explanation."

"Apparently she did not think so. She never answered the letter that I gave you to deliver."

"I—I kept it." She buried her face in the pillow. I was too astonished for words, but I kept stroking her hair. "I read it first. Then I burned it."

"If you get well, May," I said, "and grow up I shall like you better than everybody." She laughed faintly. "I believe I always did." I wiped her eyes.

"I sha'n't," she said. "So—you will like her again now, won't you?" I hesitated. My affection for Lucy died a natural death. It had never been very deep; neither, I fancied, had hers for me.

I frowned. "You have not told her—about the letter?" She shook her head.

"But you will be good to her? You will make it up, won't you? You need not tell her about me—only say that you are sorry and want to be friends. Then you can be engaged again; and—and—some day——" Her lips quivered.

"Marry her?" She nodded. "But if I no longer care for her? If I know that I can never love her as I could love? My dear little playfellow and friend, I am not half so fond of Lucy as I am of you."

"Ah!" she looked at me with big, deep eyes. "I am only a child, dear Fred." The wistful affection in the child's face touched me to the heart, and I kissed her frail hands.

Lucy met me at the bottom of the stairs.

"Maisie told me that she never gave you the letter, Lucy; that all the blame was hers."

"She told you—that—just to—screen me," she said, brokenly.

"Do not trouble about it any more," I do not care for you after all."

There was nothing more to say. So I turned to go; but there was a knock at the front door and I heard some one say, "The doctor." So I waited to hear what he pronounced.

After a few minutes he came down the stairs talking to Mrs. Dormer.

"It is a natural sleep," he said. "The pulse is steadier and the temperature more normal. The odds are still against her, but there is hope."

The tears came to my eyes at last, and Lucy came and put her hand on my shoulder.

"You can win her back to life, Fred," she said, "our little girl. Stay till she wakes." I had already resolved to stay.

I went upstairs and sat with my elbow on her bed and my face on my hand, watching my little favorite. Presently her mother came and knelt beside me.

"Lucy has told me all, Fred," she whispered. "You—you will not tell the others?"

"I will not," I promised.

When my little girl awoke she was not looking toward me.

"Better dear?" asked her mother.

"Why yes," she laughed feebly. "It must be Fred. Do you know, I believe he would make me grow well if he were often here with me."

"He will be, little sweetheart," I said softly. She turned to me with a happy cry, and I whispered in her ear what I knew, and other things that were only for her and me. They were the things that won her back to life, she says, when we talk of such matters.—Chicago American.

PETROLEUM

As an Exterminator of Mosquitoes and Malaria.

Now that the greater part of the medical profession has agreed on the high probability, if not the practical certainty, that the germs of malaria cannot find their way into the human system without the aid of one of the numerous families of mosquitoes, the Anopheles, devices for warding off the attacks of the always hated insects have become matters of the deepest interest. Even if, as was formerly supposed, the creatures were mere summer nuisances, relentless destroyers of comfort and temper, means of escaping from their persistent attentions would be hailed with the sincerest joy in most parts of the world, but since they have been accused and almost convicted of being the sole carriers of the infection to which no small fraction of the sum total of human illness and death is due, the announcement that their extermination over considerable areas is neither expensive nor difficult can hardly fail to receive eager attention. Just this announcement is made by two Italian doctors who have been conducting prolonged experiments in the town of Sassari. Their work consisted in ascertaining the different places in and around the town—drains, cisterns, puddles and the like—where mosquitoes passed through the larval stage, and then, by the use of petroleum, applied twice a month, rendering such of these places as could not be abolished uninhabitable for the insects. The products of overlooked breeding places were next destroyed—in shops with chlorine and in dwelling houses with any of the well known cullicides. From the highly successful results attained it was concluded that the town was not in exceptionally unfavorable surroundings, not in the midst of extensive swamps, that is, can always be freed from mosquitoes. The estimated cost for town of 50,000 inhabitants is from $200 to $300 a year, including the wages of the staff needed to carry out the measures prescribed.—New York Times.

BLOW-LINE FISHING.

Offers Advantages Not Possessed by "Invisible" Line Methods.

"Some fishermen dislike a heavy line," says an old fisherman, "believing that it is more easily seen, and consequently alarming to the fish. I am convinced that this is an erroneous impression, however, as if a proper length of leader be used and the fly correctly handled it is impossible for the fish to see the line, not to mention the enormous advantage in accuracy and distance obtainable in the cast, particularly in a wind. A line which has never to my knowledge been used locally is known as the blow line. I should have tried it long since for lake fishing were it not for the difficulty in obtaining one and my failing to remember this fact until too late each year. The line is constructed of very loosely woven silk, and is very light and porous. The fisherman proceeds to that shore of the lake from which the wind blows, armed with a very long, stiff pole (not rod), some live grasshoppers, willow or May flies and a small hook attached to a long gossamer leader. The bait is impaled on the hook and the pole given a quick jerk upward, throwing the line directly overhead, where the wind catches it and blows line, bait and all well out into the lake, where the bait struggles in an enticing manner. I believe the method to be a deadly one, and hope to try it some day, if my memory improves."

Chicken Lawsuit in Kansas.

As a result of a quarrel over some chickens which refused to lay eggs, two residents of Coffeyville, Kan., have become involved in a remarkable lawsuit. Janson Brophy, the plaintiff, avers that his neighbor, Needham Weeks, presented him ten hens and two roosters in February last and assured him that the hens would lay upward of sixty eggs a week. Brophy fed and cared for the chickens for ten weeks, "devoting most of his time to them, to the detriment of other interests," but the hens failed to lay any eggs. The plaintiff alleges that he was unlawfully deceived by the defendant and seeks to recover $100 damages for his wasted labor and for his expenditures for chicken feed.

Magnet Removes a Drill.

In boring a deep well in Germany the hardened end of a steel drill broke off at a depth of 1,000 feet. As it was clearly impossible to drill out the hard steel, it was necessary either to remove it or abandon the boring. It was removed in a highly ingenious way. A soft iron bar, five feet long and two and one-half inches in diameter, was wrapped with a single layer of India rubber covered wire, thus making it an electromagnet. The bar, with wire leading to it, was lowered into the hole and current from a small dynamo turned on. This magnetized the bar which was then carefully drawn up the surface, bringing the steel drill [illegible]

HIS BRIEF HISTORY.

Full of the enthusiasm of youth he started out to see the world.

Boil Milk and Water.

Milk is an admirable food, containing all the elements of nutrition in a form capable of ready assimilation. Contrary to the universal opinion, however, milk is not always well adapted to the use of the sick. A very active condition of the digestive organs is required for the proper conversion of milk, and the digestive fluids of the sick do not come up to this standard. Moreover, the facility with which milk absorbs gases and develops poisonous ptomaines must be borne in mind. It is in this way a ready source of infection, even when drawn from a healthy cow, and there is little doubt that much of the milk in use is not obtained always from healthy animals. Heat is the most satisfactory of all sterilizers, and when milk is boiled it is probably safe. The boiling also renders it more digestible. The first action of gastric juice upon raw milk is similar to that produced by heat, but it requires a very active solvent. Water is also a familiar source of disease, and all that is used for [illegible]

Peninsular Ranges.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week Gruetzmacher Bros. have kept open house at their store, and have fed the hungry, supplied the thirsty, with most deliscious coffee, without money and without price. The reason for all this generosity, was but to give a practical demonstration of the excellent qualities of the Peniusular Steel Ranges. That there is a great difference in stoves, we all know. That there may be some nearly as good they will allow. A representative of the company, Wr. D. F. Shannon, was present, and took the pains to explain in detail, why the Peninsular ranges were "much the best." It combines all the newest essential features of range construction. One of the principle good points is in the saving of fuel. They are so constructed that every pound of coal used gives results. The system of ventilation keeps the oven pure and dry, while the asbestos covered oven top equalizes heat and prevents burning on top. Under the oven is a cemented flue bottom which precludes chilling and quickens the baking. The reservoir is a big enameled tank which is so placed that you have the assurance of plenty of warm water. The oven is large and is made of two sheets of steel with asbestos between and cannot warp or crack. There are many features that deserve special mention, but to comment on them all, would require more space than we can give. We have a motive in thus speaking of the enterprise of this firm. and that is to utter a note of warning, There has never been a time when the confidence men have not bad a desire to swindle the farmer. There are now in this vicinity, a gang of men, peddling a so-called steel range. Steps have been taken to warn the people, against the method of thes fakirs and if you put your trust in them in preference to dealing with a reliable merchant, do not blame anyone but yourself if you are talked into paying or giving your note for a worthless article. There are several plans used by them but none are to be trusted. Here is one: A smooth individual come along and leaves a stove and asks you to give a receipt for the stove. Receipt turns out to be a note, which the farmer pays. Here are a few safe rules to follow to be safe. Dont trade with a total stranger. Don't sign any paper until you have tried the range for thirty days. Don't let him tap your old stove with a hammer to show you how frail it is. Remember that all stoves will need repairs, and the post office address of the peddler is liable to change without notice. Consult your lawyer before signing any paper offered for your signature by a peddler. It will be cheaper than consulting him after you have signed.

Your home dealer is a responsible man, can sell you a better range at a lower price, can always be found to make his guarantee good, can furnish you repairs at any time, and in short is the proper person now as he always has been from whom to purchase a range. Gruetzmacher Bros. have been in business in Klemme for many years and are reliable. If you have not seen their line of stoves it will pay you to call on them.

LANDSLIDE TO BRYAN.

REPUBLICANS FLOCKING TO THE DEMOCRATIC STANDARD.

Wellington, Egan, Davis, Monett, Schurz, Olney, Wilson and Hundreds of Others of Like Prominence Cannot Endorse Imperialism.

Not a day passes that the press is not called upon to record the fact that from a dozen to a score of prominent men who voted for McKinley in 1896 have announced their intention of voting for Bryan and Stevenson this year. While there are among these many gold Democrats who voted the Republican ticket four years ago, and who are returning to their former allegiance, there are still hundreds of lifelong Republicans who have consistently supported the Republican ticket, ever since they reached their majority, but who now find it impossible to accept the Republican platform adopted at Philadelphia. The list includes business and professional men, bankers, educators, historians, jurists and the like, and in itself presents a forcible argument in favor of the Kansas City platform and the ticket nominated at the Kansas City convention.

The reason given for their conversion by these recent additions to the Democratic ranks are many. The gold Democrats, who left the party four years ago because of its attitude on the money question, declare that this issue is not the paramount one in this campaign; that the questions of imperialism, militarism and trusts are of immensely more consequence to the country, and upon these questions they cannot support the Republican party.

Why They Support Bryan.

The many voters of foreign birth who are leaving the Republican party give as their reason for doing so that they are opposed to its policy of imperialism. Many of them, also, differ with the present administration in regard to its colonial policy, and believe that the constitution is being ignored in the conduct of the administration towards Cuba and Porto Rico.

Still others give as their reason for coming over to Mr. Bryan that they believe, in a crisis, the country would be safer in his hands than in the hands of the men who dictate President McKinley's course of action. In view of the continuance of the war in the Philippines and the complicated condition of affairs in China, they believe that there is grave danger of a crisis to successfully carry this country through which will require a clear head and mature judgment, such as Mr. Bryan possesses.

Ex-Secretary of State Olney has written a letter declaring himself for Mr. Bryan and advising all patriotic citizens to support the Democratic candidate. Mr. Olney has always been an expansionist but has not confused the Jeffersonian article with imperialism. His announcement came as a bomb shell into the Republican camp.

Great Names in the Van.

At the head of the list of converts to Democracy since the Kansas City convention stand such names as Webster Davis, late assistant secretary of the interior under Mr. McKinley; G. L. Wellington, senator from Maryland; Patrick Egan of New York, who was minister to Chile under President Harrison; Thomas Wentworth Higginson of Boston, soldier, historain and litterateur; and a score of others equally as prominent. The Republicans, in their desperation, are announcing conversion after conversion to McKinleyism, but they are unable to present a list containing such a formidable array of names of national reputation as the above.

Webster Davis, who resigned his position as assistant secretary of the interior and cast his lot with the Democrats, did so because he had visited South Africa and had become convinced that the attitude of the present administration towards the struggling Boers was un-American and unjust. He had been making speeches for the Democratic ticket ever since he announced his conversion at the Kansas City convention, and his work has been the means of changing hundreds of votes from McKinley to Bryan.

Former Lieutenant Governor Jones of New York, who was an enthusiastic supporter of Mr. McKinley in 1896, says in announcing his change of sentiment: "I believe the country would be safer, in the event of any possible crisis, in the hands of Mr. Bryan, a man of unswerving firmness, integrity and ability, than under the control of Mr. McKinley."

Frank Monnett, who, as the Republican attorney general of Ohio, enforced the law against trusts so diligently that they sought to bribe him with half a million dollars. He is out for Bryan now.

Wells, Fargo & Co.'s President.

John J. Valentine, president of the Wells, Fargo & Co. Express, says: "Believing that between the claims of freemen, that all men are entitled to equal political rights, and the dogma of tyranny, that might makes right, there is no middle ground, I favor the endorsement of Bryan and Stevenson and the straight support of the Democratic nominees."

Edward Osgood Brown, a prominent Chicago attorney, says: "I believe Bryan honest, able and right on the only real issue of the campaign. I support him because I think opposition to imperialism my first political duty."

Sigmund Zeisler, a prominent attorney of Chicago, says: "McKinley's arrogation of unconstitutional powers, his yielding to sinister influences, his constant wabbling, his hypocritical cant, filled me with gradually increasing disgust. Bryan's courageous consistency, his manifest sincerity, his brilliant defense of the principles of self-government have filled me with increasing admiration and confidence in his statesmanship."

William Birney, son of the old liberty party's dead leader, has declared that he will support Bryan in the present campaign.

Great New York Publicists.

Bourke Cockran of New York, famous as lawyer and orator, who has been classed as a Republican ever since he made speeches for General B. F. Tracy, the regular Republican candidate for mayor of New York City in 1897.

General Robert Avery of New York, a life-long Republican, who says: "My devotion to the principles of the Republican party taught by Lincoln, Seward, Greeley, Summer, Chase and others compels me to vote for Mr. Bryan."

P. Tecumseh Sherman of New York, son of the late General W. T. Sherman, who has served a term in the board of alderman as a Republican. He cannot longer affiliate with a party that condones the Alger and other army scandals.

Henry F. Keenan, a well known author, who wrote "The Money Makers."

L. W. Habercorn, who was chief of the Republican national committee's German bureau in the campaign of 1896, leaves his party on the issue of imperialism.

It would require several pages of this paper to publish the names of all prominent Republicans in all parts of the country who are now working for the success of Bryan.

ENEMY OF LABOR.

Theodore Roosevelt now pleads for the vote of the laboring man. On Labor Day he stood upon the same platform from which Mr. Bryan spoke and said nice things to the "horny-handed sons of toil." Mr. Bryan voiced the laboring man's complaint against the Republican doctrine of "Government by Injunction," and in a roundabout way "Teddy" voiced the same sentiments. Of course, Roosevelt is in sympathy with the laboring man. He is opposed to "Government by Injunction"—at least he says he is; he is a candidate for vice-president now, you know. There is, however, food for thought in an article published in the "Review of Reviews" for September, 1896, and written by Theodore Roosevelt, at that time not a candidate for vice-president. In that article, page 295, Mr. Roosevelt said:

"The men who object to what they style 'Government by Injunction' are, as regards the essential principles of government, in hearty sympathy with their remote skin-clad ancestors who lived in caves, fought one another with stone-headed axes, and ate the mammoth and woolly rhinoceros.

"They are interesting as representing a geological survival, but they are dangerous whenever there is the least chance of their making the principles of this ages-buried past living factors in present life.

"They are not in sympathy with men of good minds and sound civic morality."

A CANDID CONVERT.

The administration press has loudly proclaimed the "conversion" of Mr. Chavannes, editor of the Des Moines Globe, a Republican who voted for Mr. Bryan on the money question in 1896. Mr. Chavannes has returned to the fold, however; has been elected a Republican precinct chairman, and his paper advocates the election of McKinley and Roosevelt this year. In an interview with the Omaha World-Herald, Mr. Chavannes gives the following candid reasons for supporting McKinley this year:

"I am a Republican and I do not have any faith in the Democratic party. I am giving the Republican national ticket my support now for the reason that I believe the election of McKinley means imperialism. By imperialism I mean just what the Democrats mean when they call Republicans imperialists."

He is supporting McKinley because he believes in imperialism; wants imperialism; and knows what ticket to support in order to get imperialism. A candidate who is getting converts because of their avowed belief in imperialism can hardly assert hereafter that imperialism is a "bugaboo."

We must laugh before we are happy, for fear we die before we laugh at all. —De la Bryuere.

THE FARMERS AND THE WIRE TRUST.

The figures in the following article apply to Indiana as far as acreage and area is concerned. The moral of the article, however, will be readily seen by the farmer, wherever he may be found.

In the onward march of events it so happens that farmers prefer wire to wood for fencing their land. In the state of Indiana there are in round numbers say 200,000 farms, and it is estimated that the average farm contains 80 acres and that about one-sixth of these farms, say 33,000, are fenced with wire. There are numerous reasons urged by farmers for preferring wire to wood for fencing. The forests of Indiana in a large measure have disappeared, and timber suitable for rails has become scarce and costly and is too valuable for fencing; it is worth more to the farmers for lumber than it is for fencing material; besides wire, even if wood were plentiful, is more durable than wood. As a result wire has become universally popular for fencing. This fact accounts for the existence of the wire trust, an aggregation of capital of about $100,000,000, which has control of about 20 corporations engaged in the manufacture of wire suitable for fencing, exclusive of barbed wire, numbered as to size 9, 12, 13 and 16.

For the purpose of easy calculation to show to what extent the wire trust is a beneficiary of the Dingley protective tariff, it is worth while to approximate the amount of wire required to fence a farm of 80 acres, and the cost prior and subject to the operations of the trust. The outside fencing of an 80 acre farm would require 640 rods of fence, and it is estimated by those who know that the inside fencing equal to four lines across the farm would require as much more—total 1,280 rods.

Wire fence of a superior quality, four feet high, is manufactured, containing 10 pounds of wire to the rod; hence, 1,280 rods of fence would require 12,800 pounds of wire. Before the trust advanced prices this wire was sold to manufacturers of fencing at $1.65 per 100 pounds, costing $211.20 to properly fence an eighty acre farm

The trust, taking advantage of the necessities of farmers, advanced the price of wire to $3.95 per 100 pounds—an advance of $2.30 per 100 pounds. As a result, manufacturers of wire fence, instead of being able to supply the required wire for an 80 acre farm for $211.20, are required to advance the price to $594.60—a difference of $293.40, which the farmer has to pay or go without wire fencing.

Going back to the estimate that one-sixth of the farms of Indiana—33,000, the average being 80 acres—are under wire fence, each requiring 12,800 pounds of wire fencing—it is seen that up to date 424,400,000 pounds of wire have been required to meet the demands of the Indiana farmers. If this wire had been sold at $1.65 per 100 pounds, it would have cost the Indiana farmers $7,002,800. If, however, the wire had cost $3.95 per 100 pounds, the place to which the trust has forced prices, then, in that case, the Indiana farmers would have paid $16,663,800—a difference of $9,661,000.

What is in store for Indiana farmers provided the wire trust continues its plundering policy? There are, according to the estimate made, 166,000 80 acre farms in Indiana, which under favorable conditions would have wire fences.

It has been shown that to fully fence an 80 acre farm 12,800 pounds of wire are required; hence to fence 166,000 such farms would require 2,125,800,000 pounds of wire. If this wire could be furnished at $1.65 per 100 pounds, which was the price prior to the advance made by the trust, it would cost the farmers of Indiana the sum of $35,075,700, but under the advance made by the trust to $3.95 per 100 pounds, the cost would be $83,969,100—an increase of $58,893,400.

The basis of the caluculations is approximately correct and demonstrates the purpose of the trust to rob the farmers of Indiana, who choose to substitute wire for wood in fencing their farms. The result has been, as has been stated, to paralyze the wire fencing industry. Farmers of Indiana have decided that they will not pay the trust its robber prices, and are discussing the enormous inuity of the Republican tariff which fosters such plundering corporations as the wire trust. They say that a law which enables a combination of capital to perpetrate such colossal robberies of the farmers as the wire trust has inflicted upon them ought to be abolished, and since this cannot be accomplished while the Republican party is in power, a change in party control of the government has become an absolute necessity.

NAVY MANEUVERS BEGIN.

Great Interest Taken in Work of Submarine Boat, the Holland.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 25.—The navy maneuvers began this morning, when the red squadron left the harbor to commence the close blockade of Narragansett bay.

Capt. Mason, commandant of the torpedo station, said last night that the torpedo flotilla is the largest that ever acted together in the American service.

As there is a chance of ships being ordered away at any time, the maneuvers, which were intended to cover a week, will be finished in three days.

It was learned last night that the blockaders have the greatest fear of the submarine boat Holland. They think they can run the forts, and they believe they can pick up with their very powerful searchlights the surface torpedo boats before they get into torpedoing distance, but they have no scheme of preventing the Holland getting underneath and "destroying" the war vessels. They hope, it is stated, to devise some method of detecting her wave or some other indication of her presence that may appear upon the surface of the water.

The Holland will act independently of the rest of the torpedo flotilla.

CHARGE THEFT OF GOLD ORE.

Obnoxious Order to Search Workmen Closes Colorado Mine.

Victor, Colo., Sept. 25.—As a result of an obnoxious order, designed by the management to stop the theft of valuable ore, Stratton's Independence gold mine has been closed down. The miners announce that they will not go back while the order remains in force, and the superintendent says the order will not be revoked under any circumstances.

Six other large companies have issued a similar order, and signed an agreement with the Independence company to enforce it. The order provides that all workmen must change their clothes, both in going on and off the shift, and pass nude before watchmen from one dressing room to another. The superintendent of Stratton's Independence says the company has lost $5,000 to $15,000 per month through the peculations of workmen.

Guards Take Komatipoort.

London, Sept. 26.—Lord Roberts reports from Pretoria that the guards, under Pole-Carew, occupied Komatipoort. The bridge was found intact. Much rolling stock, locomotives and truckloads of "long tom" ammunition were captured. Only a few rifle shots were fired. Paget has captured Erasmus' came, 3,000 cattle, 8,000 sheep and twenty-three prisoners. Methuen has also made another big haul of stock. Lord Roberts also reports that the few Boer troops remaining in the eastern Transvaal are completely "out of hand," and says they are mostly burghers, the foreign mercenaries having gone to Lorenzo Marques, owing to the Portuguese government promising to maintain them while there and give them passage to their respective countries.

Mining Coal in Spain.

Madrid, Sept. 26.—The advance in the price of coal has given fresh impetus to the Spanish mines, that were considerably developed during the war with America. The output of coal from 1899 was 2,672,000 tons of lignite and 70,000 tons of coke. The total production for the first eight months of 1900 shows an increase of 30 per cent. The mines are worked entirely by native capital, and the lack of proper means of transportation alone hinders the development of the vast coal beds of the nine provinces.

Detectives Catch a Clerk.

Chicago, Sept. 26.—Alexander Moffat, 5541 Throop street, an order clerk for the International Packing Company, was arrested in Hebron, Ind., by detectives of the Mooney & Boland agency for the alleged embezzlement of $1,500 from his employers. Moffat, who left Chicago about ten days ago, is said to have robbed systematically the packing company for some time by intercepting C. O. D. orders and pocketing the proceeds.

WHAT A MOGUL CAN DO.

That was a remarkable demonstration of what a Mogul can do, that occurred on the New York Central the other day, when engine No. 948, one of the new Moguls, hauled out train No. 11, the Southwestern Limited, made up of two mail cars, five passenger coaches and nine Wagner cars, sixteen cars in all. The total weight of the train was 1,832,000 pounds, or 916 tons, and the length of the train, including the engine, was 1,212 feet, or nearly a quarter of a mile. This engine made the running time of the train between New York and Albany, 143 miles, in three hours and fifteen minutes.

There is no railroad in the world which has a better roadbed, more skillful engineers, or better equipment, backed by loyal men always alert for the safety of their passengers, than the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad. What road can match its corps of men, from President Callaway down the long line of employees, to the humble and faithful trackmen who watch their sections of rails through the long hours of the night and day, in order to safeguard the lives of the travelers on trains whirling by their humble shanties, many of which nestle closely to the rails under their guardianship.—Editorial from the Albany Times-Union.

FOR HOMESEEKERS.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway will sell regular Homeseekers' Excursion tickets to all points in South Dakota, at one fare plus $2 for the round trip, on September 18 and October 2, 1900. This will enable parties to visit the Corn Belt Exposition to be held in Mitchell, S. D., September 26 to October 4, 1900, inclusive. This exposition is held to demonstrate the great agricultural resources, wealth and possibilities of this thriving state. The exposition is held in a gorgeously decorated corn palace which for beauty can hardly be excelled anywhere by a building of a temporary nature. There are thousands of acres of cheap lands left in South Dakota that will, under the present conditions in that state, rapidly increase in price, and the holding of this corn palace with its many attractions, that both amuse and instruct, should be an opportunity that all land and investment seekers should embrace.

For further information apply to any ticket agent of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway, or address Geo. H. Heafford, General Passenger Agent, Chicago.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, September 26, 1900.

Cards of instruction for the coming election are being sent out to the county auditors from the office of the secretary of state. These cards are prepared by the attorney general, and are modified from the usual instructions, so as to conform to the changes in the election laws made by the Twenty-eighth general assembly. Attention is called to the fact that for voting upon a constitutional amendment or other public measure, a separate ballot of yellow colored paper is used. The yellow ballot this year contains two propositions. One is, "Shall there be a convention to revise the constitution and amend the same?" The other is a proposition to amend the constitution so as to provide for biennal elections. The instructions are varied to accord with the measure of the last general assembly in regard to the necessary marking of a cross in a square below a marked circle which does not affect the validity of the vote.

The annual report from the hospital at Independence for the year ending June 30 has been submitted to the board of control. It shows that June 30, 1899, there were 607 male inmates, and 443 females, or a total of 1,050. There were in the year 218 men discharged, and 190 women, while 215 men and 182 women were admitted. This leaves as the population of the institution June 30, 1900, 604 men and 435 women, or 1,039 as being the total inmates.

The articles of incorporation of the Southwestern Railway Company have been received at the secretary of state's office. The articles provide for the organization of a railway company and construction of a line from Pella to Howell, a distance of about eighty miles. The line will connect the Wabash at Pella and the Keokuk and Des Moines division of the Rock Island at Howell. The company is to be capitalized at $100,000.

The state horticultural society is being furnished with a collection of the flora of the state. The plants are being donated by Professor Pammel of the botanical department of the state agricultural college at Ames, and mounted by him, the state having to pay for the paper and materials used in mounting only. Over 200 specimens have already reached the office of Secretary Wesley Green. Heretofore the state has had no collection of the state flora. Professor Pammell has also provided a number of specimens showing fungus diseases of fruits. Another collection that is being made up in this department is that of the fruits of Iowa preserved in acids.

E. S. Ellsworth of Iowa Falls, who is the president of the proposed Des Moines, Iowa Falls & Nortnern railroad, was in the city meeting with some of the promoters of the Duluth & New Orleans road relative to the retirement from the field of the latter company. "The Des Moines & Iowa Falls road is a certainty at any time that we are confident that the other road has been given up," said Mr. Ellsworth. "It would be impossible to do anything with the bonds of our road while the other road was being planned and work was being done on its construction. No eastern bond house would take the bonds with the possibility of any trouble arising. The consequence is that we have lost all the best of this year, while the Duluth & New Orleans company has been going ahead and spending money continually. I understand that about $1,000 per month has been expended on the work that has been done. If they are now ready to give up the road we will go right ahead with ours, and will have some of the work done before winter stops us. A corps of engineers was kept in the field all last year, but nothing has been done this year and nothing will be done unless we are definitely assured that the other road is out of the way."

Representatives of two voting machine companies are in Des Moines trying to induce the county board of supervisors to adopt their respective machines for use in this county. They are the Climax company, represented by E. E. Miller of Franklin Grove, Ill., and the Standard company, represented by Mr. Gillespie of Atlantic. The Climax people feel confident of selling their machine, if the board decides to purchase machines for the county. The voting machine commission appointed by Governor Shaw last winter inspected the Climax at Cedar Rapids about a week ago, and declared that it fulfilled the requirements of the statute. The Standard has not been passed on, but it will probably be submitted to the commission shortly.

Eight Killed and Many Missing in a Minnesota Town.

Faribault, Minn., Sept. 25.—Meager details have just reached here of a terrible catastrophe which visited the village of Morristown, ten miles west of here. The village was struck by a cyclone, and a barn was raised in the air and dropped directly on top of Paul Gatze's saloon, where sixteen people took refuge from the storm. The saloon collapsed, and all occupants were buried in the debris. At present it is said that seven dead bodies and four injured persons have been taken from the ruins.

Society is like a masked ball where nobody unmasks.

THE FIRST BLOOD SHED.

Posse Fires Into Crowd of Miners With Terrible Results.

Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—The tragedy that has been looked for since the coal workers' strike was inaugurated came suddenly and unexpectedly at Shenandoah yesterday. A posse hurriedly gathered together by Sheriff Toole of Schuylkill county to meet an emergency was forced to fire on a mob that was threatening workmen on their way home under escort. A man and a little girl were instantly killed and seven others fell more or less seriously wounded. Sheriff Toole lost no time in calling on the commander of the national guard of Pennsylvania to send troops to aid him in keeping the peace. After consultation the state authorities at Harrisburg decided at midnight to send troops to the turbulent region.

Shenandoah's trouble was precipitated by the closing of six collieries there yesterday morning through the efforts of strike leaders. More will close today as a voluntary act, it is said, on the part of the Reading company. This is done at the request of Sheriff Toole, who hopes in this manner to avoid further rioting. The outlook at midnight, however, is dubious; the foreigners affected by yesterday's happenings are in an ugly mood.

Still Fewer Mines in Operation.

Shenandoah, Sept. 25.—The strike in this region was more extensive today than at any time since it was inaugurated. Not a colliery in the vicinity of the city resumed operation, owing to the failure of the employes to report for duty. Messages from various towns in the region announce that every mine from Mahonoy City to Ashland, including the latter place, was closed. It is estimated that fully 15,000 men are now out and the indications point to a continuance of the tie up. Strikers attacked the Preston colliery number three at Girardville near here, and General Gobin has been asked for troops. Troops have been ordered to Preston colliery, and disturbances are expected at Cambridge colliery, operated by the Cambridge Coal company, south of here. Of the hundred and forty men employed at the mine, a hundred and thirty went to work yesterday and every man was said to be armed.

Pottsville, Pa., Sept. 25.—Every operation in the Mahonoy Valley, save the Lawrence colliery at Mahonoy plane, is shut down completely. Only the pump and fan runners and bosses are at work. At the Gilberton mine the workers resolved to quit work. It was contended at a meeting that since the militia have been brought into the region it was their duty to go out, because the appearance of an armed force is a reflection upon those who have been peaceable and law abiding. The statement was made that the men were willing to work if the troops were recalled. At the Lawrence colliery the workmen repulsed a body of strikers who came to coerce them.

ENGLISH LEADERS SPEAK.

The queen's government should be supported by a strong parliamentary majority as the only means of convincing the inhabitants of the conquered South Africa territories that there is no hope of diverting the government from their policy of resistance or agitation.—Premier Salisbury.

The government's conduct of the South African war has exposed England to humiliation unparalleled since the American war.—Lord Rosebery.

In a single year the work of a generation in uniting the Dutch and English in South Africa has been undone, and not even in Ireland has the race problem been more miserably mishandled.—John Morley.

POLITICAL EXIGENCIES.

London Papers Claim Politics Figured in American Reply.

London, Sept. 25.—The newspapers which comment on the American reply to the German note attribute it to "political exigencies." The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"It is a shock to find the government at Washington taking the position on the question that the punishment of the Chinese who are responsible for outrage, torture and murder of American citizens should be left to the initiative of the murderers themselves. It is impossible to doubt that the responsible authors are imperial authorities."

The Globe says:

"The refusal must have mischievous effect at Peking. Much, however, as President McKinley's attitude is to be deplored it can have no effect on the British government, which will insist on the punishment of the proved murderers, which shall be an indispensable condition precedent to negotiations."

STANDS BY UNITED STATES

England Agrees With America on German Proposition.

London, Sept. 26.—Lord Salisbury has replied to the German note in terms identical with those of the United States.

According to a dispatch received here from Berlin, the Russian and Japanese replies to Germany's proposal assert that Russia "assents in principle," while Japan's answer is an unemphatic approval.'

Berlin, Sept. 26.—The foreign officials here inform the Associated Press that Russia and Japan have formally answered the German note, "particularly emphasizing their agreement to the proposition to have the ministers designate the guilty."

WOMAN'S KIDNEY TROUBLES

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is Especially Successful in Curing this Fatal Woman's Disease.

Of all the diseases known with which the female organism is afflicted, kidney disease is the most fatal. In fact, unless early and correct treatment is applied, the weary patient seldom survives.

Being fully aware of this, Mrs. Pinkham, early in her career, gave exhaustive study to the subject, and in producing her great remedy for woman's ills—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—was careful to see that it contained the correct combination of herbs which was sure to control that fatal disease, woman's kidney troubles. The Vegetable Compound acts in harmony with the laws that govern the entire female system, and while there are many so called remedies for kidney troubles, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the only one especially prepared for women.

The following letters will show how marvellously successful it is:

Aug. 6, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am failing very fast,—since January have lost thirty-five or forty pounds. I have a yellow, muddy complexion, feel tired, and have bearing down pains. Menses have not appeared for three months; sometimes I am troubled with a white discharge, and I also have kidney and bladder trouble. . . I have been this way for a long time, and feel so miserable I thought I would write to you, and see if you could do me any good."—MISS EDNA FREDERICK, Troy, Ohio.

Sept. 10, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound according to directions, and can say I have not felt so well for years as I do at present. Before taking your medicine a more miserable person you never saw. I could not eat or sleep, and did not care to talk with any one. I did not enjoy life at all. Now, I feel so well I cannot be grateful enough for what you have done for me. You are surely a woman's friend. Thanking you a thousand times, I remain,

Ever yours
MISS EDNA FREDERICK,
Troy, Ohio.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have taken five bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and cannot praise it enough. I had headaches, leucorrhœa, falling of the womb, and kidney trouble. I also had a pain when standing or walking, and sometimes there seemed to be balls of fire in front of me, so that I could not see for about twenty minutes. Felt as tired in the morning when I got up as if I had had no sleep for two weeks. Had fainting spells, was down-hearted, and would cry."—MRS. BERTHA OFER, Second and Clayton Sts., Chester Pa.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot find language to express the terrible suffering I have had to endure. I had female trouble, also liver, stomach, kidney, and bladder trouble. . . . I tried several doctors, also quite a number of patent medicines, and had despaired of ever getting well. At last I concluded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, thanks to your medicine, I am a well woman. I can not praise your medicine too highly for I know it will do all, and even more, than it is recommended to do I tell every suffering woman about your Vegetable Compound, and urge them to try it and see for themselves what it will do."—MRS. MARY A. HIPLE, No. Manchester, Ind.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

WHITE MAT TURNED YELLOW.

Great consternation was felt by the friends of M. A. Hogartp of Lexingtoa Ky., when they saw he was turning yellow. His skin slowly changed color, also his eyes, and he suffered terribly, His malady was Yelloy Jaundice, He was treated by the best doctors but without benefit. Then he was advised to try Electric Bitters, the wonderful Stomach and Liver remedy and he writes: "After taking two bottles I was wholly cured." A trial proves its matchless merit for all stomach, liver and kidney troubles. Only 50c. Sold by Harr.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, get a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic. Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured, says Rev. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for some days and gave him no relief, them called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said, 'no.' I went home and brought him my bottle and give him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." New Lines of the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Ry.

The prosperity of the tows on the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern railway is every where evident. The railway company regards the well being of the towns on its lines as inseperable from the well being of the Co., and considers it a pleasant and profitable duty to aid them in any proper manner. The company, as it were, becomes an interested citizen in every one of its cities and towns. The patrons all speak of the management in the highest terms. There is no cold barrier of "dignity" between its patrons and any officer of the company. This mutual sympathy and assistance accounts for much of the prosperity of its cities and towns.

The company is fully abreast with the expansion of the age, as its extension will show. The line from Worthington, Nobles county, Minnesota, has just been completed, making four bright young centers of business—Reading, Wilmont, Lismore and Kenneth. All in as rich a country as is found in the corn-belt of the northwest.

The line from Germania in a northeasterly direction throug Kossouth and Winnebago oountios, Iowa, Faribault, Freeqorn, Steele and Rice Counties Minnesota, is now under vigerous construction. The laying of steel commenced July 20th, and is intended to reach Faribault this fall. Freeborn and Steele are the richest dairy counties in the United states. Indeed the whole line runs through a remarkable rich country. New towns are being located and platted. Rake, in Winnebago county, Iowa, is now on the market. Walters, in Faribault County, Minnesota will soon be open for business. These two towns are well within the dairy districts and have a bright future These towns need men of every calling. Reach out from the overcrowdod old towns and become a pioneer in a new, growing business center, where your experience and ability will receive a commensurate reward. Carve out an estate for yourself where the raw Materials are at hand. Address Thos. H. Brown, Sioux Falls, South Dakota, Gen'l Townsite Agent New Lines B. C. R. & N Ry.

Through the months of June and July our baby was teething and took a running off of the bowels and sickness of the stomach," says O. P. M. Holliday of Deming, Ind. SCIENTIFIC JOTTINGS.

It is said that successful trials of a telephonic apparatus without wire have been had in Italy. The instruments were installed on moving trains. The details of the experiments and apparatus are meager.

One hospital in New York has adopted a camera to record minutely the action of patients, and many moving pictures have been taken, showing the movements in walking of persons afflicted with locomotor ataxia. They are produced slowly on the screen, so that physicians are enabled to study the symptoms carefully. Moving pictures have been taken in Vienna showing operations being performed by great surgeons.

Barometric readings reduced to true atmospheric pressure are now required by the weather bureau, the approximate corrections for gravity being applied to all barometric readings. This correction applies to all mercurial barometers and is nearly constant at any one station. The corrected reading is a standard measure of atmospheric pressure and can be compared to similar corrected readings made at any place in the world.

Several of the largest abandoned copper mines in eastern Maine will again be operated. The Maine copper mines were in successful operation in 1879 and showed good profits while copper was quoted at 14 cents. The mines could also be operated on a paying basis with copper at 12 cents, but the crash came when the Wisconsin mines put down the price of copper to eight cents. Now that copper is so high, it will be very profitable to mine it.

A central station for the production of acetylene gas is being tested at Tata-Tovaros, Hungary, a city of 12,000 inhabitants. Five miles of pipe covers the city and furnishes gas to 158 street lights and 250 burners in houses. The generating station is located over 600 feet from the nearest house. The gas is produced in four generators by the fall of the carbide into the water. The gas for each group, on leaving the generators, passes into a cooler and then into a purifier, and finally into two gasometers of 106 cubic feet capacity. The generating plant requires the services of only two men, and the total cost of the installation was $30,000, of which $19,000 went for the pipe system.

Fairs and Side Shows.

These Should be Run According to the Principles of Morality ond Decency or Blown Out of Existence.

What is this world coming to? We are not a pessimest, and never look at the the dark side when it is possible to look at the bright one, but there are some things on this earth that need fixing, and one of them is the human mind that craves for mental pabulum as is furnished by snake eaters, hoochie couchies, and snake charmers. The world's fair at Chicago brought over from the half civilized, semibarbaric nations amusements that that are a curse to a civilization, and a stench in the nostrils of decent people. Nearly every one has seen them and no one is better, wiser, or happier for having done so. Nearly every county fair, street fair and circus has these attractions with all their filth and obsoenity, and it must be there is a demand for them by a part of the public at least or they would die for lack of patronage. The talk that they are a necessity at these shows and fairs is no more true than it would be to say that a prize fight is a necessity. Each will draw a crowd, but is that all a fair is for. A year ago our Agricultural Association came out ahead in dollars and cents, but the record of nastiness it made, deterred many a father and mother from bringing a family under such contaminating influnces. We know this to be a fact for they have told us so personally. Is the $ feature all their is to look at in a fair? It is of prime importance that premiums should be paid, and bills settled to be sure, but is it not better to do away with a county fair entirely than to make it a cess-pool of iniquity? We say yes, and if that is the only way by which a fair can be successfully run, for Heavens sake let's sell the grounds, put the money into churches and schools and educate our people to something purer and better than gambling devices, immoral thows and inhuman snake eating galoots who ought to be put on the streets pounding rock untill they get to be decent. It is the same old thing, let some one have a concess to "eat snakes" to get a little money in the way of licence; the same argument is used to get a suloon started, and the same can be said of each of them, who is profited in the long run? Can we afford to build up a city that our farmer neighbors dread to see their boys visit on accout of its contaminating influence? Can we afford to licence shows that we are ioth to allow our children to see? It is bad to allow them to run without licence but when we give an air of lawfulness and respectability to them by giving them a licence we ourselves become a party to the low lived frauds. Some one ought to have thrown a brick clear through the snake eating inhuman wretch on the corner and another through the man who granted him a license. Then there was the circus, the low-lived annex to the side-show should have been fined $500 and the inmates put to work for the state for one year. If none but adults had been admitted it would not have been so bad but boys 10 and 16 years old were the principle audience, We are not thin skinned, and can stand about as much as the average man, but it was with a feeling of supreme disgust that we visited that emporium of obsenity when it was called to our attention, just to see the kind of a crowd that was attracted there. It was no place for a self respecting man or boy to visit, yet we can name a score of boys right here in Britt who were attracted there, and the whole thing was licensed by City of Britt. It is high time we had a law and order league and we ought in addition to have a "decency league" armed with gatling guns if necessary to clear the atmosphere of some of these obsene, training schools for hell. One of the proudest things that has been said of the Hancock Co. fair is the following from the Corwith Hustler:

"Best [illegible] grounds were free from gambling and all questionable exhibitions. The management had promised a clean fair, and the promise was kept. Now that the fair has been turned in the right direction and promises to be a proper place to visit in company with your family, we urge our people to be prepared to take exhibits next year, and go and swell the gate reciepts to such proportions that the management may never even be tempted to license anything of a questionable character again."

And that is right. If the people don't want a fair bad enough to patronize a decent one, as one citizen of Britt the editor says, then for the love of Heaven let's let the fair go. We don't want to see our city held responsible for snake eating, muscle twisting indecencies, that not only brings the Agricultural society into disrepute but our whole city as well. If we can have a fair that is decent let's have one and if not drop it and sell the buildings just as Mason City has done.—Britt Tribune.

Work has been begun in Baltimore on the silver service for Rear-Admiral Winfield Scott Schley, to be made from the silver coin captured on the Spanish cruiser Christobal Colon. The service will consist of eighteen dinner plates, one gravy boat, one ladle, four vegetable dishes, one game platter, one fish platter, one entree platter and one soup tureen. The total weight of the silver is 2,000 ounces, and the cost when completed will be between $7,000 and $9,000.

The "missing link" has again been found, this time in Java, where Dr. Dubois has unearthed certain fossil remains of such an interesting character that Professor Haeckel, the celebrated German biologist, has determined to go there himself and investigate. Dr. Dubois is firmly of opinion that the bones belong to a species intermediate between the highest ape and prehistoric man. His views have been received with favor by many scientific men, among them Professor Haeckel, who has never ceased to advocate the importance of making further excavations in the district of Java where Dr. Dubois found the remains.

The craze for Kruger coins and stamps has been so pronounced that a complete set is not now to be had in the regular market. A $1.25 piece is rated at $12.50, and what is known as an "extraordinary" crown at $50. This is because in 1892 the die makers gave the bullock-wagon shafts, instead of a pole (or disselboom.) All coins from half-sovereigns downward were so struck, and got into circulation before the error was discovered. Any one of these coins fetches more than $5. There is likely, by the way, to be a slump in the rating of Transvaal postage stamps, for a Pretoria official says that he has overprinted stamps to the value of $1,500,000.

Of course educated deaf mutes get to be pretty handy with their pencils. They have to write all their communications to speaking people, and do so very rapidly. The Rev. A. W. Mann is a deaf mute missionary and expert penman. For twenty-five years he has made missionary trips to deaf mute churches, not alone in this country, but in foreign lands. Mr. Mann writes wrong side up as well as the other way. He is often interviewed. The method is this: The reporter sits at the table opposite Mann. A pad of paper lies between them. The reporter writes a question, Mann reads it upside down, and, without moving the paper, writes the answer—also upside down.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

THREE MEN KILLED.

Disastrous Freight Wreck on the Burlington, Near Creston.

Creston, Oct. 1.—In a head-on collision between two Burlington freight trains ten miles east of Creston two trainmen and a tramp were killed and the other trainmen more or less injured, but none seriously. The dead are: Peter McAloon of Ottumwa, an engineer; Lyman Sprowl of Creston, a fireman, and Tom O'Brien of Chicago, who was a tramp. First 72 had reached Afton and had stopped. The second section rushed through the station at full speed and collided with an extra coming west. The wreck took place on a sharp curve and the men had no time to jump. McAloon was buried under a car of wheat. Fireman Sprowl was caught between the engine and tender. He leaves a wife. McAloon leaves a wife and seven children. Fifteen head of cattle were killed. The wreck was the worst that has occurred for many years on the west end division. Three cars of stock, two of corn and one of wheat were wrecked. Both engines were demolished. It is a question as to whether Engineer McAloon saw the block signal at Afton, if it was displayed and as to this there is dispute.

BUILDING A NEW ROAD

Big Force at Work on the Milwaukee Branch at Foster.

Foster, Sept. 28.—Donald Jeffrey, an extensive contractor, who has been working for some time at Delmar and Oxford Junction, has arrived here with twelve car loads of horses, scrapers, tents, etc., preparatory to commencing work on the new railroad that is to be built from Foster to Hilton, a distance of about four miles. The road is to be built by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad company. It is to run up Soap creek most of the way. No very heavy grading will be necessary, consequently they expect to finish the grading in sixty days. It is of great importance to Foster as well as the Foster Coal company, as it joins the C., M. & St. P. with the Wabash and Iowa Central.

MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE.

Frank Sigler, a Fremont County Farm Hand, Found Guilty.

Sidney, Sept. 27.—In the case of Frank Sigler, on trial for murder in the second degree, or manslaughter, the jury returned a verdict of guilty. Sigler was accused of the murder of William Schultz on the premises of J. W. Shunick a few weeks ago. The grand jury indicted him for murder in the first degree, but the state tried him for manslaughter.. The strongest ground of the defense was insanity. The limit of the sentence is eight years in the penitentiary, and it is probable that the prisoner will receive the limit.

Hedrick Woman Burned to Death.

Ottumwa, Sept. 27.—Mrs. Henry Osterfosse met a tragic death at Hedrick by being burned to death in a fire which destroyed her husband's barn. Her charred body was found later with both limbs burned off. While the family were at supper they smelled smoke and started an investigation, finally locating the trouble in the barn. They at once removed the contents, and after getting the things out missed Mrs. Osterfosse. A search was at once instituted, but without success. It was then thought perhaps the unfortunate woman had in some unexplained manner perished in the flames. After the embers had cooled the debris was examined, resulting in finding the unfortunate woman with both limbs burned off.

Supposed Work of Tramps.

Independence, Sept. 28.—Vandalism and incendiarism occurred at the high school building, supposed to be the work of tramps. Books were torn, pictures thrown down and general destruction. A fire was set in the basement and the building was partially destroyed. Loss, about $2,000, fully insured. School will be closed for six weeks.

Burglars Would Kill.

Denmark, Sept. 28.—Burglars came to the house of Thomas Taylor in this city, and, arousing Mr. and Mrs. Taylor, demanded $50 in cash. When Mr. Taylor replied that there was no money in the house, one of the men fired a shot through the window, striking Mr. Taylor in the arm, seriously but not fatally wounding him. The burglars then disappeared and no trace of them can be discovered.

Will Retain Captured Flag.

Keokuk, Sept. 28.—Crocker's Iowa brigade, which is holding a reunion here, unanimously voted down a proposal to return to the state of South Carolina the flag that Colonel J. C. Kennedy, now of the national soldiers' home at Milwaukee, captured on the capitol at Columbia. The flag will remain in the rooms of the Iowa Historical society at Iowa City.

Iowa Cattle Win.

Denison, Sept. 28.—The W. A. McHenry herd of Aberdeen-Angus cattle won a great victory against the combined forces from the east and west at the Illinois state fair, taking both aged and young herd prizes, and seven first and four second prizes. This establishes their "premiership" for the year.

Robbed of $1,000.

Keokuk, Sept. 27.—The depot agent of the Adams Express company has been robbed of a thousand-dollar package, consigned by a local bank to Selma, Iowa. The package was supposed to have been put in the safe, but was missing when the depot agent checked out.

TORNADO AT FERGUSON

Two Persons Killed and a Number of Others Injured.

Marshalltown, Sept. 27.—A tornado, small in scope but terrible in effects, swept through the village of Ferguson, nine miles south of this city, Tuesday evening, at 8:30, killing two persons outright and fatally injuring two more and less seriously hurting eleven others. The dead are George Lovelady, aged 3, Elmo Lovelady, aged 2, sons of John Lovelady, proprietor of the Hotel Hutsin. Mrs. John Lovelady, Mamie H. Oliver and Thomas Pilling are dangerously injured, the first two probably fatally. The other injured are John Lovelady, Mrs. Robert Keevan, Robert Keevan, Hazel Keevan, Jasper Rickey, Anton Hazen, James Mullan, W. H. Robinson and wife and a man named Taylor. Robinson is the agent of the C., M. & St. P., and Mullan is night operator. The Robinsons had miraculous escapes, having sleeping apartments in the depot. Huge timbers fell on them, but protected them from falling chimneys. The Hotel Hutsin, the dwelling houses of Robert Keevan and Peter Olson, the Milwaukee depot and the grain office of L. G. Beale & Co. were totally demolished, while barns, freight cars, sheds, etc., were strewn half a mile in the path of the storm.

MRS. CONGER WRITES.

Letter Received By a Sister Who lives in Chicago.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Mrs. Edwin H. Conger, wife of the United States minister in Peking, China, has written the following letter to her sister, Mrs. J. S. McConnell of this city.

"Peking, China, Aug. 16.—My Dear Ones, All: We are alive and safe. Our troops arrived the 14th. O, what a rejoicing! What a day! If you could only have seen us you could realize a little the true feeling of the heart. Heart spoke to heart.

"We have been beseiged in the British legation ever since the 20th of June and under fire day and night, At times the battles would be terrific. It would seem that they were right upon us, but they were not.

"They tried to kill us with their bullets and shell; then to burn us up; then to blow us up with their mines, and at last to starve us out. Nor is this all. They kept laying traps to get us to come out of our fortified city with promises to escort us to Tien Tsin or to go to the tsung-li-yamen and be under their protection. We did not listen to them.

"We ate horse meat and mule meat, and it was good. We ate rice, rice, rice, and it was good. I will tell you we were grateful—we knew how to be. For two days we killed dogs for the Chinese converts.

"The night of the 13th was the most terrific night of all. We were under fierce and angry firing the night through. They again opened up their cannon upon us. It seemed as though they would break through and come down upon us. The bell in the tower tolled for every man to be at his post, as a general attack was being made upon us.

"I cannot tell you how dreadful all of this has been. The almighty hand of God alone has saved us."

CONNER GETS THE PLUM.

Denison Man Named for Congress to Succeed Dolliver.

Fort Dodge, Sept. 27.—Judge J. P. Conner of Denison was nominated for congressman of the Tenth district on the 96th ballot. The total vote was 153, with 86 for Conner, whose strength was divided as follows: Calhoun 11, Crawford 11, Emmett 6, Greene 12, Humboldt 7, Kossuth 14, Pocahontas 9, Webster 8. Kossuth voted valiantly for Ingham until the full Conner strength had been recorded and cast the deciding vote, closely followed by Pocahontas with its nine. Webster, which had on the first ballot today delivered to Conner, cinched the Conner nomination. The choice was made unanimous. James P. Conner was born in Delaware county, Indiana, in 1851, and moved to Blackhawk, Iowa, in 1854. He was educated in the Upper Iowa University and commenced the practice of law at Denison in 1873. In 1875 he was married to Allie M. Cowdery. Mr. Conner was elected district attorney in 1880, judge of the circuit court in 1884 and judge of the Sixteenth district in 1886.

ALLEGED HORSE THIEF CAPTURED

Supposed Leader of an Iowa Gang Captured at Chelsea.

Grinnell, Oct. 1.—The officers of Benton county are of the opinion that they have just captured one of a gang of horse thieves who have been doing a wholesale business in Benton and neighboring counties. For several weeks horse stealing has become so notorious in that neighborhood that this entire portion of Iowa became terrorized. A few days ago the officers at Belle Plain received notice to be on the watch for a notorious character named Jack Davis, who had stolen a horse at Walkins. Later they discovered that the man had gone to Chelsea, and telephoned to the officers there to look out for and arrest him. Davis was caught in the act of selling another horse and buggy which he had stolen. Sheriff Dirr brought him to Belle Plaine. The officers believe that through Davis they may obtain a clew that may lead to the apprehension of others of this gang.

NEWS IN GENERAL

PUNISHING CHINESE LEADERS.

Four Anti-Foreign Princes, Including Tuan, Are Degraded.

Washington, Oct. 1.—Important news has come from China which in itself tends to advance materially the efforts for a final settlement. China has accepted the suggestion of the United States contained in the answer to the German proposition and has begun voluntarily the punishment of the reactionary Chinese leaders who were responsible for the Pekin outrages.

Consul Goodnow, at Shanghai, informs the state department that the Chinese director of railways and telegraphs has handed him a decree of the emperor and empress blaming their ministers for encouraging the Boxers. The edict orders the degradation of four princes and deprives Prince Tuan of his salary and official servants. He is to be brought for trial before imperial clan court. The decree recited by Sheng is felt to be of the utmost importance as indicating a complete change of heart on the part of the reigning dynasty. It means that the reactionary influences which have been dominant in Pekin throughout the uprising and have even continued of late days, have suffered a complete overthrow, and that their most conspicuous figures are degraded and on trial. It is believed here that if this action is genuine it will be hard for any of the powers to find a reasonable pretext for longer refusing to heed the appeals of the Chinese government for the opening of negotiations looking to a settlement.

The importance of the action is shown by the determination to try Prince Tuan before the imperial clan court. This is the supreme judicial tribunal of China and is the only one having jurisdiction over the members of the imperial family.

ALIGNMENT OF POWERS

England, France, Russia, United States in Opposition

Washington, Oct. 1.—The alignment of the powers on the German proposition to make punishment of Chinese ringleaders a condition precedent to negotiations may now be stated as follows:

Great Britain, Russia and France stand with the United States in regarding this proposition as inexpedient.

Japan occupies a middle attitude She is willing to follow the German lead if all other powers are agreeable but only for the sake of preserving harmony among the powers and not from a belief in the wisdom of the German proposition.

Austria and Italy stand shoulder to shoulder with Germany, making the dreibund a solid front.

The first named powers do not attempt to argue the German proposition, and their answers make it apparent they have accepted it without much consideration.

HOWARD SENTENCED TO HANG.

Motion for a New Trial Overruled in the Goebel Assassination Case.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 1.—The motion for a new trial in the case of James Howard was overruled by Judge Cantrill and Howard was sentenced to hang Dec. 7. It was agreed that the attorneys should be allowed to file their bill of exception in the appeal to the Court of Appeals any time before the 3rd of October.

Howard did not weaken or appear agitated when the solemn sentence of the court consigning him to the gallows was pronounced upon him, but in answer to the usual question of the court, if he could show cause why sentence should not be pronounced, he said in a firm clear voice, "I am innocent."

GAINED LOCUST SPRING.

Big Colliery Near Mt. Carmel, Pennsylvania, is Tied Up.

Shamokin, Pa., Sept. 28.—The Locust Spring colliery, near Mt. Carmel, went on a strike yesterday, the big mine being tied up completely. Between 1,200 and 1,300 men and boys had been given employment.

It was owned by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company and had been in constant operation.

The strike leaders are highly gratified, and predict the closing down of the North Franklin colliery. That colliery is also operated by the Reading company, and employes 600 men and boys.

Declare Diaz Elected.

Chicago, Sept. 27.—A dispatch to the Record from the City of Mexico says:

"Mexico's congress last night declared the result of the presidential election. General Diaz was unanimously elected, and will be inaugurated next December. The president has entirely recovered from his recent indisposition."

Solomon City is Wiped Out.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 29.—News is received here that Solomon City, at the mouth of Solomon river, was devastated by a recent storm on the coast of Alaska. All buildings are either swept away by the waves or wrecked by the wind. The town had a population of 200, all of whom are destitute and homeless.

Instructed to Destroy Foreigners.

Paris, Sept. 28.—The French consul at Shanghai cables that Tung Fuh Sian has just been appointed general of the western and northern armies. The Chinese viceroys have received an imperial secret decree instructing them to fight the foreigners and destroy them.

FIFTY-ONE MEN ARE MISSING.

Believed to Have Been Captured By Filipinos.

Washington, Sept. 29.—General MacArthur cabled the war department that on September 11 Captain Devereaux Shields, with fifty-one men of Company F, Twenty-ninth infantry, left Santa Cruz for Torrijos. Nothing has been heard from them since. It is supposed the entire party has been captured, with many killed and wounded.

The Twenty-ninth infantry was recruited at Fort McPherson, Ga. Captain Shields was lieutenant colonel of the Second Mississippi during the Spanish war. He was made captain in the Twenty-ninth infantry July 5, 1899. He is a resident of Natchez, Miss., where his wife now resides. The scene of this latest reverse is a small island lying due south of the southern coast of Luzon, about 300 miles from Manila. Marinduque is about twenty-four miles in diameter, and was garrisoned by two small detachments of United States troops. One of these is at Boag, on the west coast of the island, and the other at Santa Cruz, the principal port on the north side. Captain Shields appears to have started from Santa Cruz on a gunboat for Torrijos, a small port, and it is inferred the boat as well as the body of troops and under officer has been captured. The dispatch makes no reference to her return.

END SEEMS APPROACHING.

Miners' Strike Likely to be Ended in a Few Days.

New York, Sept. 29.—The Herald says: One of the men who participated in the plans for the settlement of the anthracite coal miners' strike and is familiar with all the facts and attendant circumstances said, in an interview:

"The rumor that negotiations looking to the settlement of the strike are off is untrue. My belief is that the strike will come to an end sometime early next week. It will not be ended by a blare of trumpets or by sweeping general orders, but by the men quietly going to work in colliery after colliery, day after day, at the 10 per cent advance. There is no inclination to recognize Mitchell in any way, but as a matter of fact the miners really accepted the 10 per cent advance, and they probably would have obtained it anyhow when the question first came up if so many members of the different boards of directors of the mining companies had not been away on their vacations."

HOWARD MUST DIE.

Goebel's Slayer Guilty of Murder in the First Degree.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 27.—The jury in the case of Jim Howard, charged with being the principal in the assassination of Goebel, returned a verdict of guilty, fixing the penalty at death. Howard was apparently the most unconcerned man in the room when the verdict was announced, displaying not the least sign of agitation. One of the jurors, after they had been discharged, stated to the Associated Press that a number of ballots were taken, but the first resulted in a unanimous vote in favor of a verdict of guilty. After that the ballots were as to the degree of punishment, ten members voting for the death penalty, two for life imprisonment. After the verdict had been returned Howard was remanded to jail. His cheeks blanched as he started to accompany the jailer back to his cell. The jury which tried the case was divided politically, nine democrats, one republican, two anti-Goebel democrats.

GERMANY HAS RECEDED.

Retreats Diplomatically From an Untenable Position.

London ,Sept. 29.—Apparently Germany's retreat from an untenable position has been virtually accomplished. The Paris correspondent of the Morning Post says:

"An agreement on the Chinese program has been arranged between France, Germany and Russia. It will be submitted to the other powers within a few days. The action recommended will be milder than Germany's original proposal and it is expected that all the powers will accept the program."

Holland is Warned By Great Britain.

London, Oct. 1.—Great Britain has sent a note to the Dutch government according to a dispatch from Amsterdam to the Daily Mail, which contains a warning that, if Mr. Kruger is allowed to carry bullion or state archives on board the Dutch war ship which is to bring him to Europe, it will be regarded as a breach of neutrality on the part of the Netherlands.

To Blockade Chinese Ports.

St. Petersburg, Sept. 29.—The Russian naval staff announces that it is proposed to blockade all Chinese naval ports in consequence of the hostile attitude of the Chinese fleet at Shanghai, and to send fast cruisers from the allied squadrons to protect their transports.

Von Ketteler's Assassin Held.

Peking, Sept. 29.—The assassin of Baron von Ketteler was tried by court martial. The court decided it would be unjustifiable on the evidence presented to pronounce sentence, but the prisoner will be held in the hope of obtaining further information against him.

Will Harrass British.

London, Sept. 25.—"Messrs. Steyn and Reitz," says a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Lorenzo Marquez, "will remain with the fighting burghers, and it is estimated that a force of Boers, aggregating from 7,000 to 12,000 is planning to harrass the British lines of communication."

FREIGHT RATES AN ISSUE

In the Settlement of the Great Strike.

MINERS SURE OF VICTORY.

Workers Await Tidings from New York That Their Principal Demands Have Been Granted—Mitchell Calls the Concession a Victory.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Oct. 1.—Unless concessions in freight rates are made by the railroads no general agreement of operators as to a settlement of the mining strike is likely. The independents oppose the 10 per cent increase until concessions are made by their rivals, the coal-carrying railroads, which will put them on an equality. This is the situation, as well as can be judged from statements of men who attended the secret meetings of operators in this city today. That the sentiment is in favor of granting the workers the increase in pay and a reduction in the price of powder is certain, and the belief is a compromise will be effected within a day or two.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 1.—The miners and leaders are eagerly awaiting tidings from the coal operators and railroad men in New York. Said a labor man:

"There is no doubt the offer of a 10 per cent advance was but a feeler to test the loyalty of the men to the union cause. When they see the miners want more concessions they will grant more."

Few if any more are at work in the anthracite region than yesterday, and the strike leaders declare that the trouble is far from ended. With rumors of more meetings in New York and more concessions by the operators, the men show no inclination to return to the mines. The officers of the United Mine Workers are confident that all the material demands of their followers will be granted. Therefore they are making every effort to keep the men out.

Mitchell on the Concession.

Said President Mitchell tonight:

"If the 10 per cent increase is correct, while far from satisfactory, it is the greatest victory ever received by organized labor, and won under the most adverse circumstances. Of course, I have nothing to say as to what action will be taken as to the accpetance or rejection of any proposition—this must be determined by the whole body of anthracite miners themselves. Our organization will not make the mistake which has wrecked many other organizations, of assuming power to determine, through its officers, the happiness or misery of the 500,000 men, women and children dependent upon the anthracite coal industry for a livelihood."

MINERS SURE OF VICTORY.

Leaders Go to New York, to Arbitrate—One Point Settled.

New York, Sept. 29.—All independent coal operators were today summoned to New York by telegraph to meet in conference with the coal road operators at the office of J. Pierpont Morgan.

They met this evening, and it is believed that an agreement has been reached. The miners get an advance of ten per cent and the additional promise that all future differences will be met by arbitration.

Denial by Mitchell.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 29.—President Mitchell at noon today emphatically denied that the strike is ended. He has not been officially notified by anybody representing the operators of the reported offer of 10 per cent increase in wages, and he says he is not in negotiation with anyone.

There is no doubt that Mr. Mitchell has unofficial knowledge of efforts on the part of the coal-carrying companies and other interests to end the strike, but on this subject he will not say a word.

Everything is very quiet here up to noon, and the apparent excitement all over the country regarding the settlement of the strike is not reflected here.

Mr. Mitchell held two rather long conversations over the long-distance telephone today. He declined, as usual, to say whom he was talking to. When asked if a 10 per cent increase would be satisfactory, he declared that it would not. Mr. Mitchell held no conference at his headquarters here with anyone during the forenoon.

STRIKERS MARCH TO HAZLEBROOK.

Win New Recruits to Their Ranks—Colliery Is Idle.

Hazleton, Pa., Sept. 29.—There was a march of strikers from Freeland to Hazlebrook early this morning and as a result of the efforts of these men to get out miners working at the colliery of J. S. Wentz & Co. there the operation was practically shut down.

The marchers numbered about 100 and they left Freeland at 3 a. m. They reached Hazlebrook, five miles distant, before daylight. Here the strikers distributed themselves through the town and called at the homes of all men who had not yet struck. There was a slight flurry of apprehension in Hazlebrook when the people learned that a crowd of Freeland strikers had arrived, but as the marchers showed no disposition to become unruly the excitement soon subsided.

Sheriff Harvey, with a small number of deputies, arrived on the scene at 6 o'clock, but did not interfere with the marchers. He asked them good naturedly what they were doing at Hazlebrook and some of them replied that they were "only standing around." Then the sheriff spied a squad of strikers going up a hill and when he inquired regarding their destination he was told they were "only going to play a game of baseball." Only a mere handfull of Hazlebrook men left their homes for the mines. After the colliery whistle had blown at 7 o'clock and the result of their effort was apparent the Freeland men left for home.

All is quiet and orderly elsewhere in the Hazleton region. General Superintendent Smith of the Markle mines said in response to an inquiry that the collieries are working this morning, but he would not say in what condition.

Basis of Settlement.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 29.—General Superintendent Loomis of Delaware, Lackawanna and Western's mining department is in conference with the individual coal operators' association here. As chairman of the superintendents' association, embracing the mining heads of all the big coal-carrying roads, he has been delegated to bring before the individual operators the basis upon which the strike of the coal miners may be settled. Before going to this meeting he admitted that it was proposed to give a 10 per cent increase on all the wage demands of the miners. It is learned that the basis is not altogether agreeable to the individual operators, some of whom regard it as being unequal, and they will ask of the coal-carrying railroads some freight concessions. The meeting is secret and no positive information is obtainable.

Probable Strike in Ohio.

Jackson, O., Sept. 29.—An ultimatum has been issued by the district president and member of the state board to the operators of Oak Hill, this county, embracing five companies, ordering a strike tomorrow unless they pay the scale and the board for this district. The scale is eighty cents per ton. Operators are now paying sixty cents.

MOB SLAYS DEPUTY SHERIFF.

Attack on Louisiana Jail Resisted and an Officer Killed.

Houston, Texas, Oct. 1.—A special from Lake Charles, La., says that all day there were rumors of the probable lynching of Pierce Scott, a negro in jail there charged with an attack on Miss Oswald, aged 73, a sister of Mrs. Judge Gorman. About 9 o'clock a crowd gathered at the courthouse and demanded the keys to the jail. Judge Miller addressed the mob and urged them to disperse and promised to try the case in the morning. This promise had its effect and the mob left. At 11 o'clock, however, another advance was made and the crowd ran toward the jail with an iron battering ram fifteen feet long and three inches in diameter. D. S. A. Harmon and Paul Sloan, deputy sheriffs inside the jail, warned them and then shot over the heads of the crowd. Some one fired at the deputies. Paul Sloan was shot and fatally wounded. He died at 1:15 o'clock a. m. The sheriff and deputies outside the jail dispersed the crowd at the points of their pistols, and members of the crowd began to call for the arrest of those who shot Sloan. Several men known to have been armed were arrested.

Big Fire in City of Mexico.

City of Mexico, Oct. 1.—Fire threatened to destroy a large section in the southern portion of this city. It required the combined efforts of all the fire companies, aided by the Twenty-first battalion of the regular army and the new English fire engines, to prevent the spread of the flames. Nevertheless one immense dry goods store—the Valenciena—was entirely destroyed, causing a loss of $900,000. The insurance is $500,000, in English and German companies.

Injured in an Ohio "Rush."

Newark, Ohio, Oct. 1.—In a class "rush" between freshmen and sophomores at Denison university today in Granville many suits of clothing were ruined, several eyes discolored, and Ned Laugeridge had his back painfully hurt. The boys rolled down the high college hill, and the "rush," which resulted in a tie, lasted over an hour.

Football Game Results Fatally.

Chicago, Oct. 1.—Lawrence M. Pierson, injured in the football game between his team, the Lake Forest university eleven, and the North Division High School team on Wednesday, is dead. Mr. Pierson's father, who had come from Lexington, Ill., to give his case attention, took the remains home for burial.

AMERICA'S PLEDGE KEPT

Troops Ordered Sent from China to the Philippines.

Washington, Sept. 26.—The United States government yesterday took the first step towards the redemption of its pledge made to the Russian government August 28 last by cablegram instructions to General Chaffee to reduce the American forces in China to the proportions of a legation guard. Nearly a month ago the Russian government was told through M. de Wollant, its charge here, that if the Russian forces and ministry were withdrawn from Peking, "we shall give instructions to the commander of the American forces in China to withdraw our forces from Peking, after due conference with the other commanders as to the time and manner of withdrawal."

That time has now come, and yesterday's action marks the beginning of the disappearance of the American army from China, for although some military forces are to remain, it will not be of the character of an army, but, under the conditions laid down in the order to General Chaffee, and especially under its official designation as a "legation guard," will be rather of the nature of a civil guard. This small force will not be included in any military operations which may be conducted by the allied armies and so will not fall subject to the direction of Field Marshal Count von Waldersee, the commander-in-chief. It is believed that the 1,400 men selected will be quite sufficient to protect the American legation against any force that could be brought against it. It is estimated that about a week will be required to bring the 3,500 soldiers away from Peking, but as the start cannot be made immediately, it will be at least about the end of the first week in October before the movement can be completed.

EMPEROR ASKED TO RETURN.

Notes Sent to Prince Ching by Foreign Ministers.

Peking, Sept. 21, via Taku, Sept. 25.—All the foreign ministers have addressed notes to Prince Ching, suggesting the return to Peking of the emperor and the court. The notes were informal and not written in a diplomatic capacity. The writers do not consider them binding upon their respective governments.

The diplomats acted jointly in the matter, but the letters were sent individually. These did not contain any assurances, but merely suggested the return of the emperor.

Prince Ching undertook to deliver the notes. The outcome is a matter of speculation, the doubtful element being the influence of Prince Tuan and General Tung Fuh Siang, who may restrain the court.

General Chaffee, discussing the probabilities today, said:

"I do not believe that any European monarch would enter the camp of his allied enemies, and I doubt that the empress dowager will do so. It is generally conceded that the restoration of the Chinese government is essential. I have favored the withdrawal of the main allied force to Yang Tsun, and Tien Tsin, leaving 2,000 mixed troops to guard the legations."

AMERICA LEADS.

Gets the Highest Number of Awards At Paris Exposition.

Paris, Sept. 28.—The jury of final appeal in the exposition awards has finished its work. The statement prepared for the United States commission shows America received the highest number of awards of any nation save France. She also received more awards in each classification, except grand prizes, in which Germany secured the greatest number.

Figures, excepting for France, are as follows:

Grand prizes—United States, 215; Germany, 236; Russia, 209; Great Britain, 183.

Gold medals—United States, 547; Germany, 510; Russia, 346; Great Britain, 306.

Silver medals—United States, 593; Germany, 575; Russia, 411; Great Britain, 410.

Bronze medals—United States, 501; Germany, 321; Russia, 321; Great Britain, 410.

Honorable mention—United States, 348; Germany, 184; Russia, 206; Great Britain, 208.

To Occupy Forbidden City.

Pekin, Sept. 24, via Taku, Oct. 1.—Prince Ching has addressed notes to the ministers acknowledging their letter suggesting that the court return to Pekin. He announces that he has dispatched a memorial covering the subject to the dowager empress. It is practically determined that Count Van Waldersee shall occupy one of the imperial palaces in the forbidden city when he arrives, and a large portion of the German army will be quartered there. There is a complete revival of the former policy to protect the forbidden city. The Americans disapprove of this but will not enter a protest.

Strikers Engage in a Fight.

Scranton, Pa., Sept. 27.—The first blood shed which may be laid to the miners' strike in the Lackawanna region, was reported from Sibley, a mining settlement six miles from Scranton. Three men were wounded, one fatally, in a row in which about twenty revolver shots were fired. The participants are all Italians, among whom bad blood had existed for some time. The men got into a fight on the roadway near Barberton with the above result.

NEWSPAPERS IN RUSSIA.

Journals Are Permitted to Print Only News Authorized by the Censor.

The Russian government has gone into the business of publishing news itself, has established a regular press bureau for the circulation of news and supplies all home newspapers now with foreign news. State Councilor Naratoff is the editor-in-chief of news on questions of current politics.

Should a Russian newspaper dare to "handle" news in a manner different from that in which it is furnished the censor takes hold at once. And it is a pretty hard case for which the censor cannot find a handle, as was shown by Count Uvaroff when he found an excuse for warning an editor enemy by citing his eulogy of Pushkin. The editor had said nothing against the government implying disrespect or criticism of the government in his article, but Uvaroff found that Pushkin "had no position in the government service, was neither a captain nor a head of department and was only a verse writer." So the editor was "warned," and a warning is a serious thing, for it means that the next offense may be punished summarily by the suppression of the paper. Thus one paper, the Gazeta Gatzuka, was warned once and then suppressed for "want of respect for the nobility." The motive of a minister's refusal to authorize a new publication are sometimes curious enough. For instance, not more than three years ago the permission to publish a private newspaper in Tamboy was refused on the ground that the necessity for such a publication there "has not ripened yet," and that "the local official paper is quite efficient for the place." Sometimes a refusal is based on the fact that the local censor, having various other official duties has work enough without a new paper.—New York Press.

EYE TROUBLES.

Employments That Should Be Avoided by People with Weak Eyes.

The changes which come to the eye as a result of age are beyond the power of the individual to remedy. It is true that the time for the wearing of glasses may be hastened by abuse of the eyes, but with all possible care that one may take, the eye that hitherto has been normal, will need shortly before, or it may be shortly after, the age of forty-five the aid of glasses. So universal is this that an oculist, in his examination of the refraction of the eye of his patient, can determine accurately the number of his years. The responsibility of much eye trouble, however, can be brought directly home to the individual. It is due to the reckless expenditure of the eyesight. The service of the eyes is demanded in any and every light. The eyes are most tried by reading fine print or doing the fine stitches of sewing or embroidery. If the print is on glossy paper whose smooth surface reflects the light the effect is bad upon the eyes. If the embroidery is to be done on satin or upon canvas, with its bewildering maze of meshes, the strain is soon shown in the redness and the weariness of the eyes. Women's eyes suffer greatly from the tax of veils. It only shows the great adaptability which the eyes share with every other part of the body that the veils, with their intricate meshes and numerous dots of embroidery and chenille, do not occasion more trouble with the eyes than they do. The first thing to do in selecting a veil, if one has mercy on the eyes, is to test its effect upon the sight, to see that the weave is not confusing and that the dots do not come athwart the eyes.—Harper's Bazar.

Might Have Patronized "Uncle."

The bishop of London told a quaint story the other day at a meeting at the speaker's house, Westminster. A little east end girl was being examined upon the question of the prodigal and his eating of the husks, when she inquired: "What else could he have done?" The child replied: "He could have pawned his little girl's boots."

Expensive Toy Road.

Some children of Macon, Ga., are to have an expensive but highly instructive toy in the shape of a complete miniature trolley line about a mile long. Each car will accommodate eight passengers, and is complete in all details, including electric lights. The railway is to be located in a private park.

Cafes of Sidewalks.

The cafe chairs and tables of the sidewalks are a Paris feature that the tourist immediately agrees ought to be adopted at home. They form the most distinctive feature of the Paris promenade. They give its Parisian brightness to the boulevard.

New South Wales' Population.

The estimated population of New South Wales on June 30 was as follows: Males, 720,420; females, 631,700—total, 1,361,120. The increase for the half year amounted to 4,470, the smallest price 1860.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

FOURTH QUARTER, LESSON I., OCT. 7. LUKE 14: 1-14.

Golden Text: Whosoever Exalteth Himself Shall be Abased; and He That Humbleth Himself Shall be Exalted.—Luke 14: 11.

1. "As (rather 'after') he went into the house of one of the chief Pharisees." "This may denote that he was of high official position, but probably includes some official distinction, as that he was chief of the synagogue, or member of the local Sanhedrim."—Andrews. "To eat bread on the Sabbath day." "Sabbath banqueting was common, and became proverbial for luxury."—Int. Crit. Com. "That they watched him." R. V., "were watching." "were engaged in watching."

2. "There was a certain man before him." Some thought the introduction of the sick man was a scheme of the Pharisee to see if Jesus would heal him on the Sabbath, and thus test his opinions and actions in regard to the Sabbath, and possibly his power of healing.

3. "And Jesus answering." The thought of their hearts, or the whispered question of what Jesus would do. No wonder that Jesus asked them, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath day?"

4. "And they held their peace." This was not because they did not believe it to be unlawful, for Jesus had before been accused of breaking the Sabbath by healing a man (Luke 6: 7; 13: 14; Matt. 12: 10). They wanted Jesus to give his own decision and then they could find fault with it. They may have wanted to see Jesus heal the man, even if he broke the law. "And he took him." Perhaps to show that the healing came from him, perhaps as a medium of the healing power. "And healed him." Showing the opinion of Jesus as to healing on the Sabbath. It was lawful to do good on the Sabbath days (Mark 3: 4).

5. "An ass or an ox fallen into a pit," etc. Jesus knew that even their narrow interpretation of the Sabbath law allowed them to do thus on the Sabbath.

6. "And they could not answer." For the question was unanswerable. If they would save an ox or an ass from his trouble on the Sabbath, by what reason or common sense could they say it was wicked to save a man from his affliction?

7. "Chose out (were choosing) the chief rooms." Seats: the best and most honorable places at the table. This was going on before his eyes. The pretensions and conceit of the Jewish doctors of the law had been for a long period intolerable.

8. "When thou art bidden . . . to a wedding." A marriage feast. This is chosen because at a wedding feast there is more formality, a greater variety of guests, and more attention paid to their rank. "Sit not down in the highest room." The place highest in honor, the chief seat. "A more honorable man." Who would have a right to the place you have chosen.

9. "Thou begin with shame." Begin emphasizes the reluctance of this movement. "To take the lowest room" (place). "Since the other intervening places are all assigned."—Vincent. Thus the self-exalted guest had to take a much lower place than he would otherwise have received.

10. "Sit down in the lowest room (place): "that," that, of results, rather than of purpose. "There is no recommendation of 'the pride which apes humility' going to a low place in order to be promoted."—Int. Crit. Com. "Friend, go up higher." The one who chose the highest place did so according to his own estimate of his worth, and thus called attention to his conceit rather than to his worth. But the one who takes the lowest seat lets others make known his worth, so that he has "worship" (reverence, honor, respect) "in the presence of them that sit at meat" with him.

11. "For whosoever exalteth himself." Christ now states the great principle illustrated by his parable. It touches the earth, but reaches heaven. Humility is best for earth, and it "is the passport to promotion in the kingdom of God."

12. "Said he also to him that bade him." That remarks of Jesus to the host were suggested by the feast to which Jesus and his disciples had been invited. "Call (invite) not thy friends," etc. This is not a prohibition of any gathering of friends and relatives; for Jesus was then present at such a gathering. "And a recompense be made thee." By a return initation, by the social advantages gained, by the enjoyment and benefit of social intercourse.

13. "But when thou makest a feast, call the poor," etc. Those who are in need; those you call for their good and not your own. Compare Plato's Phaedrus, 233.

14. "And thou shalt be blessed." You have the blessing of a virtuous deed, of having done good to those who need it; of adding to the happiness of the world; of partaking of the spirit of the saints and angels in heaven. "Recompensed at the resurrection of the just." The first resurrection, spoken of in Rev. 20: 4, 5.

Washington Church Kodak Fiends.

"The story that a Washington woman sent notices to the ministers of the capital of the opening of her summer home with the request that they be read from the pulpit, may be a libel, although I have been told that it is a fact," said a man who has been in Washington for several months, "but I'll tell you what I have seen there—men and women carrying kodaks into the pews on Sunday. No, not to take a snapshot of the minister, but the Washington fiend stops on his way to church to make shots and after the service he lingers on his way home to do likewise. There is no other place in the country where the kodak fiend is so insatiate as he is in the capital."

The World's Oldest Newspaper.

No list of newspaper curiosities would be complete that did not include the Kin-Pau of Pekin. Like most things in the celestial kingdom, it is easily first in point of antiquity, for it has been published continuously for over 1,000 years. It began as a monthly, became a weekly in 1361, and since the beginning of the century has been a daily. It is now quite up to date, publishing three editions a day, and, to safeguard the purchaser, each edition is printed on different colored paper, the first being yellow, the second white and the last gray.

The impression that the TIMES would be run on Democratic principles is a mistake. The present editor does not intend to run a political paper, nor be a working faction in any kind of a political squabble, unless it be for the county at large; then it will be for the best man in the best place, or the right man in the right place, irrespective of party. There may be some litigation as to whether we do or whether we don't, but, when simmered down to a keen point it will be some-thing like this "any time the TIMES goes political, it don't." And when people deliberately try to hook us, they must be carefull. etc. We have no words of disrepute to offer against any citizen of this place, neither do we disrepect a man for believing as he does. Every man has a right to his own mind and opinion and that is what is the matter with ye scribe.

Those who have been so fortunate as not to know the present editor, those who by chance glance at this paper will say "Oh he's spreading that pretty thick," but we are not. Klemme has been known to us since it's birth, we have watched it, lived in it and dwelt amoung it's citizens and we know what Klemme is. Truly now, the tow is not a place "where the wood-bine ...ess is done on business principles, on larg scales with honest weights. Its the place for you to do your trading and marketing. Try it and see.

Many a woman, sick and weary of life, dragged down by weakening drains, painful irregularities, depression, and the hundred and one ailments which affect women only, has found in Pe-ru-na a bright star of hope, which has changed her misery to joy, her suffering to health.

No woman need suffer from the derangements peculiar to her sex, if she will give Pe-ru-na a fair trial.

The majority of weaknesses which make woman's life a burden, spring from a simple cause. The mucous membrane which lines the pelvic organs becomes weakened and inflamed owing to strain, cold, overwork, etc. This causes catarrhal congestion, inflammation, painful irregularities, depression of spirits, irritability, weakness and suffering. It shows in the haggard lines of the face, the dull eyes, the sallow complexion and angular form.

For the prompt cure of such ailments try Pe-ru-na. It drives away "the blues," clears the complexion, brightens the eyes, changes thinness to plumpness, and cures pains, aches and drains, because it immediately strikes at the root of such troubles and removes the cause.

STORYETTES.

A school boy at a prize examination furnished the following biography of the patriarch Abraham: "He was the father of Lot, and had two wives. One was called Ishmale and she lived, where she became a pillar of salt in the daytime and a pillar of fire by night."

Cyrus Townsend Brady tells an amusing story in his "Recollections of a Missionary in the Great West" of a little boy he knew on the frontier, who belonged to a family who had trained him to believe in the deep-water form of baptism and was experimenting with the household cat and a bucket of water. The animal evidently did not believe in immersion, for she resisted, bit and scratched until finally the little boy, with his hands covered with scratches and with tears in his eyes, gave up the effort to effect the regeneration of the cat. "Dog-gone you!" he cried, "go and be an Episcopal cat if you want to!"

When "Bob" Taylor was governor of Tennessee he was noted for being as tender-hearted as a woman, and the way he pardoned out convicts was something awful. He was waited upon by a committee of the legislature, who very flatly and in no uncertain way told him that this "wholesale pardoning must stop." "Gov'nor Bob" looked at the committee, tapped a bell, asked for his pardon clerk, and when he came said: "Make out pardons for every man in the penitentiary." The clerk bowed and withdrew. Then the governor looked at the committee, who were staring as if they thought he was going mad. "Gentlemen," he said, finally, "I am governor of Tennessee, and if this committee or any other ever again seeks to interfere with my constitutional right to pardon, I'll sign every one of these pardons which the clerk is making out. Good morning."

During a recent heated spell, Cardinal Gibbons of Baltimore and Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia took a run down to Atlantic City, and on arriving made themselves known to none, but went to a bathing house incog. Clad in the shapeless bathing suits that are furnished hapless strangers, they soon issued forth, with a broad rimmed straw hat tied tightly down upon the head of each. In spite of their shapeless costumes, however, there was something distingue in the appearance of the two men, and so it happened that some of those in the throng that huddled along the beach gazed at them with mild curiosity. One home-like country woman, evidently on her first sea shore visit, was especially interested in watching the two men, who were enjoying themselves with constantly increasing gayety. At length the dignitaries heard her say critically to her husband, in what she thought a safe aside: "Well, the old man, he looks kinder thin and peaked, but the old woman—seems to me she's quite hearty and strong!"

It once fell to the lot of Lord Morris, always a wit and now a distinguished judge, who had never lost the mellifluous brogue of the west of Ireland, to hear a case at Coleraine, in which damages were claimed from a veterinary surgeon for having poisoned a valuable horse. The issue depended upon whether a certain number of grains of a particular drug could be safely administered to the animal. The dispensary doctor proved that he had often given eight grains to a man, from which it was to be inferred that twelve for a horse was not excessive. "Never mind yer eight grains, docther," said the judge; "we all know that some poisons are cumulative in effect, and ye may go to the edge of ruin with impunity. But tell me this: The twelve grains—wouldn't they kill the devil himself if he swallowed them?" The doctor was annoyed, and pompously replied, "I don't know, my lord; I never had him for a patient." From the bench came the answer: "Ah, no, docther, ye niver had, more's the pity! The old bhoy's still aloive."

ESTRAY—Estrayed from my farm, Monday night, one white [illegible] Finder r
had been left at Frau Seckendo school in Hanover, without once returning to England, without any one coming to see her. But she had been very happy, for she had naturally a merry, buoyant disposition, and was the pet and favorite of the school establishment, from the grave, kindly Frau herself downwards.

Then she was liberally supplied with pocket money by her father's trustees, generously paid for in every way, while Frau Seckendorf had carte blanche to do everything for her amusement in the holidays, and the time had gone so fast that Mollie could hardly believe she was nearly nineteen, and that a few days would see her once more in her native land. Ah, that dear native land! How often in her dreams had she seen it as it would be looking now, with the first faint breath of spring rustling through the bare, brown branches, the leaves sprouting in the hedgerows, the violets peeping forth from some sheltered nook! Yes, though there was no one now in the house where she was born to welcome her home with affection, it would be something to be in England in the sweet spring time, to gather violets and primroses in the well remembered woods and fields around Reverton.

The packing was accomplished at last, more by the Fraulein's and Liza's exertions than her own, for the girl was restless and excited, torn by conflicting feelings, sorry to bid farewell to quaint old Hanover, and all those who had been so kind to her since she came there,—a pale, motherless child of fourteen—yet anxious to rush into the future, to see what it held in store for her.

So when the trunks were shut and Liza had departed with her arms full of the gifts she had bestowed upon her, Mollie made her way with unusual sedateness to Frau Seckendorf's private apartments. Since the girls of her own age had left one by one, and she had outgrown the class rooms, e had been promoted to the use of ese salons, and taken out to conrts, theaters, and coffee parties by e good Frau, who was secretly im-ensely proud of the pretty, wellessed English heiress confided to r care, and watched over her with vigilant eye; and Mollie looked ound them with a friendly glance, nd a sigh at the thought that after morrow she should see them no ore.

The dusk was falling fast; it was fficult to see the houses across he wide street, and as she stood by he porcelain stove, warming her cold ttle fingers, her thoughts went back o her childhood days as they had not one for a long time, and scene after ene seemed to rise before her.

Mollie could not remember her faher at all, for he had died when she as but a few months old, but her retty young mother had been her layfellow, and until her sixth year, er constant companion. Then came he days when a tall, dark man was lways with her mother, and that early loved parent was somehow not he same to her, while the dark man sed to bring her sweets, and smile rimly when she put her hands be-ind her back, and refused to accept hem.

Yes, from the very first Mollie had isliked and distrusted Leonard Bar-owe, and he had cordially returned he feeling. With her mother's sec-nd marriage all her troubles began, nd the child would often sob herself o sleep at night, feeling neglected and orlorn, missing the tender voice, the ullaby ever since she could remem-er.

Afterwards Mollie grew to know hat her mother had not forgotten her, ut that her stepfather, jealous and orose, resented even the affection he bestowed to her own child, and mid and clinging by nature, she had ot the strength of character to oppose m in any way. Mollie was sent o school soon after the birth of her alf-sister, Kate, and though she spent he holidays at home, Chalfont House as never the same place again.

Looking at the past through the ftening vista of time, Mollie knew hat her woes had not been imaginary.

She would have been fond enough the little usurper, who seemed to ave pushed her out of her place, had he been allowed, for she was neither alous nor revengeful; but Mr. Bar-owe, while spoiling Kate until she was unbearable, resented the least attention shown to Mollie, and the holidays had been misery, school a refuge. She gradually grew to know that her mother was miserable, that she only dare caress her in private and that she feared her handsome dark husband more than she loved him.

How well she remembered the last time she had any talk with her mother! It was the night before her return to school, and her mother came into her room as she was preparing for bed, and, closing the door, took her into her arms as if she were a baby again, kissed and cried over her in a passionate, heart-broken way, saying that whatever happened to the future, she must never doubt her poor mother's love, that save her dead father, no one was so precious to her, no one; and that her last thought and prayer would be for her own Mollie.

It was not until her death a few months later that Mollie understood what she meant, Chalfont and a good income had been Mrs. Barlowe's private property, and she left them to her husband for his lifetime, and then to her daughter Kate, no mention being made of her elder child, save that, failing them, she would be her heiress.

This had not been her mother's wish—Mollie knew as well as if she had been told—and the fierce anger burned in her heart, not for the loss of the property, but for what Mr.
Barlowe had made her mother suffer.
Oh, how she hated him as she saw his fine eyes roving with an air of proprietorship round her mother's room!
In her childish heart she felt that he had got what he had schemed for, and it mattered little to him that he had ruined her mother's and her life to obtain it.

They lived at open warfare during the months before she was sent to Hanover; and it was an additional blow to find that he had constituted himself her guardian in her mother's place. His motive was not far to seek.
Mollie was her father's heiress, and though he could not touch the principal, a handsome allowance was made for the care of Colonel L'Estrange's daughter.

And now he, too, was dead, and she was going back to live at Chalfont House with her little half-sister and Madam Dubois! Were brighter times coming, she wondered, as, in company with the English governess, she once [illegible] native land, or was Madame Dubois but a repetition of Leonard Barlowe?

It was a bleak March day when the governess put her charge into a first class carriage at one of the great London stations, and reluctantly bade her farewell, after carefully ascertaining that two elderly ladies in the further corner were going the same journey, and Reverton would be reached in little over an hour, where Madame Dubois was sure to be at the station. So she kissed the pet and pride of Frau Seckendorf's school with tearful eyes, and hurried away to catch her own train, while Mollie sank back in the corner of her carriage, sorry to part with her last friend, yet excited at the prospect before her.

For a little while she occupied herself in watching one familiar object after another appear, as the express left the chimneys behind and rushed through the green country. It even amused her to see the great open fires in the waiting rooms once more as they flashed through the stations. Then she suddenly became aware that the two ladies were talking very hard, and she heard her own name.

"You will find Reverton looking much the same, Louise," the elder was saying. "The people alter, but not the place. Why, you have not been here since the year poor Mrs. L'Estrange married Mr. Barlowe, have you?"

"No; how pretty she was! I know no one liked him; you thought him an adventurer. What has he done since her death?"

"Oh, he feathered his nest well—got the whole of her property for himself and his wretched little girl, to the exclusion of the elder child! Every one knew that his poor wife was horribly afraid of him, and he had it all his own way. Well, I must not say more, for he was hurried to his account with all his sins upon his head, and no time to repent him of his wickedness."

"What do you mean?"

"Did you not see it in the papers? It was the talk of Reverton! He was found murdered in his study nearly twelve months ago. Yes, I remember, it was on Easter Sunday."

"Murdered?" echoed the other blankly. "That handsome man? Who did it?"

"It has never been found out."

CHAPTER II.

Murdered! Could this awful word, so full of terrible meaning, apply to her stepfather, who she had last seen standing at the door of Chalfont House, full of life and health, holding the fretful Kate by the hand? Mollie sat up and turned hastily to the two ladies, the color fading from her face.

"My name is L'Estrange," she stammered nervously, looking from one to the other. "I am Mrs. Barlowe's eldest daughter. I thought I ought to tell you. I——I did not know that he died like that; no one told me. Are you sure?"

Mollie could see the ladies were gazmarks; but she was too eager to learn the truth to mind that, or anything else. Why had she been allowed to come home in ignorance of the tragedy that hung undiscovered over Chalfont House? In the pause before any one spoke she was not conscious of feeling any sorrow for her dead stepfather, nor had these ladies expressed any; but she did feel a thrill of horror at the thought of the crime that had been committed in the house where she was born—her mother's house—and could not repress a shudder. Then, the first lady got up, and, coming over, sat down heavily in the seat opposite to her.

"I am heartily sorry you have heard me, my dear,' she said kindly. "It is a lesson to me not to talk of my neighbors in the train. But are you really Amy Barlowe's child? Yes, looking at you, I can see your dear father. Your parents were my dearest friends. You do not remember me, but surely you have not forgotten Reggie and Joyce?"

Mollie started, and, leaning forward, turned her beautiful, miserable grey eyes on the speaker with dawning recognition.

"Yes—yes, I do now," she cried. "You are Mrs. Anstruther; you live in that pretty white house near the church. Oh, Mrs. Anstruther, about this dreadful thing about Mr. Barlowe. Madame Dubois wrote that he died suddenly, and she was now my guardian; but how did it happen? Why was I not told?" And she glanced imploringly at the pleasant motherly face now regarding her with a troubled frown.

She—A married couple should pull together like a team of horses. He—Yes, and they probably would if like a team of horses they had but one tongue between them.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, October 1, 1900.

E. S. Ellsworth of Iowa Falls, who is the president of the proposed Des Moines, Iowa Falls & Nortnern railroad, was in the city meeting with some of the promoters of the Duluth & New Orleans road relative to the retirement from the field of the latter company. "The Des Moines & Iowa Falls road is a certainty at any time that we are confident that the other road has been given up," said Mr. Ellsworth. "It would be impossible to do anything with the bonds of our road while the other road was being planned and work was being done on its construction. No eastern bond house would take the bonds with the possibility of any trouble arising. The consequence is that we have lost all the best of this year, while the Duluth & New Orleans company has been going ahead and spending money continually. I understand that about $1,000 per month has been expended on the work that has been done. If they are now ready to give up the road we will go right ahead with ours, and will have some of the work done before winter stops us. A corps of engineers was kept in the field all last year, but nothing has been done this year and nothing will be done unless we are definitely assured that the other road is out of the way."

Representatives of two voting machine companies are in Des Moines trying to induce the county board of supervisors to adopt their respective machines for use in this county. They are the Climax company, represented by E. E. Miller of Franklin Grove, Ill., and the Standard company, represented by Mr. Gillespie of Atlantic. The Climax people feel confident of selling their machine, if the board decides to purchase machines for the county. The voting machine commission appointed by Governor Shaw last winter inspected the Climax at Cedar Rapids about a week ago, and declared that it fulfilled the requirements of the statute. The Standard has not been passed on, but it will probably be submitted to the commission short.

The Bonaparte dam case will be heard from at the coming session of the supreme court, the case having been advanced upon the calendar by request. The Bonaparte dam case will be remembered as a case against Meek Bros. of Bonaparte, owners of woolen mills operated in that city, which were run by water power secured from the dam on the Des Moines river. Fishermen in the neighborhood of Bonaparte and up the Des Moines river to Des Moines complained that the dam obstructed the free passage of fish up the river, and the Iowa Sportsman's association began an action to compel Meek Bros. to remove the dam or to provide fishways adequate and suitable for the river. The state of Iowa joined with the plaintiffs, and the case was bitterly contested. A verdict in favor of the defendants was secured in the lower court and the plaintiffs at once appealed the case. The recent advancement means that it will receive early consideration at the October term.

The investigation arising out of the arrest of John W. Stone, superintendent of the industrial department in the hospital at Mt. Pleasant for alleged theft of supplies, has been nearly brought to a close by the board of control. Judge Kinne has just returned from Mt. Pleasant, where he made the regular monthly inspection of the hospital and took testimony. Judge Kinne, in speaking of the case, refused to disclose what the testimony indicated, but told what had been done to make the examination a thorough one. While at Mt. Pleasant he examined the employes, the superintendent, the express agent and all persons that could have any knowledge of Stone's conduct as superintendent. He also went to Burlington and made investigation there, since it had been charged Stone shipped goods to Burlington. The cause of the fire at Mt. Pleasant last February and the circumstances surrounding it, were looked into with especial care, because of the allegations that the fire was started to hide thefts of state supplies. It is learned from another source that the testimony thus far taken fails to prove that Stone had stolen any state supplies outside of those sent to Des Moines. It contains nothing to prove the charge that the thefts extended over a long period, and there is no evidence to show the fire last February was started by anyone or for the purpose of concealing thefts from the state. There is no evidence that any state supplies were shipped to Burlington or to points other than Des Moines, and there is every indication the board will be able to make a report based on the sworn statements in its possession that will vindicate the position it has all along taken in the matter.

GEN. PALMER DEAD.

Aged Soldier and Statesman Dies Suddenly of Heart Trouble.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 26.—Ex-United States Senator and ex-Governor John M. Palmer died at his residence in this city yesterday morning. Heart failure was the cause of death. General Palmer was honorary pall-bearer at General McClernand's funeral last Saturday, and was on the street viewing the illuminations at a late hour Monday night, apparently well. He was 83 years of age. General Palmer was the candidate of the gold democrats for president in 1896.

A druggist in St. Louis advertised for "a thin drug clerk, with a mustache." On being asked why he required these extraordinary qualifications in a clerk, the druggist said that a young man thus qualified nearly always proved a hustler in selling soda water, and that smooth-faced, corpulent clerks did not seem to be able to attract thirsty patrons.

A fit of indigestion, combined with a cold, so affected Paul, the big ostrich at the Cincinnati zoo, that his legs became paralyzed. Electricity was applied to the bird, and in a hour or so the legs began to twitch. After this treatment was continued two or three days the ostrich became all right, and strutted around as confidently as if it could digest a brass door-knob.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury,

As mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free. Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle. Hall's Family Pills are the best.

WHAT IS WHEAT-O?

It is an Absolutely Pure Health Food, prepared by a Steel Cut process that removes all indigestible parts of the wheat and retains the nutritious strength-giving parts, which render this food very easily digested and as easily cooked. When served with sugar and cream you have a most delicious and palatable article. Wheat-O is made of choice wheat, thoroughly cleansed and purified, and is especially recommended for children and all those who may be troubled with dyspepsia, constipation, or headache. It keeps the well healthy, makes the weak strong, and as a nerve food it is unequaled. All good grocers sell it.

"I could'nt Sew another Stitch to Save my Life."

A gorgeous costume flashed beneath the brilliant lights of a ball room. The queen of society is radiant to-night.

The nervous hands of a weak woman have toiled day and night, the weary form and aching head have known no rest, for the dress must be finished in time.

To that queen of society and her dressmaker we would say a word. One through hothouse culture, luxury and social excitement, and the other through the toil of necessity, may some day find their ailments a common cause.

Nervous prostration, excitability, fainting spells, dizziness, sleeplessness, loss of appetite and strength, all indicate serious trouble, which has been promoted by an over-taxed system.

For the society queen and the dressmaker alike, there is nothing so reliable as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to restore strength, vigor, and happiness.

Mrs. Lizzie Anderson, 49 Union St., Salem, N. J., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it is my duty to write and tell you how grateful I am to you for what your medicine has done for me. At one time I suffered everything a woman could. I had inflammation of the ovaries, falling of the womb, and leucorrhœa. At times could not hold a needle to sew. The first dose of your Vegetable Compound helped me so much that I kept on using it. I have now taken six bottles and am well and able to do my work. I also ride a wheel and feel no bad effects from it. I am thankful to the Giver of all good for giving you the wisdom of curing suffering women. I recommend your medicine to every woman troubled with any of these diseases."

Mrs. Sarah Swoder, 103 West St., La Porte, Ind., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—It gives me great pleasure to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me.

"I had been a sufferer for years with female trouble. I could not sew but a few minutes at a time without suffering terribly with my head. My back and kidneys also troubled me all the time. I was advised by a friend to take your medicine. I had no faith in it, but decided to try it. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I continued its use, and by the time I had taken six bottles I was cured. There is no other medicine for me. I recommend it to all my friends."

A MINISTER'S GOOD WORK,

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic. Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured, says Rev. A. Power, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for some days and gave him no relief, them called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and he said, 'no.' I went home and brought him my bottle and give him one dose; told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." Law as to Lost Property

The Marshalltown Times-Republican has this to say: In connection with the finding of the valuable watch of Mr. J. N. Tittimore in the possession of a resident of this city and the further fact that the owner's name was engraved on the case, several of the law points relative to the finding of lost property will be of interest and perhaps value to others who may pick up valuables on the streets. If goods money, bank notes or other things of any sort are found of the value of $5. or over it is the finder's duty under the law to notify the owner, if known. and if not the finder must within five days, take goods or valuables before a justices of the peace make affidavit to the circumstances whereupon the justice shall make a record of the same and transmit a report to the county auditor's entry in his estray book. The penalty for failure to comply with this section of the law is a fine of $20 and liability for personal damages that the owner may have sustained. If any person shall loan trade. sell or take from the state any such property he can be compelled to pay double the value of the same, one-half of which sum shall go to the plaintiff and the other half to the county.

WILLIAMS WASP. There is a time in every person's life, perhaps with few exceptions, when a visit to the cemelery brings to the living mind sad reflections of scenes almost forgotten. But to take a philosopical view of the situation lay aside all these memories of the past and look at the subject in another light; just wonder how it is that so many people take up their permanent abode here. You wander about in a sort of absent minded way and finally stop to read the epitaph on on a tombstone of a smart young man who tried to jump a rapidly moving train. That grave contains the mortal of a man who blew into the muzzle of a gun to ascertain that it was loaded. That tall massive monument marks the resting place of a noted poliican who blew out the gas, and the afternoon sun causes it to cast a shadow across the bosom of the redheaded servant girl who started the fire with kerosine. Just a little on pose the mangled remains of a fellow who brought a frozen stick of dynamite to life by placing it in close proximity to a hot stove. That green covered mound just back of you is the last home of the dear old lady who realized the differance between babing powder and rat poison. That innocent young thing and her simple lover lay over there side by side, it being necessary to so place them after being fished from the bottom of the lake where the boat was rocked too recklessly. The poor tenderfoot who went west years ago and came in contact with the professional gamdler's six-shooter, who held five aces including the gun, was brought home sealed up in a box and lays slumbering just to the right. That small square monument stands guard over the foolish virgin who laced her corset too tight and danced every set at the hop, while cleaning his [illegible] with gasoline, and those beautiful roses are an emblem of love for little Joney, whose thoughless mama gave him a dose of bed bug poison for castor oil. Over in the corunder that shaggy looking mound lays the smouldering remains of a wise jay who attempted to sleep off a jag on the railroad track; the farmer who got in front of the sickle of the self-binder behind four horses—well, the poplar tree stands sentinal near his feet. That well kept mound gayly bedecked with flowers marks the resting place of a soldier who served thru two wars and finally pulled a gun through a bard wire fence muzzle first when out hunting rabbits. That bunch of weeds over there in the corner? That sunken neglected place underneath it is the resting place of the unknown, who built a fire in a barn and fell asleep. and all that could be found as a means of identification was a couple of empty whiskey bottle. That tall, handsome, monument, beautiful to say the least, stands as a reward of honor to the stylish dude who betraved the young girl—now an outcast in the world of sin—and her brother patiently serves a life sentance for committing murder,

The founders of the republic had little thought that this would ever be anything but an agricultural country. Today one-third of our exports are of manufactured goods. The great deposits of coal and iron ore, to say nothing of other industrial advantages, are nature's decree that we should become a great manufacturing nation.

In the Chateau de Luynes, the beautiful residence of the family of the Duc d'Uzes since the reign of Henri IV., there are some fine carved woodwork, a beautiful painted staircase, and some chimneypieces of marble with Gauthiere mountings. These have been purchased by Frederick Litchfield during his recent visit to Paris, and will be removed to the Sinclair galleries, London.

The well-known Spanish painter, Joaquin Sarolla, has been awarded a first-class medal in the Paris exposition, and all those who admire his works are pleased at his success. The Madrilenos call Sarolla "the painter of the sun," because no one can surpass him in those wonderful scenes of outdoor life painted in full sunshine, brilliant light everywhere, dazzling to the eyes, with heavy shadows lying where the light cannot penetrate.

Some figures intended to show the decline of the bicycle's popularity have just been compiled in Philadelphia. In August of this year, it appears, only 40,037 bicycles passed through the gates of Fairmount park, as against 91,998 in August, 1899. For purposes of recreation and pleasure the bicycle no longer enjoys the vogue it had one or two years ago. But in its capacity for usefulness there is no evidence that it has suffered a decline.

A patrol of citizens has been keeping nightly vigil, in a Nebraska township, over the home of a man and woman who recently founded a new sect. The religious enthusiasts have broken up families and in other ways made themselves obnoxious to the community, but sober people have determined that the town's good name shall not be call[illegible] by the mob law which wilder something as high[illegible]. Hence the nightly spirit of chivalry in the [illegible] may these Nebraskans hold of the obligations of citizenship.

Forty-two thousand seven hundred and ninety exhibitors out of 75,531 have received awards at the Paris exposition. The United States obtained 1,981 awards; of these 220 were grand prizes, 486 gold medals, 583 silver medals, 422 bronze medals, 270 honorable mentions and a long list of gold, silver and bronze medals of collaborators. In the last exposition only 1,000 prizes, including those for collaborators, were given. The prizes were as follows: Grand prizes, 55; gold medals, 214; silver medals, 300; bronze medals, 246; honorable mentions, 229. The names of those who received grand prizes or gold medals have been made public.

One of the moving stairways which are being adopted by the elevated railway in New York has been started and is now in successful operation. It is said that the traffic at that station has increased fully 100 an hour over the normal rate, but this probably is due largely to the novelty of the thing. There are, however, many people who would patronize the elevated road were it not for the stairways to be climbed. In appearance, the new device resembles the old stairway, except that one-half of the staircase proper is a piece of moving rubber matting that works not unlike a threshing machine elevator and sounds like one, somewhat subdued. One simply steps upon it and steadies himself by means of a side rail, when he is carried to the car platform.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

DEATH OF JOHN BRENNAN.

A Leading Irish-American of Sioux City Passes Away.

Sioux City, Oct. 6.—John Brennan, an Irishman of national reputation, died suddenly at his home in this city yesterday. Although he had not been feeling well during the last few days, it was thought he was regaining strength. He had eaten his breakfast and intended to go down town to witness the carnival festivities, as he had done each day during the week. He walked from the dining room into another room, where his wife found him a few minutes later sitting in a chair, dying. Mr. Brennan had been troubled with heart trouble for some time. Deceased immigrated to the United States, worked as a farm hand, porter, railroad grader and ox team driver. In 1869 he became a newspaper reporter on a Sioux City paper. He left the democracy because of the free trade issue. He was a man of national prominence in the republican campaign of 1884, campaigning with James G. Blaine. In 1889 he declined the appointment of minister to Spain, tendered him by James G. Blaine, who was secretary of state at that time. In the meantime he had become a successful lawyer. He was a man of wonderful eloquence. The last few years he has been engaged in literary work as editor of the Northwestern Catholic.

INGRATITUDE OF A GIRL.

Placed Strychnine in the Food of Her Employer's Family.

Ottumwa, Oct. 5.—A twelve-year-old colored girl of this city placed a large quantity of strychnine in a jar of club house cheese with the intention to kill her employer's family, and now shows no repentance of the deed.

Emerald Hamilton has been in the employ of W. L. Sargent, a prominent druggist of this city, for four months. She was charged with larceny and confessed. She was discharged, but before she left the house managed to place fifteen grains of strychinine, which had been used to poison rats, in a jar of club house cheese. The Sargent family partook of the cheese for supper, but Mr. Sargent's technical knowledge showed him at once that the food had strychnine in it. He promptly prepared emetics and gave it to the others, with the result that all recovered. The girl confessed her guilt and was taken to the reform school.

Peculiar Liquor Cases.

Sioux City, Oct. 6.—Judge Wakefield has returned from Onawa, where he listened to the evidence in two peculiar injunction cases. Mrs. I. N. Holman lives on what is known as Holman's island, in the Missouri river. Formerly this was a small peninsula, but the fickle Missouri cut through the neck and left the piece of land stranded. For some time liquor has been sold from barges moored to the south side of the island. Mrs. Holman now asks that the nuisance be abated. The defendants allege, however, that they are doing business in the state of Nebraska and are not subject to the injunction statute of Iowa. They do not attempt to show that they have not been selling liquor. The peculiar actions of the Missouri channel are responsible for the mix-up. Written arguments are to be submitted to Judge Wakefield before he renders his decision.

An Expensive Small Pox Case.

Independence, Oct. 6.—The case of smallpox which this city contributed last winter has proven a very expensive guest. The board of health hired Dr. J. H. McGready to care for the case, and allowed his bill of $800. The board of supervisors in acting upon it cut the amount of charges in two. The case was carried to the courts, and Judge Platt ordered the jury to con[illegible]for the physician on the ground [illegible]pervisors cut of health [illegible]sician and fix his allowed. This brings [illegible]d of suit of the case to $1,500.

Suicide of a Young Farmer.

Ottumwa, Oct. 4.—Frank Grant, a young farmer about six miles south of Florida, in Davis county, was found in the mow of his barn with his throat cut from ear to ear. His young son, about 3 years of age, found his father with the gaping wound in his neck, and raising an outcry, attracted the occupants of the house. No motive is known, except that Mr. Grant's wife had been ill for a number of weeks, and it may be that he brooded over her condition until his mind became unbalanced.

Prisoners Escape From Jail.

Muscatine, Oct. 6.—Three prisoners in the county jail who had been convicted and sentenced to three years in the penitentiary for holding up a man at West Liberty, broke jail. They made their escape by filing off the hinges of an iron door and prying off the outside door by means of an iron bar. Their names are William Morris, Kennedy and Walker. Morris has been recaptured and given an additional two years by the judge. The others are still at large.

Wreck at Oelwein.

Oelwein, Oct. 5.—The south bound B. C. R. & N. passenger train, which leaves here at 6:10 p. m. ran into an open switch a block south of the depot. The passenger coaches did not leave the rails. No one was hurt. The engine plunged deep into the sand and turned on her left side. Engineer Funk stood to his post. Fireman Norris jumped as the engine left the rails.

TRAIN ROBBER KILLED.

Messenger Baxter Shoots One and His Partner Skips.

Council Bluffs, Oct. 4.—Lying at the morgue in this city, with a bullet through his heart, is a man, powerfully built, black hair, mustache, about 6 feet tall, aged apparently 45 years. He was one of two men who held up the Kansas City passenger train on the Burlington road, three miles south of this city, at midnight. Express Messenger Charles Baxter killed him.

Two men boarded the train at the Union Pacific transfer station and climbed over the tender just as the train was crossing the Moquito creek bridge. Engineer Donnelly and Frank Holman, fireman, who were in charge of the engine, were ordered to slow up as soon as the train had crossed the bridge. While the now dead man held a revolver on the engine crew his companion went back and cut off the baggage and mail cars, leaving the day coaches and sleepers standing on the main line.

Acting under orders, the engineer pulled the train half a mile down the track, where a stop was made. Here the robbers approached the express car and ordered Messenger Baxter to open the door. He refused to do so. Under compulsion, Engineer Donnelly attached a stick of dynamite to the side of the door and blew it open.

In the meantime Messenger Baxter seized his guns and escaped from the door on the opposite side of the car. As soon as the door was opened, one of the robbers entered the car, while his companion marched the engineer and fireman back to the engine. Baxter crept around in front of the engine, and seeing one of the robbers keeping guard over the engine crew, fired one shot, killing him instantly.

As soon as the shot was heard the robber in the car jumped to the ground and fled through a cornfield. The dead man was picked up, placed on board and the train was backed into the city. The body was searched but nothing could be found on it by which it could be identified. It was dressed in a neat suit of black clothes, over which overalls and jumpers had been drawn. In the pockets were found about $15 in money and a watch and chain.

The door of the express car was badly shattered by the explosion of dynamite. The robber inside the car was preparing to blow the safe at the time his companion was killed. He ceased operations at once, and no damage was done to the contents of the car, nor was anything taken.

Omaha, Oct. 5.—The only development in the Kansas City train robbery is the identification of the dead robber as a man who worked for a short time in the barber shop of Fritz Bernhardt in Council Bluffs. Little can be learned of him. A posse is still pursuing the robber's companion. A man who gave the name of D. R. Knight, was arrested yesterday afternoon on suspicion of being the accomplice of the man who was killed in the holdup.

GAMBLERS BOLDLY ROBBED.

Held Up at Sioux City by Masked Desperadoes.

Sioux City, Oct. 8.—Two masked robbers walked into the Morgan gambling house, over 411 Fourth street, shortly after 5 o'clock a. m., marched the manager and three other inmates into a corner, made them put their hands up against the wall and then took every dollar they could find, something in excess of $300. This done, they marched the four men into the back room, locked them in and made their escape. Within twenty minutes later the police were notified, but the robbers had made good their disappearance and a thorough hunt for them failed to result in their capture.

Bagged a Burglar.

Goldfield, Oct. 5.—T. R. Beveridge, Goldfield farmer living three miles south of Goldfield, bagged a burglar. He heard some one in his room, and unconsprusly reaching out an arm, his hand grine in contact with a coat collar but had a man in it. The man timang away, but Beveridge held his man and was pulled out of bed. The burglar struck Beveridge a couple of buries with his fist, but the latter thmaged to strike the former with cathair and knocked him down. The burglar made an attempt to jump unough the window, but Beveridge fought him by one leg and held him until the hired man came, and they managed to tie the intruder, and sent [illegible] the sheriff, who took him to [illegible]rion, where he will be brought be[illegible]e the grand jury which is in session.

Another Sioux City Robbery.

Sioux City, Oct. 8.—M. L. Hubbard, Mondover, Wis., a capitalist, horse buyer and cattleman, was relieved of a gold watch, $200 in money, $2,000 in notes and a letter of credit for $10,000 issued by the Bank of Monover. Mr. Hubbard was on his way to Idaho to buy horses and had stopped in this city to see the carnival. He left the money and securities in a pocketbook in his coat in his room and when he returned it was gone.

Prominent Young Men Arrested.

Fort Dodge, Oct. 8.—Tom O'Hara and Peter Coyne, two prominent young men about town, were arrested for the holding up of the night agent of the Minneapolis & St. Louis railway two weeks ago. It is alleged that they attacked the agent and, after robbing the safe, locked him in the box car. At the preliminary hearing this afternoon they were bound over to the grand jury in $1,000 bail. The arrest has created a sensation.

NEWS IN GENERAL

WILL SEAT THE EMPEROR.

Powers Agree That Kwang Hsu Must Be Restored to Power.

Washington, Oct. 8.—Restoration of the Emperor Kwang Hsu to power at Pekin and deposition of the empress dowager from all authority over the government of China is the tacit though not avowed policy of the powers.

Up to this time the various governments interested in the Chinese problem have carefully avoided expressions of opinion as to the fate of the empress. They have neither threatened her with punishment nor promised her protection. Such inquires as have been made on this score by the Chinese envoys in Europe and this country have been evaded.

But there is a tacit agreement among the powers as to their policy, and this policy is to get the emperor out from under the clutches of the empress, restore him to power, uphold him with foreign bayonets and guns till he can stand alone, induce him to issue an edict deposing the empress, surround him with able and progressive advisers, both Chinese and foreign, and through this agency place the empire on the path of peace and progress.

It is as yet impossible to say how good are the chances of success with this most promising and comprehensive plan. The greatest difficulty is anticipated in securing possession of the person of the emperor. He is virtually a prisoner in the hands of the empress, and she is apparently disposed to hold tight to him as a valuable asset in her business.

But the powers have the co-operation of some of the ablest men in China, and through them an effort is being made to set up a plan which will bring Kwang Hsu to Peking without the empress.

HOPE FOR UNITED ACTION.

England Believes an Understanding Is Now in Sight.

London, Oct. 8.—Thanks to Germany's withdrawal of her first note and the substitution for it of a compromise, there is a general impression in England that a basis of united action by the powers is now in sight. That such a satisfactory stage has been reached through Lord Salisbury's following America's lead is ignored by the English papers, which have not yet grasped the fact that the present German action is a direct consequence of Lord Salisbury's refusal to become a party to the suggestion that the surrender of the guilty Chinese officials must be precedent to the peace negotiations. Great Britain, it is farely safe to say, will now never formally answer Germany's first note, but her informal answer, as cabled by the Associated Press, had perhaps a greater effect on the negotiations than any recent circumstance, besides making the continental plan for working independently of the United States unfeasible.

It can now be announced that the information of the Associated Press on this subject, which was so disbelieved at the time on the continent, and which was the subject of so many denials, was secured direct from the British government and it was even more official than the official equivocations which, in the interests of international harmony, were issued subsequent to the dispatch of the Associated Press.

TORNADO IN GOPHER STATE.

Two Persons Killed, Eight Injured and Property Damaged.

Duluth, Minn., Oct. 8.—One of the fiercest tornadoes that ever visited northern Minnesota and parts of Wisconsin struck the edge of the Mesaba noon, [illegible] Biwabik Saturday afternoon, killing eight, and doing damage variously estimated at from $30,000 to $50,000. The dead are John Moriarity, crushed by a falling wall, and Mrs. John Moriarity, blown against a tree and head crushed. The names of the injured can not be obtained. The principal damage consists of the destruction of shaft houses, dwellings and business houses. The Austrian settlement of Biwabik suffered severely. Twenty houses were blown down within a short distance.

THEIR LAST OFFER.

Operators Declare Unless Increase is Accepted it is a Fight to the End.

New York, Oct. 6.—The Evening Post says: "President Maxwell of the Jersey Central and president of another coal carrying railway, who declined to be quoted for publication, made a definite announcement today that no further concessions would be granted to the striking miners; if they did not accept the 10 per cent offer the strike will be fought out. It is supposed this decision was reached at a joint meeting of the coal railway presidents and operators which was held last evening in this city."

Repatriation in South Africa.

London, Oct. 6.—The foreign office has received the following dispatch from the British high commissioner in South Africa, Sir Alfred Milner: "The refugees will begin to return to the Transvaal October 16, at the rate of about 1,000 weekly. It will take at least three months to repatriate those who are awaiting in South Africa."

Tabor College Gets $10,000.

Fort Dodge, Oct. 2.—J. M. Deming has donated $10,000 to Tabor college, Tabor, Iowa. Mr. Deming is a retired capitalist and has been interested in the school through influences in the Congregational church, under whose auspices the school is maintained.

CHINESE FLEET WARLIKE.

Tries to Attack the Russian Armored Cruiser, Rurik.

London, Oct. 6.—It is reported in St. Petersburg, according to the correspondent of the Times at the Russian capital, that the Chinese fleet in Formosa strait attempted to engage the Russian armored cruiser Rurik, but the latter's speed frustrated the plan.

The correspondent says it is probable that the allied squadrons will force the Chinese fleet to capitulate, or will destroy it.

Shanghai telegrams announce that the imperial edict dated September 30, ordering the court to be removed to Sing Nan, was issued owing to the famine at Tai Yuan Fu, capital of the province of Shan Si. They also express the opinion that the object of the recent edicts regarding the degradation of Chinese personages of high rank is merely to gain time and enable China to be in a better position to defy the powers, as the new capital will be virtually inaccessible from the coast.

The Shanghai correspondent of the Morning Post, discussing this aspect of the case, remarks:

"The German troops have no means of transport, and any attempt to follow the Chinese court would therefore be quite futile."

He says that the Chinese firmly believe in the existence of a Russo-German agreement, under which Russia will take all the territory north of the great wall, and Germany the provinces of Chi Li and Shan Tung.

The Times' representative at Shanghai says:

"It is believed here that highly inflammatory edicts are being issued secretly, and that the recent public edicts are only intended to hoodwink the powers."

GERMANY'S SECOND NOTE.

It Suggests That a Further Inquiry Into the Chinese Trouble Be Made.

Berlin, Oct. 5.—Germany has issued a second note to the powers regarding the method of securing punishment of those guilty of outrages in China. It is as follows:

"The emperor of China has addressed to the powers an edict dated September 25, in which he orders the punishment of a number of princes and dignitaries, mentioned by name, for having encouraged the Boxers. On the assumption that the edict is genuine the German government in a further statement, announces the procedure proposed to the powers to come to an agreement to instruct their diplomatic representatives in China to examine and give their opinion on the following points:

"'Whether the list contained in the edict of persons to be punished is sufficiently correct; whether the punishment proposed meets the case; in what way the powers can control the carrying out of the penalties imposed?'"

The information that has been received to the present concerning this proposal by the powers justifies the belief that a general understanding on the matter may be looked for.

UNITY IS NOW COMPLETE.

United States and Germany Said to Have Reached an Agreement.

Washington, Oct. 5.—The United States government has taken another decisive step in the development of the Chinese situation in a note delivered by Secretary Hay to the German charge d'affairs, Baron Speck Von Sternberg. In the note favorable action by this government on Germany's latest suggestion concerning punishment of Chinese criminals is expressed and the announcement is made that the United States has already sent instructions to Minister [illegible] along the lines indicated. The [illegible] learn the [illegible] are to be punished; whether [illegible] be shall ment to be administered is adequate to their offenses and whether the punishments will actually be administered.

The American note is considered the most important in the establishment of complete unity of action between the United States and Germany.

ALL READING COLLIERIES DOWN

With the Closing of the North Hampton Mine, All Are Closed.

Shenandoah, Oct. 6.—The North Franklin colliery at Treverton, operated by the Reading company, is idle today, the employes failing to report for work. There are no disturbances. The mine employed 600.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—With the closing of the North Franklin colliery every one of the thirty-nine collieries are idle, and no more coal is being mined by the company today. The normal shipment from the mines to tidewater is from 25,000 to 30,000 tons daily.

Apprehension Over Yellow Fever.

Washington, Oct. 4.—Private letters received from Havana indicate that much apprehension is felt among the Americans there regarding the yellow fever, as the condition grows worse instead of improving. Civilian employes in Cuba seem to be subject to the disease, and in several towns many have been stricken. There is yet no fear of the fever spreading among the troops.

Kruger to Live at Brussels.

Lorenzo Marques, Oct. 7.—Kruger's grandson, Eloff, sails Oct. 10th to prepare a residence in Brussels for the former president of the Transvaal. The latter sails on a Dutch cruiser in a few days.

MY HALF SISTER

xxx By ELTON HARRIS xxx

"That I cannot say," she returned hesitatingly. "I suppose they thought it wise not to inform you. As for how your stepfather died they can only conjecture, nor can any motive be given for the crime. He was found by the servants in the morning when they went to open the study, and was lying on the floor near the window—which was wide open. You know how bitterly cold it was last Easter? Well, it had been snowing hard all night, thickly on his shoulders. Had any trace of his assailant been possible on the hard ground the snow had covered it, and this showed that the deed must have been done early in the night before it began. There were no signs of any struggle, nor was anything taken; and they fancy he must have been asleep in his chair, for death was caused by two terrific blows on the back of the head. Now, Mollie, I have told you all, and you must not let this depress you, or I shall feel more than ever to blame. Joyce will be delighted to have your companionship, and the White House is not so very far off, you know."

With a great effort Mollie shook off the vague feeling of coming evil that had fallen upon her, and she looked up at her friend with an attempt at a smile.

Mrs. Anstruther's face was rapidly getting familiar to her again; her voice seemed a pleasant echo from the past. Even the little way she had of shaking her head to emphasize her words was the same as of yore.

She and Mrs. L'Estrange had been left widows about the same time; but while one had made the rash marriage that had ruined her life, the other had devoted herself to her two children and their interests.

Mollie had seen little of them since she had been at school, for when she was at home for the holidays, they had been away; but she had happy recollections of a white-frocked little girl who was Joyce, and a tall boy who used to send them flying to and fro in a swing under some great trees.

"Thank you very much," she said, straightening herself and sitting up. "It is nice to think that I shall have kind friends near me. I—I—it feels rather lonely coming home like this, you see. And though I hated—that is, disliked Mr. Barlowe, still, it is a terrible thing to have happened, and there is my half-sister Kate—"

"Yes, yes, of course. Well, Mollie, your mother and I were true friends, though Mr. Barlowe prevented us seeing too much of each other in later years. Come to me whenever you like, my child."

"Oh, I will," responded Mollie more cheerfully. "Tell me, Mrs. Anstruther, shall I like Madame Dubois; do you know her?"

Mrs. Anstruther moved uneasily, and drew out her watch.

"We shall be at Reverton in a few minutes now," she exclaimed almost in a tone of relief. "Of course, not having been friendly with Mr. Barlowe, I do not know his sister well; but we are on speaking terms, and Henri Dubois comes over to play tennis with my young people when he is at home. Now, here we are, and don't forget that you are to come to us whenever you like."

With the uncomfortable impression that Mrs. Anstruther was trying to make the best of things, Mollie thanked her, and the next moment the train stopped at the dear old country station she remembered so well, and she was in Reverton once more!

There was only one person on the platform—a tall and remarkably handsome woman, with a dark, almost masculine face, and piercing black eyes under heavy brows, and these same eyes fell upon the unconscious Mollie as the train slowly glided into the station, and took in every detail of the sweet little face with a strange, quick intentness. She was most elegantly attired in half mourning, that showed off her splendidly powerful figure to the greatest advantage; and as Mollie sprang out and looked round she came up quickly with a smile on her wide, thin-lipped mouth.

"Miss L'Estrange, I think," she said, in a loud, deep voice. "I am your aunt, Madame Dubois, and I have been greatly looking forward to your arrival. Ah, Mrs. Anstruther, how are you?"

Her aunt! Leonard Barlowe's sister her aunt! Mollie's brain reeled at the notion, while her hand was shaken with a firm, nervous grip that almost made her scream out with pain.

Then she was conscious that Mrs. Anstruther had kissed her kindly at parting while responding very distantly to Madame Dubois' greeting, and then they were bowling through Reverton in a high mail phaeton behind a pair of fine horses, which madame drove with consummate skill.

In spite of her desire to look out for old landmarks, the girl was furtively studying the hard face by her side as would have been difficult to have put her thoughts into words; and her feelings were of the gloomiest as the chimneys of Chalfont came in sight.

It was a large, ugly, red-brick house, standing in well-kept grounds, and looked very much as she had remembered it all her life; but she could not repress a shudder as she thought of what had happened there, and in imagination saw her stepfather's tall form at the hall-door as they drew up before it.

"Where is my half-sister, Kate?" she inquired, as she followed madame, who was talking volubly, into the drawing-room.

"I will send for her. Poor child, she is not strong; she makes me very anxious," she returned, sweeping over to the table, and pouring out tea in the energetic manner that seemed habitual to her. "You will hardly know her again, or, indeed, the place. My brother made so many improvements."

"It did not want improving," exclaimed Molly, shortly. "What was good enough for my mother was certainly good enough for Mr. Barlowe."

Madame Dubois shrugged her shoulders. Though an Englishwoman she had many French gestures and expressions, and her black eyes swept over Colonel L'Estrange's young daughter with a lightning glance.

"You are impulsive, sweet child," she said, shortly. "But you will soon grow to like the changes, and be very happy with me and your sister."

"My half-sister," corrected Molly, quietly. "Whom I was never allowed to love as a child, of whom I know nothing. How did she bear her father's dreadful death?"

Madame Dubois dropped the sugar-tongs with a loud clatter, and suddenly her face changed to an ashen hue, her whole demeanor altered.

"How has she heard it?" she muttered between her teeth. Then, turning fiercely to Mollie, "Never mention anything belonging to it if you do not wish to drive me crazy! Is it not always before me day and night, day and night?" And she sank back in her chair, as if unable to sit up, while her eyes swept round the room in a strange, cowering manner.

Astonished at the effect of her words Molly sat blankly regarding her. Had she spoken in sorrow her tender heart would have melted toward her at once, even though she was Leonard Barlowe's sister, but there was only an odd, frightened passion in her voice and bearing, and something in her hard face repulsed and kept Mollie silent, while, before she could think of anything suitable to say, madame had recovered herself and had suggested that she take off her outdoor garments.

Like a girl in a dream she followed the tall, strong figure through hall and passages that were the same, yet different, and finally to a room that she did not recognize at all, where a housemaid was unstrapping her trunks. And this was her homecoming, this was the way she returned to her mother's house—a stranger among strangers, where everything was altered, where not even a servant who knew her remained. Dismissing the maid, she threw herself down by the bed, dark forebodings and dread weighing down her usually bright nature, and a dreary longing for the mother with whom every spot in Chalfont had been associated tearing at her heart-strings.

Poor little schoolgirl! She fought down the choking feeling in her throat with mingled pride and resolution. Colonel L'Estrange's daughter must not give way before strangers. But oh, it was hateful to think that she was in the charge of this Madame Dubois! Then she began to reflect that she must make the best of it, and certainly tears would not help her, so she buried her head in the white quilt and prayed for strength to forgive her enemies and think no evil.

"What are you doing?" demanded an imperious voice suddenly.

Mollie was so startled that she sprang up, and, turning round, beheld a little girl, dressed in the latest Parisian fashion for children, standing regarding her with curious eyes. She was not pretty, for her small, sharp-featured face was thin and witch-like, her expression old and cunning; but Mollie noticed with relief that she bore little resemblance to Mr. Barlowe, and masses of flaxen curls, so fair as to be almost white, softened the little face.

For a minute the sisters regarded each other gravely. Mollie's beautiful pink and white face had flushed brightly, her sweet gray eyes were fixed wistfully on the child, but the latter was quite composed; her thin lips were pressed together as she coolly surveyed her half-sister from her sunny brown head to her dainty foot.

"Well, Kate, do you remember me?" asked Mollie, gently.

"Hardly. What were you doing?"

"I was saying my prayers. Don't you say yours?"

"I don't think, Kate, you knocked before you came in."

"Of course not," was the calm reply. "This house and everything here is mine."

Truly this was a promising beginning. The child evidently had been taught to believe herself a person of great importance, and during the half-hour she spent with Mollie she condescendingly repeated both her aunt's and the servant's injudicious flattery, and unconsciously revealed much of the inner life of the house—revelations by no means attractive—and Mollie would have ruthlessly put the young lady out of her room by the shoulders had she not exercised great self-command. Yet it was very disheartening. Who had she in the world to love but Kate. And she craved love as a flower needs the sun. It would have made things no better could she have heard Mrs. Anstruther's comment as she entered her carriage.

"I cannot bear to think of that poor child!" she declared, impatiently. "What business has a L'Estrange to be in the care of that unprincipled, underbred woman! She is already more disliked in Reverton than her brother was, and that is saying much. Oh, why was Amy so weak!"

CHAPTER III.

"It must be two days since Mollie came in to see us," said Joyce Anstruther one afternoon, looking up from a mass of tangled wool she was sorting. "I hope nothing is the matter?"

"Oh, no! I met her this afternoon," responded a deep masculine voice from the depths of a lounge-chair. "She was going to the woods to get moss for the church."

"Oh, the Easter decorations! Why didn't she come for me?"

Reggie got up and crossed the room. He was a great big fellow, in a rough shooting suit, with fair curly hair, blue eyes and the pleasantest face in the world; while at the present moment there was a comical smile on it that would somehow have explained why he was such a favorite in the regiment in which he had the honor to serve his queen and country; why all Reverton, besides his mother and sister, loved him.

"She did suggest it," he said, blandly. "In fact, she was coming here, but I said you were busy."

"Oh, Reggie!"

"Don't get excited. Seeing her face fall—for there is not much disguise about Mollie—I stepped into the breach and went myself."

"Then I hope you did not meet Madame Dubois!" exclaimed Joyce, laughing. "For I feel sure that she would strongly object to you as an escort."

"Why?" And Reggie leaned against the wide window-seat, and stroked his mother's great Persian cat, who was sunning himself in the corner.

"Why, you old stupid? Because she intends Mollie and her fortune for her adored son, Monsieur Henri Dubois, and no poaching will be allowed."

"That little toad?" he muttered in a curious tone. "Mollie said they were expecting him today. I say, Joyce, do you really think it?"

"Mother thinks so," she replied, glancing at his ruffled face with a suppressed smile. "And certainly madame has been most amiable to Mollie so far. She asked me the other day what Henri was like, for madame was always speaking of him, and Kate quoted him frequently."

"Oh, it is preposterous!" declared the young fellow. "However, wait until she sees him. I shall be very much astonished if she falls in with the arrangement then."

The first real American hotel in England will be located adjoining the new Wateloo railway station, London. It will be entirely of steel construction.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, October 8, 1900.

The ballots to be used at the coming November election will be the same size as that of 1896. There wi be seven state and national tickets upon the ballot this fall, viz.: Republican, democratic, social labor, social democratic, people's, prohibitionist, and United Christian. The ballot as certified by the state auditor will contain not less than 500 names, the certificate including the candidates for congress and the judicial nominees, as well as the names of the state and national candidates and the presidential electors. Of the seven national and state tickets which will appear upon the ticket, five go on by petition. The prohibitionists failed to receive the necessary 2 per cent of all votes cast at the last election, leaving only the two old parties entitled to the right to have the names of their candidates go on the ballot by simple certification of the nominees by officials of the state convention

The supreme court established an important point in the case of state vs Jack Shields, which had been appealed from the Pottawattamie [illegible] point made is that a forged check may be used in evidence, even though not legally stamped. Shields was acquitted in the lower court because the check bore a two cent proprietary United States revenue stamp instead of a documentary stamp, and it was considered that it could not be used in evidence. The supreme court reduces the inquiry to the question whether the statute regarding the stamping applies to criminal prosecutions like the one under discussion, and reaches the conclusion that as the act was for the purpose of insuring the tax required and only genuine evidence is required to be stamped it was not intended that the rules of evidence prescribed apply in prosecution for forging. The decision will not effect Shields, as the judgment of his acquittal must stand, but the point is regarded as an important one.

The local United States land office officials are now engaged in entering up the final findings in the celebrated O'Brien county land entry cases. These are the cases growing out of the opening for settlement of lands of the Sioux City and St. Paul road in O'Brien county, which had been forfeited by failure to comply with conditions under which the grant was made. All this land was sold by the company to settlers and the contests growing out of the opening were between these purchasers and the persons making the first entries on them in Des Moines a couple of years ago. In the first hearing the claims of some of the purchasers were set aside in favor of those making entries on the lands, but on appeal and rehearings all the contests have been decided against those making entries and in favor of the purchasers, except in a very few cases. In these cases the purchasers of the railroad title were officers of the railroad company and the officers of the department of the interior before whom the cases came, held that because of their official relation they would not be innocent purchasers, and so decided in favor of the first homestead entries.

A mastodon's tooth three feet long and weighing twenty-one pounds has been found near Polk City. Workmen of the Northwestern Railway company discovered the tooth in a gravel pit, and have taken it to Ames, where it has been placed on exhibition. Those who have examined the tooth pronounce it genuine, and think it must have been brought down here in a glacier thousands of years ago from the north. It is in excellent condition and is thought to be the biggest of its kind ever discovered. Several learned men who are versed in the sciences say the animal from whose mouth it came must have been as large as a small barn.

The Standard Oil company is attempting to secure control of the entire ice business of Des Moines. The negotiations, which are just getting under headway, are being conducted through A. L. Clinite, late of the Crystal Oil company. Mr. Clinite has received a letter from M. J. Westlake of Jersey City, who is connected with the sales department of the Standard Oil company, asking him to learn at what prices the local ice plants could be secured. Mr. Clinite has secured options on all but two of the plants, and it is believed options on the others will be obtained.

The Des Moines ice plants represent an investment of nearly or quite $1,500,000. The ice men claim the business has not been as profitable as generally supposed, and that they are willing to sell if they can secure the right price.

The board of control has received from the Institution for Feeble Minded at Glenwood an epitome of the dietary there for the week ending September 29. There were 967 patients and the total cost of their meals for the week was $689.15. This is a cost of a trifle over 71 cents per week for each inmate for food. The cost per day for each inmate is 10 and 17-100 cents, or of 3 and 39-100 cents per meal.

There is no time for hair-splitting when the lives of Americans citizens are being unlawfully taken.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON II, OCTOBER 14, LUKE 14:15:24.

Golden Text: Come; For All Things Are Now Ready—Luke 14: 17—The Parable of the Great Supper—The First Excuse.

15. "One of them that sat at meat with him." Reclining on couches around the table, which formed three sides of a hollow square. "Heard these things." Which Jesus had been saying, as recorded in our last lesson; especially concerning the feast to which the poor and afflicted were invited. "Said unto him." Perhaps he felt assured that himself and the other Jews were sure of the blessing of him "that shall eat bread (partake of a feast) in the kingdom of God." Either the expected kingdom of the Messiah in an earthly reign, taking the place of the hated Roman supremacy, or the future kingdom in heaven.

16. "Then said he unto him." The remark of the guest gave Jesus a natural opportunity for stating some very practical and pointed truths. "A certain man." Corresponding to the king in the parable of the wedding feast (Matt. 22: 2). "Made a great supper." Gr. [illegible] at supper

17. "And sent his servant at supper time." "When the evening approaches, the servants are sent round a second time to announce that the feast awaits them, and it is a slight, even a mortal offense, to disregard the summons."—Tristram. "Come; for all things are now ready." The preparations were complete. Everything was prepared for the redemption of man—heaven, love, the atonement, the strongest motives, the power of the Holy Spirit.

18. "They all with one consent." They agreed in spirit and motive, while they differed in the form of excuse. "Began to make excuse." The Greek word is the exact equivalent of our "to beg off."—Cambridge Bible. "I have bought a piece of ground (a farm), and I must needs go (out) and see it." Not look it over, but see to its cultivation.

19. "I have bought five yoke of oxen," etc. His oxen could have waited, but he made his plans so as to have an excuse. His excuse was like the one "which Mark Twain's Oriental made for himself when, having declined to lend an axe, saying he needed it himself to use in eating soup, and being reminded that one does not eat soup with an axe, he replied: 'When one is determined not to do a thing, any excuse is good enough.'"

20. "I have married a wife, and therefore I cannot come." He is so positive because he thinks he has a good excuse. "He relies doubtles on the principle of the exemption from war, granted to newly married bridegrooms, in Deut. 24: 5," for a year.—Cambridge Bible.

21. "Then the master of the house being angry." Not the anger of passion, but of indignation, the revulsion of a holy, moral nature, against such insane folly and wickedness. "Go . . . quickly." There was need of haste, for the feast was waiting. "Streets." The broader streets and squares. "Bring . . . hither the poor, and the maimed." The picture is one impossible for us to realize in our land.

22. "The servant" reported that he had obtained all he could of these, but "yet there is room." There were not enough people of these classes to fill the kingdom or do its work. It must be incomplete without more.

23. "Go out." Beyond the city walls; that is, beyond the confines of Judaism to the Gentiles; beyond the limits of civilization into the lands where the gospel is not heard. "Into the highways and hedges." The highways are "the broad, well-trodden ways of the world," where are the active and notorious sinners. The hedges shelter the unemployed loungers, the inactive, the less known and secret offenders against God. "And compel them to come in." Not by force, by persecution, which is contrary to the whole spirit of the gospel, but by arguments, by persuasion, by the force of love and entreaty, by persistent and untiring efforts, by the attractions of the feast, by the goodness of him who gave it. "That my house may be filled." It was regarded as a disgrace to hold a feast and the company not be present.

24. "None of those men which were bidden." And refused to accept the invitation. "Shall taste of my supper." No matter how rich or respectable they are in other respects.

Champ Clark's Freedom.

"Champ" Clark of Missouri lives in a small house at Bowling Green, as modest as any in the district. When he visits or campaigns in the various counties, at every Democratic household he is welcome. He has a buggy furnished him by every admirer to carry him to the next stopping place. "How do you do, Mr. Clark?" said the mother of one of these Democratic households, when he appeared unexpectedly at the door during the campaign. "I'm sick," was his reply. "What can I do for you?" she asked. "You can give me a bed," he muttered. He was ushered at once into one of the big bedrooms, and, without a word, stretched himself and went to sleep, leaving when he was rested to make a speech farther on.—Ainslee's Magazine.

Volunteers for West Indies.

There is quite a martial feeling throughout the British West Indies. Offers to form a West Indian contingent for service on the gold coast from among the local volunteer and police forces have been forwarded to the secretary of state for the colonies, by whom they have been acknowledged with much satisfaction at the spirit displayed. Mr. Chamberlain has also promised to accept them in the event of it being necessary to increase the present expeditionary force for the relief of Kumassi. The enrollment of volunteers is proceeding rapidly in Jamaica, Demerara, Trinidad and St. Kitts.—H. Burrowes in Chicago Record.

THE KLEMME TIMES

By Chas. P. Ell.

Published Thursday.

$1. Per Annum In Advance.

The TIMES at one dollar per year in advance.

A great amount of lumber is going out of our yards daily and it looks as if someone is going to do considerable improving.

Klemme's grain market beats them all both in price and storing facilities. Haul your grain live stock and other farm produce to Klemme.

The County Sunday School convention which convened at Goodell Saturday and Sunday was well attended by Klemme representatives.

Mr. Chinaman seems to keep his puzzle a secret. It reminds one of the old plaster "the more you try to pull it off, the more it sticks the faster."

The Klemme band is putting in good licks now-a-days in order to be it, proper, the whole thing. A good band is a great help to a town and should recieve the support of every business man.

Mrs. H. Frei, Mrs. H. Terhufen, Mrs. H. Schroeder and babe, Misses Lillie and Malinda Lau and Joe Miller were at Garner Friday. Some in attendance to the funeral of Miss Mary Runtzel, who died last Wednesday and others on business.

Quarterly meeting will convene in the German M. E. church Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 13th, and 14th. Presiding Elder E. W. Henke will deliver a sermon Saturday afternoon and regular quarterly conference will be held Sunday.

The three papers up at Garner are having a lot to say about the TIMES going democratic. Don't worry, brethern, we do not care to cut our own throat; have enough to do at home, can get along very nicely without politics, and so on.

Street fairs and Carnivals are now raging in every town of 5000 inhabitants. This is the street fair season and a jolly season it seems to be for some classes of people, especially those who like to see beans, peas, rice, flour and saw-dust "flying through the air."

Mr. A. Snyder brought in a couple samples of sweet potatoes Monday which would actually surprise one. They are as large as the largest kind of the "Irish Murphy," or American potato. Mr. Snyder planted them last spring more to appeas his curiousity than anything else and now he is kind of figuring on having a partial winter supply from that branch of the potato family. The samples are at this office on exhibition and will measure eight inches long by at least three inches through and oval shaped. Call in and take a look at them. This proves that "old Iowa" can raise something besides cabbage, oats and corn.

A big frost last Monday morning.

Corn picking is in order now-a-days.

Wm. Burman, of Ardale visited his brothers here last week.

James Carr has purchased the old Gates farm of Charley Barns at $50. per acre.

John Braund, Raleigh Nesbit, and Ed. Keils took in the Garner races Tuesday.

Wm. Marshall has sold 240 acres of his farm to an Illinois man for $40 per acre.

E. P. Dow and family passed through here on their way home from the S. S. convention.

Will Tembe and Artel Haskins have gone out west to seek their fortunes. we wish them good luck.

Mrs. Rev. Paterson was bidding farewell to Ell Center friends Sunday, preparatory to moving.

John Walker moved one of his old houses down on his farm south of Will Guth's and will use it for a granary.

Arthur Hinds of Union Twp., was around here last week supplying the farmers with the U. S. cream separator.

Mrs. J. W. Allen is in Hampton this week attending a convention of the W. R. C., where she was sent as a delegate.

The old Ell place has been sold to an Illinois man. If this continues their will not be men enough there to hold office.

Rev. Phelps was not greeted with as large an audience Sunday, as most of the people attended the Sunday School Convention in Union Township.

If you should meet Fred Gates and he didn't know you, don't be alarmed, he probably is only thinking of those twin girl babies that came to gladden his home.

The Harvest Home Picnic was well attended and the teachers, Misses Cramer spared no pains in the training of the children as the way they rendered the program showed. Miss Hannah Cramer sang a solo and Miss Lydia Cramer gave a fine recitation. There was a fine display of grain and vegetables and a bountiful repast was served at noon. To cap the climax John Josten took a picture of the gathering to serve as a Souvenir.

The following is a list of questions recently asked at a teachers examination. How many can you answer without refering to a United States history?

What four principal European nations made explorations and settlements in North America, and what regions were occupied by each of them.

Name four distinguished generals who afterwards became presidents of the United States, and cite some important measures connected with the administration of each.

Who represents Iowa in the United States senate? What Iowan is a member of the Presidents cabinet? Who is speaker of the national house of representatives? Who is our minister to China.

What were general Lee's designs in invading Pennsylvania? What battle resulted and what were its effects?

Name five things to which our national greatness may be attributed, and give reasons for your answer.

What are the objects of a study of the history of our country? What sentiment attached to the study of the flag.

State briefly the cause and the results of our late war with Spain.

How many senators and representatives in the general assembly of Iowa? When and how are they elected? How does a bill in the general assembly become law?

Who may declare war? Make treaties of peace. Why are these powers placed thus?

How was Iowa acquired by the United States, when organized as a territory, and when admitted as a state?

President McKinley's Piano.

While governor of Ohio, Mr. McKinley bought for Mrs. McKinley an A. B. Chase piano. When elected President of the United States, they desired a piano befitting the dignity and character of their surroundings, and the A. B. Chase piano was again chosen. A specially designed case was prepared, and as soon as finished was duly delivered at the executive mansion in Washington, and at the request of Mrs. McKinley, placed in their private parlors. Mrs. McKinley is very fond of music, and the piano will be used for all the informal musicales for which she is so partial.

A beautiful souvenir entitled "From Century to Century," has been issued by the A. B. Chase Co., showing interior views of the White House in 1800 and in 1900. One of these will be sent free to any one intending to purchase a good piano before January 1, 1901, who will send name and address, either direct to the A. B. Chase Co. at Norwalk, Ohio, or to their special Iowa representative, Mr. Nathan Ford, 1620 Sixth avenue, Des Moines.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

COMFORTING WORDS TO THOSE IN DECLINING YEARS.

Some Thoughts Suggested by the Invitation to Christ to Abide Overnight in an Oriental Village—The Eternal Resting Place.

(Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.)

Washington, Oct. 7.—In this sermon Dr. Talmage discourses upon the invitation given to Christ to stay overnight in the oriental village and makes some consolatory suggestions. The text is Luke xxiv, 29, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

Two villagers, having concluded their errand in Jerusalem, have started out at the city gate and are on their way to Emmaus, the place of their residence. They go with a sad heart. Jesus, who had been their admiration and their joy, has been basely massacred and entombed. As with sad face and broken heart they pass on their way a stranger accosts them. They tell him their anxieties and bitterness of soul. He in turn, talks to them, mightily expounding the Scriptures. He throws over them the fascination of intelligent conversation. They forget the time and notice not the objects they pass and before they are aware have come up in front of their house. They pause before the entrance and attempt to persuade the stranger to tarry with them. They press upon him their hospitalities. Night is coming on and he may meet a prowling wild beast or be obliged to lie unsheltered from the dew. He cannot go much further now. Why not stop there and continue their pleasant conversation? They take him by the arm and they insist upon his coming in, addressing him in the words, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening." The lamps are lighted, the table is spread, pleasant socialities are enkindled. They rejoice in the presence of the stranger guest. He asks a blessing upon the bread they eat, and he hands a piece of it to each. Suddenly, and with overwhelming power the thought flashes upon the astounded people—it is the Lord! And as they sit in breathless wonder, looking upon the resurrected body of Jesus, he vanished. The interview ended. He was gone.

Our Greatest Need.

The great want of all is to have Jesus abide with them. It is a dismal thing to be getting old without the rejuvenating influence of religion. When we stop on the down grade of life and see that it dips to the cold verge of the cold river, we want to behold some one near who will help us across it. When the sight loses its power to glance and gather up, we need the faith that can illumine. When we feel the failure of the ear, we need the clear tones of that voice which in olden times broke up the silence of the deaf with cadence of mercy. When the axmen of death hew down whole forests of strength and beauty around us, and we are left in solitude, we need the dove of divine mercy to sing in our branches. When the shadows begin to fall and we feel that the day is far spent, we need most of all to supplicate the beneficient Jesus in the prayer of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening."

The request of the text is an appropriate exclamation for all those who are approaching the gloomy hour of temptation. There is nothing easier than to be good natured when everything pleases, or to be humble when there is nothing to puff us up or forgiving when we have not been assailed or honest when we have no inducement to fraud. But you have felt the grapple of some temptation. Your nature at some time quaked and groaned under the infernal force. You felt that the devil was after you. You saw your Christian forces retreating. You feared that you would fail in the awful wrestle with sin and be thrown into the dust. The gloom thickened. The first indications of the night were seen.

The Source of Strength.

When the night of the soul came on and all the denizens of darkness came riding upon the winds of perdition, who gave strength to the soul? Who gave calmness to the heart? Who broke the spell of infernal enchantment? He who heard the request of the villagers, "Abide with us, for it is toward evening." One of the forts of France was attacked and the outworks were taken before night. The besieging army lay down, thinking that there was but little to do in the morning and that the soldiery in the fort could be easily made to surrender. But during the night, through a back stairs, they escaped into the country. In the morning the besieging army sprang upon the battlements, but found that their prey was gone. So when we are assaulted by temptation, there is always some secret stair by which we might get off. God will not allow us to be tempted above what we are able, but with every temptation will bring a way of escape that we may be able to bear it.

The prayer of the text is appropriate for all who are anticipating sorrow. The greatest folly that ever grew on this planet is the tendency to borrow trouble. But there are times when approaching sorrow is so evident that we need to be making especial preparations for its coming. One of your children has lately become a favorite. The cry of that child strikes deeper into the heart than the cry of all the others. You think more about it. You give it more attention not because it is any more of a treasure than the others, but because it is becoming frail. There is something in the cheek, in the eye and in the walk that makes you quite sure that the leaves of the flower are going to be scattered. The utmost nursing and medical attendance are ineffectual. The pulse becomes feeble, the complexion lighter, the step weaker, the laugh fainter. No more romping for that one through hall and parlor. The nursery is darkened by an approaching calamity. The heart feels with mournful anticipation that the sun is going down. Night speeds on. It is toward evening.

Life's Balance Sheet.

You had a considerable estate and felt independent. In five minutes on one fair balance sheet you could see just how you stood with the world. But there came complications; something that you imagined impossible happened. The best friends you had proved traitor to your interests. A sudden crash of national misfortune prostrated your credit. You may feel anxious about where you are standing and fear that the next turn of the commercial wheel will bring you prostrate. You foresee what you consider certain defalcation. You think of the anguish of telling your friends that you are not worth a dollar. You know not how you will ever bring your children home from school. You wonder how you will stand the selling of your library or the moving into a plainer house. The misfortunes of life have accumulated. You wonder what makes the sky so dark. It is toward evening.

Trouble is an apothecary that mixes a great many drafts, bitter and sour and nauseous, and you must drink some one of them. Trouble puts up a great many packs, and you must carry some one of them. There is no sandal so thick and well adjusted but some thorn will strike through it. There is no sound so sweet but the undertaker's screwdriver grates through it. In this swift shuttle of the heart some of the threads must break. The journey from Jerusalem to Emmaus will soon be ended. Our Bible, our common sense, our observation, reiterate in tones that we cannot mistake and ought not to disregard, it is toward evening.

Fighting Against Misfortune.

Listen to Paul's battle shout with misfortune. Hark to the mounting Latimer's fire song. Look at the glory that hath reft the dungeon and filled the earth and heavens with the crash of the falling manacles of despotism. And then look at those who have tried to cure themselves by human prescriptions, attempting to heal gangrene with patch of court plaster and to stop the plague of dying empires with the quackery of earthly wisdom. Nothing can speak peace to the soul, nothing can unstrap our crushing burdens, nothing can overcome our spiritual foes, nothing can open our eyes to see the surrounding horses and chariots of salvation that fill all the mountains, but the voice and command of him who stopped one night at Emmaus.

The words of the text are pertinent to us all from the fact that we are nearing the evening of death. I have heard it said that we ought to live as though each moment were to be our last. I do not believe that theory. As far as preparation is concerned, we ought always to be ready. But we cannot always be thinking of death, for we have duties in life that demand our attention. When a man is selling goods, it is his business to think of the bargain he is making. When a man is pleading in the courts it is his duty to think of the interests of his clients. When a clerk is adding up accounts, it is his duty to keep his mind upon the column of figures. He who fills up his life with thoughts of death is far from being the highest style of Christian. I knew a man who used often to say at night, "I wish I might die before morning!" He is now an infidel. But there are times when we can and ought to give ourselves to the contemplation of that solemn moment when the soul time ends and eternity begins. We must go through that one pass. There is no roundabout way, no bypath, no circuitous route. Die we must, and it will be to us a shameful occurrence or a time of admirable behavior. Our friends may stretch out their hands to keep us back, but no imploration on their part can hinder us. They might offer large retainers, but death would not take the fee. The breath will fail, and the eyes will close, and the heart will stop. You may hang the couch with gorgeous tapestry, but what does death care for bed curtains?

The Eternal Resting Place.

This ought not to be a depressing theme. Who wants to live here forever? The world has always treated me well, and every day I feel less and less like scolding and complaining, but yet I would not want to make this my eternal residence. I love to watch the clouds and bathe my soul in the blue sea of heaven, but I expect when the firmament is rolled away as a scroll to see a new heaven, grander, higher and more glorious. You ought to be willing to exchange your body that has headaches and sideaches and weaknesses innumerable, that limps with the stone bruise or festers with the thorn or flames on the funeral pyre of fevers, for an incorruptible body and an eye that blinks not before the jasper gates and the great white throne. But between that and this there is an hour about which no man should be reckless or foolhardy. I doubt not your courage, but I tell you that you will want something better than a strong arm, a good aim and a trusty sword when you come to your last battle. You will need a better robe than any you have in your wardrobe to keep you warm in that place.

Circumstances do not make so much difference. It may be bright day when you push off from the planet, or it may be dark night, and while the owl is hooting from the forest. It may be spring, and your soul may go out among the blossoms, apple orchards, swinging their censers in the way. It may be winter and the earth in a snow shroud. It may be autumn and the forests set on fire by the retreating year; dead nature laid out in state. It may be with your wife's hand in your hand or you may be in a strange hotel with a servant faithful to the last. It may be in the rail train, shot off the switch and tumbling in long reverberation down the embankment—crash! crash! I know not the time; I know not the mode, but the days of our life are being subtracted away, and we shall come down to the time when we have but ten days left, then nine days, then eight days, then seven days, six days, five days, four days, three days, two days, one day. Then hours, three hours, two hours, one hour. Then only minutes left, five minutes, four minutes, three minutes, two minutes, one minute.

The Evening Shadows.

You are almost through with the abuse and backbiting of enemies. They will call you no more by evil names. Your good deeds will not longer be misinterpreted or your honor filched. The troubles of earth will end in the felicities of heaven! Toward evening! The bereavements of earth will soon be lifted! You will not much longer stand pouring your grief in the tomb like Rachael weeping for her children or David mourning for Absalom. Broken hearts bound up. Wounds healed. Tears wiped away. Sorrows terminated. No more sounding of the dead march! Toward evening! Death will come, sweet as slumbers to the eyelids of the babe, as full rations to a starving soldier, as evening hour to the exhausted workman. The sky will take on its sunset glow, every cloud a fire psalm, every lake a glassy mirror; the forests transfigured; delicate mists climbing the air. Your friends will announce it; your pulses will beat it; your joys will ring it; your lips will whisper it: "Toward evening."

PAWNEE ROCK.

Historic Indian Battle Spot Disappearing Year After Year.

Nine miles northeast of Larned, Kan., is a low, disintegrating pile of red sandstone, which is all that is now left of the once imposing Pawnee rock. This rock, which received its name from the tribe of Indians known as the Pawnees, has an interesting history—a history acquired during the time when this part of the country was a wild and dreary desert, inhabited only by the Indians and herds of roaming buffalo. On this rock have been waged many bloody conflicts between the Indians and travelers of the famous Santa Fe trail, and also between the different tribes of plains Indians. Surrounded by vast prairies with the trail running along its base, it afforded a good hiding place and battle ground for the savages. In its primitive state Pawnee rock rose to a considerable height, and from its summit a beautiful panorama spread before the lover of nature, and even now, from its reduced height, can be seen for miles a widespread landscape. Comparatively little remains to be seen of that once imposing promontory of the Kansas "desert," for the hand of man has done more in twenty years to efface it from the earth than the elements in centuries of time. The material obtained by the destruction of this landmark of the early days, is used in the construction of dwellings, bridges, etc., by the inhabitants in the fertile valleys surrounding this spot.

Precise, but Disagreeable.

"You have traveled abroad?" inquired the well-meaning conversationalist. And the man who worries about words answered stiffly: "Possibly you will inform me of some way in which I could have been abroad without traveling."—Washington Star.

Notes from the Paris Exposition.

"The Singer Manufacturing Company, of 149 Broadway, New York, show their usual American enterprise by having a very creditable exhibit, located in Group XIII, Class 79, at the Paris International Exposition, where they show to great advantage the celebrated Singer Sewing-Machine which is used in every country on the globe, both for family use and for manufacturing purposes. The writer was highly pleased with this display and observed with much satisfaction that it was favorably commented upon by visitors generally.

The Grand Prize was awarded by the International Jury to Singer Sewing-Machines for superior excellence in design, construction, efficiency and for remarkable development and adaption to every stitching process used in either the family or the factory.

Only One Grand Prize for sewing machines was awarded at Paris, and this distinction of absolutely superior merit confirms the previous action of the International Jury at the World's Columbian Exposition, in Chicago, where Singer machines received 54 distinct awards, being more than were received by all other kinds of sewing machines combined.

Should it be possible that any of our readers are unfamiliar with the celebrated Singer Machine, we would respectfully advise that they call at any of the Singer salesrooms which can be found in all cities and most towns in the United States."

Submarine Fighter.

For nineteen months a submarine torpedo-boat has been in process of construction at Ware Island, off Stamford, Conn. Great secrecy has been maintained by the builder and comparatively little is known of the plan of the boat or what she is expected to accomplish. To a casual observer the boat looks like a great cigar painted bottle green. Its length is given as fifty feet over all. The bow is sharp, the stern rounded. The boat is fitted with a heavy ram made of maple and tapers from six inches to perhaps twenty-five in diameter. It is four feet six inches long and fitted on the end is a steel plug which tapers to a point.

The shell of the boat is of yellow pine, bound with iron hoops, covered with coatings of ship felt and pitch. Galvanized iron covers the coatings of pitch and felt. On the top of the craft is a deck conforming to the shape of the boat. There is also a conning tower, with two torpedo loops. The machinery is connected with the conning tower. Electricity is the motive power used. It is said that three men will compose the crew. The torpedo loops are made water tight by a preparation of rubber and copper. A rubber cap also screws down over the top of the tower outside and encircling the deck are several exhaust pipes. The craft will be propelled by water taken in through openings, one on each side, about four feet from the stern of the craft and well down toward the principal keel. These openings are connected with pumps which are operated by two engines of 1,000 horse power each. From the pumps run four seven-inch copper pipes, two in each side of the boat. The water forced through these pipes passes out through two openings in the blunt stern of the boat and, coming in contact with the body of water in which the boat rests, forces it ahead. It is not calculated that a very great speed will be attained. To the stern is fitted a cap of iron bolted with wood to make it tight. This cap is connected with a lever on the inside of the boat and when it is desired to back the vessel the cap is placed partly over the vents in the stern. This gives the water emerging through the opening a backward movement and causes the boat to go back. There are two dynamos, which are operated by the two engines mentioned. Kerosene is used as fuel. There are fourteen tanks in the bottom of the boat, capable of holding fifty-five barrels of oil. This 2,700 gallons of kerosene also answers the purpose of a balance. When a tank has been exhausted provision is made to take in sea water to refill it. The interior of the boat is divided into three sections. In the rear is the engine-room, in the center are the lockers and apartments for the crew and in the bow is a store-room. The interior is braced by an octagonal frame of wood and iron. The craft will be lighted throughout by electricity. So far as can be learned there is no provision made for leaving the boat when it is under water.

The night clerk in a leading hotel of Washington, D. C., says that last winter a Southern congressman came to him and demanded that his room be changed. When asked what did not please him, he replied, angrily: "Well, that German musician in the next room and I don't get along well. Last night he tooted away on his clarionet so that I thought I never would go to sleep. After I had caught a few winks I was awakened by him pounding at my door. 'What's the matter?' I asked. 'If you please,' said the German, 'dot you vould schnore of der same key. You vill go from B-flat to G, and it spoils de moosic.'"

WIFE'S HOMICIDAL MANIA

Results in the Shooting of Herself and Her Three Children—Leaves Letter Saying She Felt a Murderous Impulse Coming On Her.

New York, Oct. 8.—Mrs. Lillian Smith, wife of Walter M. Smith, a wealthy grocer living at Broadway and Dykman street, near Inwood, shot herself and her three children. She and her son, Theodore, 8 years old, were dead when found in the house. Mable, 3 years old, and Ethel, 12 years old, were unconscious and were taken to the Fordham hospital, where Mabel died soon afterwards. Ethel will probably recover. Homicidal only explanation developed, is the band and father was so overcome [illegible] the tragedy that he was prostrated and was under the care of a physician. He refused to leave the house, where the bodies of his wife and little son awaited the coroner.

Attention was first called to the shooting when Mary Moore, Mrs. Smith's maid, excitedly hailed a policeman who was passing. He hurriedly investigated and then summoned an ambulance. Mrs. Smith was found with a revolver still in her hands. Two cartridges remained in the weapon, showing that she had reloaded it after firing five shots, as eight bullets were fired in all. Two of these bullets had penetrated little Mabel's body. One bullet had sufficed to kill herself and one her son There was one bullet in Ethel's breast, which the surgeons at the hospital extracted. The marks of three other bullets were found in the walls of the bedroom in which the girls had been shot. On a table in this bedroom the police found three letters and a sheet of paper. The letters were addressed to the woman's husband, father, and mother. On the sheet of paper, which was held in place by an inkstand, was the following message:

"Dear Walter: I am sorry for what I have done, and I beg that you will pardon me. I have felt this impulse coming on for a long time to end a life of misery. I wanted to end the anguish and take my children with me. You have always been good to me. Good by. Lily."

Mr. Smith, who is connected with the wholesale firm of Austin Nichols & Co., said he could not account for the act of his wife unless it was sudden mania caused by ill health. They had always lived happily.

Diphtheria at Rose Hill.

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 8.—Dr. C. S. Nelson, special inspector of the state board of health, and M. M. Hill, expert bacteriologist, who were sent to Rose Hill, Jasper county, to make a detailed examination of the alleged epidemic of diphtheria at that place, made a report, revealing startling facts. There were 100 cases and thirty deaths. There was no quarantine, and the disease spread rapidly. Tests of the blood of patients showed germs of the disease in its worst form. Animals inoculated with the germs died in a few hours. One doctor had pronounced a case of the disease as simply tonsilitis. A rigid quarantine will be established.

HELP FOR WOMEN

WHO ARE ALWAYS TIRED.

"I do not feel very well, I am so tired all the time. I do not know what is the matter with me."

You hear these words every day; as often as you meet your friends just so often are these words repeated. More than likely you speak the same significant words yourself, and no doubt you do feel far from well most of the time.

Mrs. Ella Rice, of Chelsea, Wis., whose portrait we publish, writes that she suffered for two years with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and had all kinds of miserable feelings, all of which was caused by falling and inflammation of the womb, and after doctoring with physicians and numerous medicines she was entirely cured by

MRS. ELLA RICE

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are troubled with pains, fainting spells, depression of spirits, reluctance to go anywhere, headache, backache, and always tired, please remember that there is an absolute remedy which will relieve you of your suffering as it did Mrs. Rice. Proof is monumental that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the greatest medicine for suffering women. No other medicine has made the cures that it has, and no other woman has helped so many women by direct advice as has Mrs. Pinkham; her experience is greater than that of any living person. If you are sick, write and get her advice; her address is Lynn, Mass.

KOERNER BROS.....

Three weeks from last Tuesday is election day or the time when every man should register at the polls.

We noticed the Klemme Times has gone to Ell. It is reported to be democratic after the change.—Britt Tribune.

The bi-enniel election question, if carried, will extend the terms of office for almost all the state officers, another year.

Gov. Shaw hands out the following question to be voted upon at the coming election: Shall the elections hereafter be held every two years? These are hot his words, but a true sequal of the same.

On being a trifle ignorant, the Reflector of Crystall Lake cries out with large interrogation points, "How will a socialist edit a democratic paper?" Apparently the Bro. is badly bent, if he does not know that Socialism and Democracy are an assimilation one to the other, he needs enlightenment. As to a socialist editing a democratic paper we would respectfully refer the Bro. to observe the judgement displayed by a democratic editor who is editing a republican paper. In our opinion, a man who can run a democratic paper in one town and a republican paper in another, don't care a continental for party creeds and principles. Its the God of earth he wants—money! Awake to the fact that you are no more a school boy, but a man among men, Bro. Forrest!

In the Chicago Inter Ocean of a recent issue is a campaign item which says that Mr. Bryan says the republican party likens itself unto Jesus Christ. With no disrespect for either Bryan or the republican part it might be said that politics as they are today should not be compared with Christ and the church. So divine a person as the Savior; one who has been looked up to for ages; a man among men but one never surpassed by men as he was then or is to day. The idea that Mr. Bryan would forward such a thought is bad enough and the thought of the republican party claiming allegiance to him is worse enough to make the whole affair an unwholesome matter. Politics and Christ are two separate bodies and the person who compares himself with the latter has just cause to blush in shame.

"How about the rumors that ... Defenbach may not be dead?"

Some men ... do not. As for myself it is this way. If a man strikes me, woe be unto his ribs and cross bones! But the kind of strike I have in view is the one in which several thousand men take active part. A short time ago, not over a month, a great strike was had in the Pennsylvania coal mines. One hundred and twenty-six thousand men struck, they struck hard and hit for higher wages. Now some people say they were not justified in doing this, and I say they are and this is why. Those men were receiving various prices for their labor—hard labor—according to station. Some were getting $1.25 a day and some as high as $2.50! That looks reasonable, does it not? That would furnish a man wife and five children, here in Iowa in some of the smaller towns a luxurious living, but not so in the city where rent for a tenement house in the suberbs is from 12 to 15 to 20 dollars a month, eggs at 20 cents per dozen, butter at no less than 30 cents per pound and meet at 25 cents and more, and likewise exhorbant prices for almost everything else, except it be that not exactly needed. The things that are most essential for the maintenance of human life and physical strength are they that cost, in other words what is needed most demands the highest price. True, some things can be got-

If facts speak for themselves, what wonderful facts some women's tongues must be.

The man who doesn't respect himself should not blame others if they follow his example.

Says an old bachelor: "Before taking the leap through the wedding ring a man should be sure the net of connubial bliss is properly stretched on the other side."

A Swiss genius has invented a pith cloak weighing about one pound which will hold up a fully equipped soldier on the surface of the water. Successful experiments were made recently on the Lake of Zurich. The cloak is provided with waterproof pockets in which food and drink may be carried, as well as blue lights, in case the wearer is shipwrecked in the night.

Twenty of the largest cotton mills of the Piedmont district of South Carolina have gone on half-time, because of the high price of cotton. Their managers say that with cotton cloth selling as it is, the working up of 10 and 11 cent cotton offers no profit. And when the question arises of bringing the price of cotton cloth up to the level of 10-cent cotton, the consumers must be consulted.

In Southern Hungary are a people hungering and thirsting for the Bible. They came over from Bulgaria a century and a half ago, numbering now some 20,000 souls. They asked for a translation of the New Testament and a translation of St. John was made and 10,000 copies printed. These have been sold and they ask now for the whole of the New Testament. They are related in tongue to the Paulicians, near Philippopolis.

One of the notable actions taken by organizations this year in behalf of the Sabbath was that by the Modern Woodmen of America, a fraternal society with a membership of nearly half a million. The official organ says: "If your camp has planned a 'Sunday picnic,' change the date to some other day. The head consul has authority in a summary manner to receive charges against a local camp for failing to prosecute members guilty of holding Sunday picnics under the auspices of the society or any local camp."

A liquor dealer of Boston recently referred to depressing features in his business as follows: "To begin with," he said, "there is the multiplication of saloons, but of even more moment in my mind is the fact that the younger generation is not drinking as the old did in the past. No matter how good socially men were they thought nothing of setting in for drinking bouts at tables or at the bar. Now the average man, if he drinks at all, either has it at his house, bought in bulk, so that the retailer is cut out, or else he drops in for. It hurts my business and gets out

"A library in a garden," the aspiration of an old scholar who loved nature as well as books, is in a fair way to be realized for everybody in Brooklyn. By the co-operation of the public library and the park commission there were reading rooms and libraries in three of the Brooklyn parks during the summer, and one of them was visited by more than 6,000 persons in a month. People who used to sit around stupidly, half asleep, read while enjoying the peace and quiet of the place, and children found something to do beside playing until they were tired and quarrelsome. They all are to be congratulated, but equally warm congratulations are due to the public library, which has found one more way to fulfill its mission of reaching the public.

A Berlin correspondent writes: "An almost incredible case of superstition is reported from Czech village of Metschin. It appears that in the spring the village schoolmaster there died, and was, in due course, buried with every mark of esteem on the part of the inhabitants. But now the villagers are one and all clamoring that he may be exhumed. The reason for this strange wish is that he is held responsible by them for the fact that a long spell of drought has set in, to the great loss of all the farmers in that district. It is not so much the defunct schoolmaster who is to blame as his sorrowing relations, who, ignorant of the superstitions prevalent there, were unwise enough to place under the poor man's head a cushion stuffed with feathers! According to the ignorant peasants this is a sure means of causing a prolonged drougat, and until the feathery pillow is removed they maintain that no rain will fall.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

ALLEGED ROBBERS CAUGHT.

Two Men Charged With Robbing Ottumwa Boys Caught.

Burlington, Oct. 13.—Two men, who, it is thought robbed the three young Ottumwa men in a box car in an eastbound train just east of Chariton, and then threw them off at Tower, while the train was running at the rate of forty miles an hour, were captured in this city by the police and Burlington secret service men. There is no doubt in the minds of the officers but that they are the men wanted. Articles found in their possession indicate their connection with the crime, and it is thought that if it can be fastened upon them it will go hard with the robbers, for indignation is running high. They will be taken back to Monroe or Lucas county, where the crime was committed, for trial.

The story of their crime in unusual for its bloodthirstiness. Will Boyer and a man named Burke, both of Ottumwa, and an unknown man, boarded the eastbound freight train at Chariton Wednesday night, intending to steal a ride home. A short distance out of Chariton, two other men boarded the train, and after traveling a short distance, pulled revolvers on the three young men and relieved them of $11. When the train was passing Tower 310, just west of Albia, the men were told that they could take the alternative of jumping at once, or of being shot. They chose the former, and the Ottumwa men were seriously injured. The third alighted safely, with the train running forty miles an hour, and appraised a nearby farmer of the condition of his companions. The wounder men were picked up and their wounds dressed.

SIOUX CITY TO MAKE RECOUNT.

Will Try to Show Census Enumerators Missed Many Names.

Sioux City, Oct. 15.—Sioux City expects soon to show the federal census bureau that the enumerators who gave it a population of only 33,111, were at least 5,000 out of the way. Acting under the direction of the city council and the Commercial association, Mayor A. H. Burton sent to Washington for a copy of the lists of names taken by the enumerators. On their arrival the lists will be placed in charge of a number of experienced employes of the Commercial association, who will make a second enumeration to show the mistakes and discrepencies of the government enumerators. In one district, the most populous, in which the census bureau employed a woman, the Commercial association expects to show that the official count was at least 1,000 short. The work of the Polk Directory company in making a new directory has also brought out numerous discrepancies in the official count[illegible] expect[illegible]

SIOUX CITY WARNED BY WOMAN.

Robbers Bent on Holding Up a Postoffice Abandon the Job.

Sioux City, Oct. 12.—A "tip" from a woman in Winterset, Iowa, probably prevented the same gang of robbers which looted the postoffice at St. Joseph, Mo., of $3,000 from trying to rob the Sioux City postoffice September 26. It was planned and some of the men arrived to do the job, but the authorities in Sioux City had been warned and the buildings surrounding the postoffice building here bristled with revolvers on that night and succeeding nights until it appeared evident that the job had been abandoned. The robbers were apparently frightened away.

Clerk Charged With Embezzlement.

Sioux City, Oct. 13.—William F. Brower was a clerk in a Moville genertl merchandise store, but through his sales over the counter he managed to get away with about $2,000 of his employer's money and today he was arrested and locked up in the county jail in Sioux City to answer to the charge of embezzlement. Manager Coleman of the store stated that Brower's dishonesty was discovered some time ago, when an inventory of the stock was taken. It was found then that in spite of the good trade the store was very little ahead. The clerk is charged with having taken $2,000 in this way in the past six months. Brower admits his guilt.

HOG CHOLERA RAGES IN IOWA.

Unusual Number of Young Hogs Being Hurried to Market.

Des Moines, Oct. 11.—The unusual number of young hogs forwarded to market from Iowa during the past ten days has led to an investigation of the cause by the companies, and has developed the existence of hog cholera in many portions of the state. For nearly three weeks the disease has been prevalent in the vicinities of Grimes, Storm Lake, Sac City and a score of other points on the Milwaukee, as also in the country about Van Meter and Stuart on the line of the Rock Island. When it first appeared the cholera did not assume a malignant form, but during the past week the mortality among the hogs attacked has been very great. Some herds numbering one hundred hogs have been depleted to twenty, and the disease continuing to spread, farmers became alarmed and began shipping [illegible] market. The presence of hundreds of hogs among the shipments attracted the attention of the railroad companies and [illegible] ated in an order to division [illegible] agents to instruct station agents to make inquiry of farmers in the vicinity of each of the stations on the lines in Iowa. The disease is said to be spreading alarmingly among herds in western and northwestern Iowa.

CREDITORS HOLD THE SACK.

Austin Ghrist Suddenly Disappears From Knoxville.

Knoxville, Oct. 11.—The Express published last evening, says:

"Austie Ghrist, a well known young Knoxville business man, got a team and buggy at Shive's livery barn Thursday morning and started for Pella. Since that time nothing has been seen of him. He has, in fact, absconded, leaving his business and his creditors behind.

"Suspicion had been aroused the day before by some transactions with a Pella bank, and when Ghrist left town the storm soon broke. It was soon found that he had been doing a big business on no capital except confidence, and that he had forged notes right and left and had for a long time eluded suspicion.

"Ghrist had an implement and carriage house on West Main street, and did a big business in vehicles of all kinds. He also had a large stable on East Robinson street, which was continuously filled with driving horses and other stock in which he dealt. He frequently shipped a carload of horses, and had a good many "irons in the fire." The general impression was that he had a great genius for trading and was making money. He had first rate credit at the banks and was a heavy borrower on collateral security. Since his abrupt leave it has been found that much of his collateral is merely copies of notes that he still had in possesssion."

[illegible]s probable that Ghrist's liabilities will reach $20,000 with assets at [illegible]. He took considerable money with him and left forged notes for [illegible] $5,000 behind.

THIRTY NAMES SELECTED.

Men Who Will be Honored in New York Hall of Fame.

New York, Oct. 13.—The election in the Hall of Fame contest was concluded, when the senate of New York university assembled and passed upon the list of eligibles submitted to that body by the committee which for the last three days has been counting the votes.

The total number of names submitted to the 100 judges was 252. Though the standard of eligibity had been placed as low as 51 votes, only thirty of the nominees had reached that standard. It was the names of such nominees that were submitted to the senate and that body in which is vested the power of absolute and peremptory vote, on this occasion, confined itself to simple confirmation of the committee's findings.

According to this decision the following famous men were accorded a place on the tablets of the Hall of Fame:

George Washington, 97 (full vote); [illegible]ham Lincoln, 96; Daniel Webster, 92; John [illegible]n Franklin, 94; U. S. Grant[illegible]son, 90; Ralph [illegible]l, 91; Thomas Jefferson, [illegible]; Henry W. Longfellow, [illegible]o Emerson, 86; Irving, 82; Jonathan [illegible] Washington [illegible]vid G. Farragut, 79; Sam[illegible]el F. B. [illegible] Morse, 79; Henry Clay, 74; [illegible] Peabody, 72; Nathaniel Hawthorne, 72; Robert E. Lee, 69; Peter Cooper, 68; Horace Mann, 67; Henry Ward Beecher, 66; Eli Whitney, 66; James Kent, 65; Joseph Storey, 64; John Adams, 61; William Ellery Channing, 58; James Audubon, 57; Elias Howe, 53; William Morris Hunt, 52; Gilbert Stuart, 52; Asa Gray, 51.

The full number to be selected at the present time is fifty and [illegible] more are to be named later.

PINGREE WINS.

Legislators Adopt His Tax Plan and Repeal Special Railroad Charters.

Lansing, Mich., Oct. 15.—The special session of the legislature, which convened Wednesday, adjourned after enacting into law two measures for which Governor Pingree has striven for years. One is his plan for the taxation of corporate property. The other is the repeal of special charters for railroads.

The first measure is a joint resolution providing for the submission to popular vote of a constitutional amendment giving the legislature the power to levy taxes on the property of corporations according to its value. It is a radical departure from the present methods of assessing the railroads and other corporations on their gross earnings. From the estimates made by the experts employed by Governor Pingree the new plan, if adopted, will more than double the taxes of railroad property in this state.

EARL LI AT PEKING.

He Begins to Make His Formal Calls on the Legations.

Peking, Oct. 12.—Via Tien Tsin, Oct. 13, and Shanghai, Oct. 15.—Li Hung Chang began to make his formal calls upon the legations today. This afternoon he visited the British and American representatives. General Chaffee and General Wilson assisted United States Minister Conger in receiving Earl Li, who expressed anxiety to make piece. Li Hung Chang and Prince Chang will shortly address a note to the foreign ministers asking a meeting to be held for the purpose of beginning the negotiations for [illegible]. He expressed a preference for [illegible]sung-li-yamen as a meeting [illegible]. It is stated that owing to for[illegible] objections Yung Luh has with[illegible]n from the post of peace com[illegible]oner.

[illegible]ung Chang expressed doubt [illegible]he authenticity of the decree [illegible]ning Prince Tuan.

REPORT OF BRIG. GEN. DAVIS.

Recommendations as to the Army in Porto Rico.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The war department has published the annual report of Brigadier General Davis, department of Porto Rico. It states that when the organization of the civil government shall have been completed and the civil machinery is working well there will be no necessity to retain in the island so large a force as at present. He cannot however, conceive it possible to limit the garrison to a force just sufficient to take care of the guns at San Juan and he points out that the island of Porto Rico must have in the future as it has in the past, great military importance. Spain expended more than $4,000,000 on the fortifications of San Juan, and upon the surrender to the United States for fortifications were found to be of great strength and the armaments extensive. General Davis adds: "It is inconceivable that the United States will leave the island without adequate protection of men, ships and guns, the only land owned by the United States in the West Indies." Land for a naval station has been reserved, and a coaling and repair station probably will be erected at San Juan. General Davis says the armament should be increased and modernized, and the guns cared for by a sufficient force of artillery men. He says the experiment of utilizing the natives as soldiers has proved a marked success. During the [illegible] over 30,000,000 pounds of relief [illegible] quartermaster been distributed by the [illegible] been found impartment. It has [illegible] the native cattle for [illegible] to use the refrigerated beef from [illegible], and try has been generally acceptable. The cost of the relief supplies in aid of the hurricane sufferers was $824,829. In the local elections General Davis says there was never present at or near a voting place an armed force and the "the bayonet was conspicuous for its absence." The main election under the act of congress establishing an insular legislature with one house elective has not yet been held.

MINERS ANNOUNCE TERMS

Will Accept Ten Per Cent Advance Conditionally.

Scranton, Pa., Oct. 15.—The anthracite coal miners now on strike after a two days' convention, decided to accept the 10 per cent increase in wages offered by the mine owners, providing they will continue the payment of the advance until next April, and will abolish the sliding scale. If the operators consider the proposition unacceptable, the miners are willing to arbitrate the question at issue. They also decided to continue the strike until the operators agree to the convention's proposition. The resolution is as follows:

"Your committee respectfully submit the following preamble and resolutions for your consideration:

"Whereas, The anthracite coal operators have posted notices offering an advance of 10 per cent over wages formerly paid, and have signified their willingness to adjust our grievances with their employes;

"Whereas, They have failed to specify the length of time this advance would remain in force, and have also failed to abolish the sliding scale method of determining wages,

"We would recommend that this convention accept the 10 per cent advance, providing the operators will continue its payment until April 1, 1901, and will abolish the sliding scale in the Lehigh and Schuylkill regions. The scale of wages in the two last named districts to remain stationary at 10 per cent above the present basis price, and that the operators agree to adjust other grievances complained of with committees of their own employes. Should this proposition be unacceptable to the operators, we recommend that the convention propose that all questions at issue be submitted to a fair and impartial board of arbitration.

"We would further recommend that under no circumstances whatever should there be a resumption of work at any of the collieries until the operators signify their acceptance of this proposition, and you are notified officially that the strike is ended and all return to work in a body on the same day."

Judging by the unanimity of the miners in accepting the above resolution, and by the determined stand taken by the operators, it is generally believed that a long contest between the strikers and mine owners is not unlikely.

Yellow Fever in Havana.

Havana, Oct, 15.—One hundred and thirteen new cases of yellow fever have been officially reported since October 1. There is no longer any doubt that the disease has attacked Major Peterson, chief commissary, and Mr. Frank Hayes, general manager of the North American Trust company branch office, who have taken ill. Miss Natalie Brown, a stenographer in the employ of the trust company, is also down with the disease. Four hundred and twenty-eight Spanish immigrants are in quarantine here owing to the existence of [illegible] in the vessel on which they arrived. The department officials under Major Gorgias, are working night and day in the house to house inspection, and in other sanitary precautions.

Mustard used to be eaten whole instead of in the form of paste made from mustard flour.

THEY FIGHT A HARD BATTLE.

List of Culpables Believed to Be Incomplete — Revolutionary Movement in Canton Believed to Be Assuming a Serious Phose.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—A Shanghai dispatch to the Lokal Anzeiger says: It is reported that Paoting Fu has been occupied by some of the allies after heavy fighting. The dispatch also says the headquarters staff considers the revolutionary movement in Canton to be very serious. Two German warships and several English and French gunboats have been ordered to remain at Canton. At Canton a false alarm Oct. 7 caused the Chinese officials there to protest against any occupation of Chinese territory. The Yangtse viceroys, the dispatch adds, openly affirm that they will oppose any advance of the Germans into Shantung province. The German foreign office is not satisfied with the list of culpables supplied by the Chinese government. "The list is notoriously incomplete," said an influential official today, "as it omits at least a score of prominent persons who were active leaders in the massacres of foreigners. This is borne out by all the legations and by the consular reports from China. It is also borne out by Mr. Conger's statement."

Rumored Plot to Seize Canton.

Hongkong, Oct. 15:—The reformer, Sun Yat Sen, according to dispatches from Canton, has unfurled the reform flag in the important town of Wei Chou, on East river. This act has given rise to considerable excitement in military circles in Canton, as it is believed that the object of the reformers in raising their flag in Wei Chou is to denude Canton of troops so that they can seize the city. Admiral Ho is pursuing the rebels in a northeasterly direction.

Think Edict a Farce.

Paris, Oct. 15.—A dispatch received by the Havas agency from Tientsin says:

"The general opinion of those knowing Chinese ways is that the order for the punishment of the high officials, contained in the edict of Oct. 1, will not be executed. The edict is insincere.

It is affirmed that Li Hung Chang has been ordered to reject all demands for territorial compensation and other war indemnities. The troops at Pekin are suffering from typhoid fever and dysentery."

Chinese Minister Leaves St. Petersburg

St. Petersburg, Oct. 15.—The Chinese minister here has left town. It is believed he has gone to the Crimea to see the czar.

Missions Is Their Theme.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 15.—Several hundred additional delegates and visitors to the annual conventions of the three allied missionary societies of the Christian church have arrived. The work of the Christian women's board of missions was taken up. The session opened with a Bible study, conducted by Burris A. Jenkins of New York, and was followed by the annual address of the president, Mrs. O. A. Burgess of Indianapolis, who spoke encouragingly of the work during the past year in mission fields in the United States, Jamacia, India, Mexico and Porto Rico, and made many suggestions for the coming twelve months.

St. Louis Flyer Is Wrecked.

Plattsmouth, Neb., Oct. 15.—By the collision of two Burlington trains at this place F. Roberts, engineer of the St. Louis flyer, due here at 11:15 a. m., was instantly killed; Jerry Kennard, the Adams Express messenger, and the fireman of the same train were seriously injured. All three lived in St. Joseph, Mo. Others were slightly injured. The wreck was caused by the St. Louis flyer running into an open switch upon which the Schuyler local had pulled to get out of the way. A careless brakeman failed to close the switch and a head-end collision resulted, demolishing both engines and several cars.

Huntington Will in Court.

New York, Oct. 15.—Probate Clerk Washburn of the surrogate's office examined the subscribing witnesses to the will of the late Collis P. Huntington. The witnesses are Maxwell Evarts, George E. Downsand Andrew A. Vandeventer. Each of the witnesses swore that the will filed for probate had been signed by the testator in his presence, and that the testator was to all appearances in good health and condition of mind.

Paris, Oct. 15.—Moses Fowler Chase, the young millionaire of Lafayette, Ind., has disappeared from a private insane asylum near Paris.

POLICY TOO ERRATIC.

Powers Themselves Have Hindered Negotiations.

Washington, Oct. 12.—The recent happenings in China especially in the province of Chile, have so far set back fore negotiations that it may be a able to get to wo[illegible] even months be military operations in Chile [illegible]ers will be where in China are said to be responsible for the check which diplomacy has met in reaching a settlement. Through the efforts of the state department, seconded by more moderate powers, a steady and systematic pressure has been brought to bear upon the Chinese emperor to bring about his return to Pekin.

Representations from the great southern viceroys to the emperor, setting out the impossibility of supplying the court with money and food if it persists in retreating to Tsinan Fu in Shensi, was but one of the means which have been resorted to at the instance of this government to secure the return of the court. All efforts are neutralized, however, by the spasmodic and unnecessary activity of the allied military forces. There is no necessity whatever for the Pao Ting Fu expedition, in the judgment of officials here, and that venture was a straw which determined the imperial court to flee to the western mountains. Li Hung Chang and the viceroys of the south had pledged themselves to maintain order and guarantee protection for foreigners and property in their respective provinces.

This was made a condition precedent by the United States government to the establishment of relations with them looking for the initation of negotiations for final settlement. According to all reports that have reached Washington the viceroys had lived loyally up to their promises in spite of irritating military expeditions and movements of various kinds set up against their protests and therefore it is regarded as particularly unfortunate the allied forces should persist now in the expedition against Pao Ting Fu.

CHINA FULLY ABANDONED.

Admiral Remey Will Make His Headquarters at Cavite.

Washington, Oct. 13.—Admiral Remey yesterday cabled the navy department of his departure from Chinese waters. He goes on his flagship, the Brooklyn, from Taku to Che Foo, thence to Nagasaki, Japan. Although his dispatch does not announce his movements from that point, it is the understan[illegible]ng at the navy department that he will next go to Cavite. This move will take the headquarters of the Asiatic station back to Manila, leaving the squadron in Chinese waters without an admiral in command, unless Admiral Remey should determine to have Admiral Kempff return there. For the present, however, there is no such determination. Admiral Remey's dispatch is as follows:

"Marines embarked on Brooklyn, Zafiro and transport Indiana. Zafiro carries the cavalry. Brooklyn goes to Che Foo and Nagasaki. Indiana sails shortly. Some sick sent to hospital at Yokohama. Others be removed soon as possible and hospital at Tien Tsin closed. New Orleans remains at Taku. Monocacy winters in Pei-Ho river.

"Remey."

REBELS ACTIVE IN PHILIPPINES.

Philippine Ladrones Raiding and Plundering in Leyte.

Manila, Oct. 12.—The west coast of the island of Leyte is in a state of turmoil, the rebel Ladrones actively plundering, raiding and returning to the garrisoned towns, while the Americans pursue in the mountains.

General Mojica's officers are surrendering. His soldiers attempted to escape, but the captured organizations are broken up. The guerrilas [illegible]hen questioned stated on the 5th instant thirty Americans attacked forty-five rebels, rifled their stronghold in the Camarine province and routed them, killing ten. Two Americans were killed and three wounded. Twenty men of the Thirty-second infantry in an engagement on the 10th in Batan province had one man killed and four wounded.

New Lands Opened to Settlement.

Republic, Wash., Oct. 11.—More than 750,000 acres of land in the Colville reservation were thrown open to settlement yesterday. For many weeks prospective homesteaders have been gathering in this vicinity waiting for the signal to enter the promised land, and the opening saw a rush of fully 10,000 homesteaders madly eager to secure possession and set their stakes. The settlers are chiefly from Illinois, Indiana, Minnesota, Iowa and the Dakotas. The land opened for settlement embraces the north half of the Colville Indian reservation, which contains 1,500,000 acres. The country is mountainous in character, with small valleys, rolling hills and table lands. The land is extremely rich in mineral resources and is also blessed with a most desirable climate, extremes of hot and cold weather being almost unknown. In many localities of the reservation small grains, fruits and hay grass may be grown with profit.

Goebel Law Likely to Stand.

Frankfort, Ky., Oct. 13.—The democratic and republican anti-Goebel factions on the conference committee appointed by the Kentucky legislature to adjust the disagreement over the election bill to take the place of the Goebel law failed to agree, and the leaders on both sides express the opinion that a new law will not be passed.

DESERTED WIFE'S SUICIDE.

Kills Herself Because She Believes Her Husband Self-Slain.

Chicago, Oct. 13.—Attired in expensive mourning apparel which she had purchased for the occasion, Mrs. Sophia Hardy, a beautiful young French woman, committed suicide by shooting herself through the heart at her home, 1220 Wabash avenue, this city. Her have [illegible] Philip Hardy, is thought to Lying a short d[illegible] also in New York. found a dueling revolver of [illegible] was pattern, handsomely engraved and plated with silver, with one chamber empty.

Several letters written in a delicate feminine hand in French gave the police the story of her desertion by her husband and the motive that actuated the deed. Mrs. Hardy was the wife of Philip Hardy, a former London business man, who met the beautiful girl in New York two years ago, when she was Mlle Sophia Demange, and after a short courtship married her. According to one of the letters, addressed to the dead woman's mother, Mme. Felice Demange, the young couple lived happily together until last Wednesday, when their first quarrel occurred. Leaving the house in anger, the husband boarded the first train for New York and later dispatched a telegram to his wife announcing his intention of committing suicide.

No Wolf at Their Door.

New York, Oct. 13.—H. H. Rogers, Jr., only son of the Standard Oil magnate and heir to to $50,000,000, is to wed Miss Mary Benjamin, the daughter of one of New York's most prominent patent attorneys and a granddaughter of Park Benjamin, the famous American poet. Harry Rogers has barely attained his majority, while the young woman who is to be his bride is a year or so older. Some years ago Miss Benjamin's mother died. Since then she has been under the chaperonage of Harry Roger's sister.

Long Fast of a Dog.

Galveston, Texas, Oct. 13.—For the first time since the hurricane, electric lights were burning in the inhabited portion of the Galveston last night. Eighteen bodies were taken from the ruins yesterday. Workmen engaged in removing debris from Sixteenth street and Avenue M, extricated a poodle dog more dead than alive. The dog had been confined in the place thirty-four days without food or water, and was a mass of skin and bones. It will probably live.

Sayers Requisition Not Honored.

Albany, Oct. 13.—Lieut.-Gov. Woodruff has been served with the papers in the matter of the requisition for directors and officers of the Standard Oil company, made by Gov. Sayers of Texas, and has declined to honor them, basing his declination upon a decision of Former Governor Flower that unless evidence was presented that the persons named had been in the state of Texas and there committed a crime it could not be honored.

Family Lives on Horse-Flesh.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 13.—James Short, his wife and three little children were found starving on the outskirts of town yesterday. It is said that flesh of a [illegible]t died had been eaten by the [illegible]. Mrs. Short intimated that she is the disowned daughter of wealthy Detroit people. A letter she wrote threatening to kill her children and herself caused the police to find the family.

Wreck Stops Trains.

New York, Oct. 13.—One of the worst freight wrecks in the history of the Central Railroad of New Jersey occurred near the East Bound Brook tower. The railroad tracks were torn up for hundreds of feet. All travel was held up except that which could be sent around the wreck by way of the Lehigh Valley's tracks.

Street Car Men Resume Work.

Terre Haute, Ind., Oct. 13.—A board of arbitration in the street car strike was organized this morning and at noon the men returned to work pending a final decision by the board, but this afternoon the men were ready to go out again because Manager Kidder discharged a number of men who reported for work under the understanding that all were to be taken back.

Joan D'Arc's Relative Married.

Paris, Oct. 13.—The great Parisian event of the season has been the marriage of the last descendant of Joan d'Arc's brother, the Vicomte de Maleissye, and Mlle. de Mailly, who is descended from one of the nobles who placed Hugh Capet upon the French throne nearly ten centuries ago. The bridegroom, twenty-eight years of age, is a lieutenant in the First Cuirassiers.

Kaiser Lays a Corner Stone.

Berlin, Oct. 13.—The kaiser took part in the celebration attendant on the laying of the foundation stone of the museum of Germano-Roman antiquities, on the site of the old Roman camp near Hamburg. He made feeling reference to his father, the former Emperor Frederick.

ANOTHER ARREST TO FOLLOW

Out-of-Town Sleuth in the Insurance Plot.

MRS. UNGER EXAMINES TRUNK

Brown Talks at the County Jail, and Says He Expects to Be Set Free—Says There Is No Doubt About the Death of the Girl.

Chicago, Oct. 15.—[illegible]nother arrest, that of an out-of-town operative of the Mooney & Boland detective agency, is now believed to be under consideration in connection with the Marie Defenbach life-insurance conspiracy and the supposed tragedy involving her death Aug. 27 at Mr. Monahan's boarding house, 310 LaSalle avenue. His name has not yet been announced. In fact, denials are made that any such arrest is contemplated, but that is believed by many to be the policy of those interested in suppressing the course of action pending a solution of the various phases of the case. The information that F. Wayland Brown, late assistant manager of the Chicago department of the Mooney & Boland service, and Frank H. Smiley, an operative of the same agency, were not its only employes associated with Dr. Unger in the conspiracy comes from a reliable source.

Doctor's Wife Examines the Trunk

According to the police, whose tardiness served the doctor the possible embarrassment which a search of the trunk might have caused, Mrs. Unger personally conducted the examination of Marie Defenbach's trunk, while it was yet in her husband's office. She was at the jail Wednesday and had a long interview with her husband, who had turned over to her $480 found upon him at the time of his arrest.

Brown Expects His Freedom.

"Now the prosecution in this case must, under the law, establish two points at the preliminary hearing," said Brown today, in discussing the evidence. "The first question to be proved is that a crime, as charged, has really been committed. That is as close to the point as I can put it. The second subject to be proved is that the defendant—and I am speaking for myself—must be shown to be connected with the offense charged. Should the allegations be thus reasonably established, the grand jury will act, and if a true bill be found prosecution of the case will follow.

"I want to say that if the persons who have placed me in jail on this charge are fair I will walk out of here a free man. Indeed, if they are fair I will walk out of here Oct. 18, when the preliminary hearing before Judge Gibbons is finished.

"Sift the evidence, so-called, against me and what do you find? Nothing. I have been connected in this case with persons I know absolutely nothing about. As I have said before there is nothing in the case as far as I am concerned that I am willing should not have the full light of day turned upon it. I admit that there is a tinge of suspicion, but I am not responsible for it. Smiley, too, is all right in this case. I do not speak for Dr. Unger."

"How about the rumors that Miss Defenbach may not be dead?"

"She is dead—no doubt about it," Brown answered. "A number of persons identified her body and a doctor was with her when she died."

Ladrones Kill a Spanish Family.

Manila, Oct. 13.—An entire Spanish family, father, mother, six sons and six daughters, have been murdered by a band of Ladrones twenty miles from Masabale. Information from Lieutenant Alstater's party has been received from San Miguel. Two of the party were given their liberty on parole. They report the lieutenant and other prisoners are well taken care of. It is said Deserter Fagan of the Twenty-fourth infantry planned the ambush.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON III., OCT. 21, LUKE 15: 1-10.

Golden Text: There Is Joy in the Presence of the Angels of God Over One Sinner That Repenteth—Luke, 15: 10—Pharisees and Scribes.

1. "Then drew near unto him. "Were drawing near"; the imperfect tense denoting continued and habitual action. "It was evidently a movement widespread and deep."

2. "And the Pharisees and scribes." These were equally sinners with the publicans, only in another way. "Murmured." "They had graduated at Grumblers' College, and taken all the degrees. Would that the school were local, and the membership restricted; but all workers for God have been tested by murmurs. "Saying, This man receiveth sinners, and eateth with them." The substance of their charge was not that he taught sinners, but that he ate with them, that is, mingled with them on terms of social equality. The modern Christian who mingles socially and freely with modern sinners is always liable to the same criticism from modern Pharisees.

4. "What man of you." "There is not a single one of you who accuse me here who does not act exactly like me in similar circumstances."—Godet. Your own conduct in other things answers your complaints. "Having an hundred sheep." Enough, but not so many but that each one could be under the personal watch and care of the shepherd. "If he lose one of them." This is the type of the human race, who fell from paradise, and have been wandering since in the wilds of sin, lost and helpless without a Savior. "Leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness." Not a desert, but wide, grassy pastures, though not inhabited. These were not neglected, but were in the pasture, guarded and guided by the under shepherds, and safely folded; but the shepherd himself went after the lost. "And go after that which is lost, until he find it. In Palestine "at any moment sheep are liable to be swept away by some mountain torrent, or carried off by hill robbers, or torn by wolves. At any moment their protector may have to save them by personal hazard. "Until he find it." "A hint of what is the patience and perseverance of Christ, and what should be the patience and perseverance of the Christian."

5. "He layeth it on his shoulders." A familiar practice with shepherds when the creature is sick, fatigued, or in any way unable to travel on its own feet."—Bliss. "Rejoicing." "Alike in the retrieval of his own loss, and in the rescue of his sheep from danger and distress."

6. "When he cometh home." This refers to the whole process by which the ignorant and bewildered sinner is brought into safety. It does not mean brought to heaven personally, but where there is ground for "joy in heaven."—Schaff. "Calleth together his friends and neighbors." The disciples, all the good who are interested in the salvation of men, and are working for it, the angels and the saints in heaven.

7. "I say unto you." Who are complaining because I seek to save the publicans and sinners. Whatever you may think, the angels rejoice. Perhaps this should make you inquire whether you are so good and heavenly as you imagine. "Joy shall be in heaven over one sinner that repenteth." Repenting is the sign of restoration. He that has repented has come back home to God. "More than over ninety and nine." See under v. 4. God has joy and delight in the ninety and nine, as is expressed abundantly in the Scriptures.

8. "Either what woman having 10 pieces of silver." Each piece was a drachma (Greek) or denarius (Latin), translated "penny" in the parable of the good Samaritan (Luke 10: 35), and in the parable of the laborers (Matt. 20: 2). "If she loses one piece." "The coin being lost suggests that in sinful man the image of his Maker has gone out of sight, and the great purpose of his being has been frustrated. "Doth not light a candle" (lamp). The woman is usually regarded as representing the Holy Spirit in the work of recovering lost sinners. "Most of the native houses are without glass windows, and are very dark when shut up. "And sweep the house." The sweeping represents that disturbance of settled opinions and practices, that turning of the soul upside down, which is frequently seen as forerunner of conversion; for here also chaos often precedes creation. . . . "And seek diligently." "What we call feminine virtues and graces are needed for the deliverance of souls that have fallen—patience and diligence and minute observation—not less than what we think of as the more manly qualities of courage and enterprise and endurance."—Plumpire.

A Royal Wedding.

A letter received in London from Yokohama and printed in the London Graphic gives an interesting description of the marriage of the crown prince of Japan with the Princess Sadako. Hitherto these imperial marriages have been void of all ceremonial, the emperor or the heir apparent simply announcing that he had taken a consort. On this occasion the crown prince and the Princess Sadako, who is of the family of Qupo, one of the five families who enjoy the privilege of providing empresses for Japan, left their respective residences at 7 in the morning. They met at the imperial palace and arrayed themselves in ceremonial robes. Proceeding to the sanctuary at the head of a procession of princes and princesses of the blood and the officiating priests, the young couple knelt at a kind of altar and made offerings of green twigs, with strips of white paper attached, as emblems of purity. A special prayer was then recited, and a cup of sacred wine was offered to the bride and bridegroom, who again knelt before the altar while the priest proclaimed them man and wife. This ended the ceremony. The prince and princess then put on European costumes, and were received by the emperor and empress, after which they drove to the palace of the crown prince. In the afternoon the emperor held a reception, when addresses of congratulation were presented by various public bodies.

ten mueh cheaper in larger places than in smaller ones, but as a rule it costs a man who gets $2.50 a day in the city as much to live and keep a family as it does a man who gets $1.25 in the smaller places. Thus I say, that great hoard of 126,000 men were justified in doing as they did. They had the power to demand higher wages and why not have it? Have they not as much right to demand a price as the price has to control the man? We say yes, they truly deserve good wages and decent treatment. They are human the same as you or I then why should they be treated as dogs, as the scum, scum of the quagmire. Let us look at them as living beings, as a poor man looks at a poor man and as Lincoln says: "with malice towards none and with charity towards all."

Young men should read this, and get it into their heads to stay. It is worth remembering: The Dickens Senate says the man who makes a success of an important venture never waits for the crowd. He strikes out for himself. It takes nerve. It takes a great lot of grit. But the man who succeeds has both. Any one can fail. The public admires a man who has confidence in himself to take a chance. These chances are the main thing after all. Nothing important was ever done but the greater number consulted previously doubted the posssibility.

A gentleman in a neighboring town was a good church goer but could never remember the text, so his wife made fun of him. One Sunday the text was "an angel came down from heaven, took a live coal and laid it on the alter." He kept this in mind and went home. His wife said: "Well you've forgotten the text I reacon." "Oh no," he said: "I'm too fast for you this time." She asked him to repeat it. He said: "An Indian came down from New Haven, took a live colt by the tail and jerked him out of the halter.—Ex.

J. L. Harr is giving his drug store a coat of paint and otherwise improving it's outward appearance. Joe Miller is doing the paint slinging and right handy he seems to be.

Mr. Geo. Waddingham, one of Avery township's most prosperous farmers, was hauling grain to this place Friday. He says he has to load, unload and haul it to market anyway and might as well get a good price for it.

To the people of Klemme and vicinity I wish to say that I am still here and in business with a large and complete stock of Boots and Shoes, Overshoes, and Rubber Goods of all descriptions. F. Gruetzmacher.

Mr. and Mrs. Goodyear, Mr, Babcock and wife, Mr. Love and several others from Garner came down to attend the supper given by the Klemme Camp of Royal Neighbors, Friday night. It was a private lodge supper and a good time is the verdict.

We would like very much to accomodate our readers with at least another column of news, but our type cases have been picked empty for this much and more news is an impossibility for we have not the type to set it. As soon as arrangements can be made for more news type you shall have a better local department.

One of Garner's legal lights who thinks he is the whole thing—if there is anything else, he would be that too—sent in his refusal card to the TIMES Saturday. To make a long story extreemly short, no soap headed politician shall dictate the editorial make-up of this paper. We are mentally able to do it, and what's furthermore this paper is not gotten up for fools and idiots to read. Time is too precious to waste on some sleeping Willie who uses the big "I" and little "u" in conjunction with everything he does.

Miss Cassili and Miss Anderson of Garner visited in Klemme with Mrs. Kelley last Tuesday afternoon.

Miss Bertha Willert, who has been working in the Klemme house for some time past, left Saturday with trunk for Woden.

Portable corn cribs are cheap handy and serviceable, at the Northern Lumber Co See our big advertisement on first page.

N. A. Benson, of Crystall Lake, passed through on his his home to Buffalo Center, from a couple of weeks visit in Avery township with relatives.

If you want husking gloves, mittens, pegs, wristlets, or anythidg in this line, go to Frank Gruetzmacher. He has the largest line ever shown in Klemme and the prices are right.

The gravel that is now being put on main street is a great improvement. Although it is too late to reap much benefit of the same this fall it will come in just right next spring. When all of the surrounding towns are having heaps of trouble "getting stuck in the mire" with their teams, Klemme will be shouting its praises for good roads.

Last Thursday night brought to town one of those "free for all," hand-me-down, pass-the-hat shows, which consisted of two persons, man and wife and black as the "ace of spades." They did some singing, rendered a few sketches, and danced a couple of hoe downs. While the entertainment was of a course and crude nature it was well worth the price—of whatever a person wished to give.

Prince Bismarck and Bancroft, the historian, at one time minister to the court at Berlin, were one day dining with Herr von der Heydt, who prided himself on the quantity and quality of the food which he furnished his guests. In those days (1868) Bismarck was still in possession of his wonderful appetite. Bancroft, at first amazed, became at last anxious on seeing his friend twice partake of the first courses. "Dear Count," he remarked with a world of anxiety in his voice, "I believe there is more to come." "I should hope so," replied Bismarck, joyfully; and renewed his terrifying practice at the next course.

At a dinner-party a young man was once talking rather foolishly about Darwin and his books, speaking very contemptuously of them, and he said to the Bishop of Winchester (Wilberforce): "My Lord, have you read Darwin's last book on the 'Descent of Man'?" "Yes, I have," said the Bishop; whereupon the young man continued: "What nonsense it is, talking of our being descended from apes! Besides, I can't see the use of such stuff. I can't see what difference it would make to me if my grandfather was an ape." "No," the bishop replied, "I don't see that it would; but it must have made an amazing difference to your grandmother!" The young man had no more to say.

A CONGRESSMAN

Cured of Catarrh of Long Standing.

Ex-Congressman A. T. Goodwyn.

Ex-Congressman A. T. Goodwyn, from Alabama, writes the following letter: The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"I have now used two bottles of Peruna, and am a well man today. I could feel the good effects of your medicine before I had used it a week, after suffering with catarrh for over a year." Respectfully, A. T. Goodwyn.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a national curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh. Public men of all parties recognize in Peruna a national catarrh remedy of unequaled merit. Send to Dr. Hartman, Columbus, Ohio, for a free book on catarrh.

MY HALF SISTER

By ELTON HARRIS

"He is considered very handsome," Joyce called mischievously after Reggie's retreating figure; but whether he heard her was doubtful, and her own frank, plain face looked very grave, as she picked up her wools. "Madame is a clever woman," she argued to herself. "Henri is under her thumb—that is, he always seems to be afraid of her; and Mollie is inexperienced and impetuous. It is little more than a fortnight since she returned. Can Reggie mind already—Reggie, who does not care for girls?"

But personal experience, in connection with the naval lieutenant to whom she was engaged, called loudly that a fortnight might make or mar a life, and she could not disguise from herself that Reggie had shown more interest in beautiful Mollie L'Estrange than he had ever exhibited for any woman—save his mother and herself—before.

A fresh, matter-of-fact girl, of three-and-twenty, Joyce, though fond of Mollie, was inclined to look upon her as a child, and did not give her credit for half the sense and observation she possessed.

For Mollie had learned a great deal in that past fortninght, though Reggie had not always been her teacher. She knew that the good country people round, who had been her parents' friends, while wishful to be pleasant to herself, looked askance at Madame Dubois, whose great object in life was to get into the charmed circle of their acquaintance. With this end she would drag the reluctant girl to any social gathering where she might meet them, and endeavor to force herself upon them until poor Mollie was bitterly ashamed of her; while her smothered exultation when Mrs. Anstruther did violence to her feelings by a stiff call showed Mollie more than words would have done how the residents of Chalfont House were regarded in Reverton.

Kate was a great trial to her sister; she was delicate, nervous and excitable to a degree; and, as her aunt never checked her, she was almost unbearable. All Mollie's efforts at friendship she regarded with suspicion, as made to the heiress of Chalfont, and she flew into a rage if her sister tried to reason with her, or attempted to take the part of the unfortunate daily governess who for a couple of hours each morning endeavored to teach her. Mollie was very forbearing with her, trying never to forget that she was the baby whom she had seen in her mother's arms. But she was firm also, declining to be driven about, or stand any rudeness; and Kate, finding her tempers disregarded, her imperious airs laughed at, began to treat her sister with sullen respect.

Mollie was thinking of Kate after Reggie had left her at the gate, and she walked briskly up the graveled path, swinging her empty basket. She had promised some flowers for the church on Sunday, and wanted them also for wreaths for her parents' graves. Should she take them boldly from Chalfont, and incur her sister's wrath, or should she order them elsewhere? It seemed a shame that her mother's wreath should not be from the place she loved so well; and yet she could not bear that anything for her should be wrangled over.

There used to be a great clump of narcissi growing almost wild in a shady corner beside some laurels at the far side of the house. If Mr. Barlowe's vandal hand had spared them, she might surely have some from there; and, intent on finding out, she never paused until she suddenly found herself nearly opposite the window of that fatal study where her stepfather had met his death by an unknown hand nearly twelve months previously.

Since her return she had carefully avoided this spot; it had a nameless terror, yet fascination for her. Mrs Barlowe's name was rarely mentioned in the house; no servant would go past the study door alone after dark. It was not only madame's hard and mean rule that caused rarely a week to pass without some of them leaving—they frightened each other; tales of things seen and heard were rife among them, and it must be owned that Mollie was not proof against the general whispering, the unspoken fear, that seemed to hang over the place, especially after dark.

She was half inclined to turn back now, even though the sun was shining and a whole colony of rooks cawing noisily in the tall trees further on. Round this very path the assassin must have stolen that bitter March night after he had done the deed, leaving the window wide open; and ——. Why, the window was open now! Voices fell upon her ears. No one ever entered that room but Madame Dubois, though it was unlocked. Who could it be?

Taking an impetuous step forward, her eyes fell on madame herself, standing erect with one hand on the table, her face haggard and white, her thin lips drawn away from her strong white teeth, her dark eyes gleaming under their heavy brows with a strange wild gleam; while her voice, harsh and high, came clearly towards Mollie.

"Are there no other apartments in the house but that you must come here—here—here?" she screamed. "Why do you torture me like this? Have I not enough to bear for you? Ah, me! How many mothers would have done as much?"

"Calm yourself, mother," cried a thin, reedy voice. "I had merely a fancy to view the chamber where my so tender-hearted relative shuffled off this mortal coil last Easter Sunday. Where is the harm?"

"No, no, my beloved!" she answered, in a gasping voice, evidently struggling hard to recover her self-command; "but coming in suddenly and seeing a man—so near the time——" And she clasped her hands as a visible tremor shook her from head to foot.

"Every one was out; I wanted amusing," he said. "How dusty the place is. Why not use the room?"

"Impossible!" panted she. "How can you expect it, Henri—you, who saw ——I have it cleaned sometimes, but no one will do it alone, nor will they come near it until after Sunday."

"My uncle seems as much loved in death as in life." And there was a fine sneer in the young man's voice. "Now, why did you send for me in such a hurry, mother? I was having a good time in Paris—music, pretty girls!—and then you insist that I must return to this dull hole. 'Tis absolutely cruel!"

"You have no thought for your own interests. You are incorrigible!" she cried angrily. "I told you the reason plainly enough; and you spend so much money, the sooner you fall in with my intentions the better for you; then your future is assured."

"So you have dragged me away from a thousand engagements and pleasures just for this!" Mollie heard him explain grumblingly. "What is she?"

"Oh, Henri, my adored!" cried Madame Dubois, her voice vibrating with intense feeling, her eyes fixed with deep, passionate love on the other unseen occupant of the room; "I feel that at this time I must have you with me—that I must see you—to feel that my sacrifices have not been in vain—that through them you are prosperous. Is it nothing to you to be with your mother?"

What reply the son made Mollie did not hear, for, recovering from her astonishment, she stole quietly away, thankful that madame's keen glance had not fallen upon her. That Monsieur Henri Dubois had arrived before he was expected—that he had come, not because he loved his home and wished to make her acquaintance, as madame had repeatedly declared, but because she had sent him an imperative summons—was clear; but why had she done so? Nor could Mollie, having seen the mother's hard face, softened and beautiful with feeling, doubt that this invisible son, with the thin, sneering voice, was the passion of her life, the being for whom she would go through fire and water.

CHAPTER IV.

It was with conflicting feelings that Mollie brushed out her sunny hair before luncheon, staring absently the while into the glass with a perplexed frown.

They were strange people, these Dubois, and she uneasily felt that she could not fathom them.

Henri's cynical tone she considered unfeeling, for Leonard Barlowe had been his uncle after all; while madame never showed the least respect for her dead brother, though any allusion to him would visibly upset her self-control. And Mollie shrewdly guessed that the extravagant affection she heaped on Kate was but on the surface.

Evidently madame had sent for her son, and there was a "she" in the case—did they mean Kate?

Already Mollie had not a very high idea of their probity, and wondered how much power they had over the child's fortune.

But she did not think of herself at the moment, except to be glad that she was no relation of theirs. And then her thoughts drifted off to Reggie, and there was a smile on her face as she flung open the door, nearly running over Kate, who was advancing consequentially down the corridor, a huge box of distinctly Parisian bonbons in her arms.

"I shall not give you one because you would not take me to get moss," she said, with solemn spitefulness, as she displayed them.

"You should have gone with pleasure had you asked nicely," returned Mollie, unruffled. "But I will not take you anywhere when you are unpleasant."

And before the irate mistress of the house could find anything bitter enough for her poor little tongue to utter, the elder girl had passed her, and, descending the stairs, entered the dining room, where Madame Dubois and her son were standing by the fire. There they stood, these aliens and strangers, giving themselves all the airs of proprietorship in the house that ought to have been quite as much her's as Kate's. Standing, too, right under the painting of her father in full uniform that hung over the mantelpiece. It would have been removed long ago but that it had cost some hundreds of pounds, and, Mr. Barlowe secretly thought, added distinction to the room.

A hot wave of indignation and wounded pride swept over Mollie. What business had these people at Chalfont using everything as their own, while she herself was but a guest; and it was a very frigid and haughty bow that she gave in the direction of Monsieur Henri Dubois when his mother introduced him.

"What am I to call you?" exclaimed madame playfully. "Is it to be cousins?"

"Certainly not, madame," she broke in quickly, with a polite smile. "I am a L'Estrange, and the only relation I have in my father's house is my half-sister Kate." And her tone clearly implied that no other would be allowed.

The elder woman's face darkened visibly; but before she could speak Henri said, with a graceful, sweeping bow:

"Mademoiselle is cruel; but I trust in time to win and deserve her friendship."

With some murmured words of assent Mollie sank into her seat, and during luncheon took as complete a survey of the young man as the fact that he was covertly trying to do the same thing of her would allow. Small, slight, dapper, with sharp, well-cut features, a sallow complexion, and quick, black eyes, he was indeed a contrast to the young officer who already held a large place in her heart.

A thorough Frenchman was Henri Dubois, both in thought and appearance, though his English was very good; and as he sat at the foot of the table caressing his small, black mustache and endeavoring to make himself agreeable, Mollie privately came to the conclusion that she disliked and distrusted him only a little less than she did his mother, and that might only be because she did not know him so well. Indeed his high voice and cynical air contrasted badly with Reggie Anstruther's hearty tones and easy, well-bred manner, though it was plain that his mother thought him perfect, and rarely took her eyes from his face.

"Where have you been this morning, Mollie?" she demanded at length, when there came a break in the conversation.

"She has been for a country walk with Mr. Anstruther. I saw her," broke in Kate's little voice, maliciously "And she would not take me."

Did a swift glance of meaning pass between mother and son? Mollie could not be quite sure, for this unprovoked attack was disconcerting enough to make her blush furiously. It was very annoying, and madame's eyes were turned upon her crimson visage with unmerciful scrutiny.

"Kate knows why I would not take her," she said, breaking the pause with a somewhat haughty ring in her young voice.

"But this Mr. Anstruther——" began madame coldly.

"I met him when I was going to gather moss, and he accompanied me" —rather defiantly.

Madame's lips went into the thin line that gave such a very unpleasant expression to her face, and Mollie continued her luncheon with but a hazy notion of what was on her plate, and a vague, uncomfortable presentiment that picking moss in the bright sunshine with Reggie for a companion would not be allowed to occur again. Two or three times already, when her opinion had not agreed with madame's, she had been obliged to yield, and as the scene of the fragrant earthly moss, the flickering light through the budding branches in the shady lane, and Reggie's laughing brown face rose before her, so also did a feeling of her own helplessness in Madame Dubois' strong, shapely hands.

The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding small." This familiar expression was, perhaps, suggested by the sluggish windmills of the past. Being driven by the breezes of the heavens they might very properly be termed the "mills of the gods."
The difference between the Aermotor and the Aermotor of today is the difference between the windmill built by the gods and the windmill built by man.
Aermotor mills are not only small, but it grinds exceedingly fast. Modern skill and improved machinery have made a complete revolution in the windmill business. The old Dutch mills which had to be adjusted by hand to suit the direction of the wind, as well as the more modern American windmill, have been relegated to the past. They were too slow and too inefficient for this age. Aermotors, perched on their lofty towers, stand the evergreens, even the galvanized steel Aermotor. This revolution was precipitated some twelve years ago by the advent of the Aermotor Power Mill. With its graceful wings of steel, it seemed able, as if by magic, to extract a wonderful amount of energy from the gentle breeze. It could do this because it was scientifically built of suitable material and in proper form. The passing zephyrs seemed to take particular delight in playing with the swift revolving wheel of the Aermotor, and in a few months it was known the world over as the "wheel that runs when all others stand still." This characteristic is true today. But this is only one of the many reasons of the unbounded excellence of the Aermotor. It has attributed the world over by its marvelous strength and endurance. It should be noted, however, that all Aermotors are not Aermotors. Other windmills are made to look like Aermotors, but they are counterfeits. Fifteen years ago it was not possible to grind twelve or fifteen bushels of grain per hour with a twelve-foot windmill. This is now done daily by thousands of Aermotors, requiring only an ordinary breeze. Fourteen-foot or sixteen-foot Aermotors will easily grind from twenty to fifty bushels per hour. Not only will Aermotors grind, but they will run a corn sheller, feed cutter, wood saw or other farm machinery to perfection, and operate a pump at the same time. The expense is almost nothing. It can be made to pay for itself in a few months if the first year. No farmer can boast that his place is equipped with all modern machinery if it lacks a power Aermotor. The mower, binder or plow is used a few days each year, but the power Aermotor will make its usefulness every day of the year. It is the only power which can be used to run the pump, the grindstone, the churn, the washer, the cream separator, the feed cutter, the corn sheller, the fanning mill, the wood saw, the grain crusher, the corn husker, the shredder, the ensilage cutter, the hay press, the baler, the pea thresher, the clover huller, the feed mill, the root pulper, the fodder shredder, the corn and cob crusher, the corn and cob mill, the fruit evaporator, the apple parer, the cider mill, the lawn mower, the sewing machine, the vacuum cleaner, the ice cream freezer, the washing machine, the churn

A MINISTER'S GOOD WORK.

"I had a severe attack of bilious colic, got a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, took two doses and was entirely cured, says Rev. A. Bower, of Emporia, Kan. "My neighbor across the street was sick for over a week, had two or three bottles of medicine from the doctor. He used them for some days and gave him no relief, then called in another doctor who treated him for some days and gave him no relief, so discharged him. I said his bowels were in a terrible fix, that they had been running off so long that it was almost bloody flux. I asked him if he had tried Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea remedy and he said 'no.' I went home and brought him my bottle and give him one dose, told him to take another dose in fifteen or twenty minutes if he did not find relief, but he took no more and was entirely cured." Wm. told us the above and we rather sympathize with him and his woe begone look!

It depends a good deal on who tells a thing as to the veracity of the statement. For instance, two scoundrels are good men if one is speaking of the other, but that does not make it so. One mean man will speak of another mean man as a good man. A good clean man however, seldom speaks of a questionable man as being a good one. Just remember that and know who you are conversing with and of whom you are speaking.

MY HALF SISTER

CHAPTER IV.—(Continued.)

It was terribly galling, but until she came of age there was no help for it. Well, the only thing to do was to make the best of things, and be as happy as circumstances would permit. But this was easier said than done; there was not a soul in Chalfont she liked or trusted, and time hung heavily on her hands, for she could not always be with the Anstruther's, even had madame allowed it, and no one else came near them. Madame, had she known it, was in rather a difficulty. She greatly valued the Anstruthers' acquaintance, making a point of stopping to speak whenever she met them in Reverton, and hoping those who kept aloof from Chalfont would observe it; but, strange to say, she had forgotten Reggie, who, indeed, was not often at home, and now Kate had aroused her suspicions she was much perplexed.

She had her own plans for Mollie and if it came to a choice between them and the Anstruthers' friendship, she must reluctantly abandon their friendship.

Mollie soon found the difference; she was never left alone for a minute. Was she going into Reverton, madame was going also, or Henri would accompany her; there was nothing he would enjoy more.

"What do you think of Henri, Joyce?" asked Mollie the Saturday afternoon preceding Easter Sunday, when she had managed to evade both the Dubois, and, taking Kate to put a wreath on their mother's grave, had gone on to the White house.

The White house was not so large as Chalfont, but it had a beautiful old garden, and the two girls were wandering up and down the sheltered paths, while Kate took a solemn, dignified ride on the old swing under the trees that had recalled to Mollie her childhood days.

"He was very pleasant the few times he has been here," Joyce responded doubtfully, pausing to look at the yellow daffodils, the sweet-scented jonquils that lifted their heads from the dark mould. "But do you like him, Mollie?"

"I am afraid not," said she, thoughtfully. "You see, Joyce dear, he acts so strangely. He pretends to me that he loves England and the country, and I know he loves nothing but his beloved Paris. Yesterday he insisted upon accompanying me for a country walk, and madam said nothing, though she was angry when Reggie went with me to get moss. I know he hated it, for he had on French patent leather boots, and really could hardly limp home; and then, as I was going upstairs, I heard him swearing awfully to himself as he pulled them off. But he paid me compliments all the time, and he tells me that he adores 'le sport,' but he does not understand a gun, and he dare not drive the chestnuts, I know. And—and I cannot help thinking that because I shall have money——"

She looked at Joyce, wistfully, and Joyce not wishing to meet those sweet gray eyes at the moment, contemplated the daffodils, while she rapidly turned over in her own mind how to answer. Reverton both said and thought a great deal about the inmates of Chalfont that it would be a great pity for Mollie to know. For good or evil she was unfortunately in Madam Dubois' care at present; therefore why make her feet more uncomfortable than was necessary.

That Henri was paying court to the heiress seemed likely enough; her fortune would be a large one to a Frenchman; and that her own darling, handsome Reggie had more than a liking for the lovely, slender girl herself was equally true. Raising her eyes from the flowers, Joyce caught sight of both young men advancing towards them, and Reggie called out:

"I have brought you a visitor, Joyce. Mollie, come and have a swing with the child, for the sake of old lang syne."

They all turned back together to the spot where Kate was slowly swinging herself to and fro. But Joyce felt far from comfortable as she stood with the young Frenchman watching the half-sisters, as Reggie's strong, brown hand on the rope sent them flying up and down—Mollie's pink-and-white face like the spring day itself; Kate's flaxen curls floating on the breeze.

It was a pretty picture enough of youth, and, perhaps, looking at two of the faces, of love. But Henri did not seem to appreciate it as he stood fiercely twisting his silky little black moustache, while his sharp black eyes roved from one to the other, and his remarks grew fewer and fewer.

"I shall have a swing put up in my grounds," announced Kate condescendingly, as they came to a full stop.

"Mother had one made near the tennis-lawn," said Mollie, pushing back her rebellious curls, and fastening her hat.

"Oh, that is not good enough," retorted the child, her deep-set gray eyes fixed on her sister with cool insolence. "Chalfont is my property, and I shall have everything done that I like."

Reggie took his hand off the ropes with a muttered exclamation that sounded not unlike "little beast," and asked Mollie to come down to look at the tennis court, and as Henri seemed determined to go also, Joyce disregarded her brother's appealing eye, and watched them off, for she had noticed the sudden flush on Mollie's face. She knew how tenderly the girl regarded everything her mother had done, and in some wrath determined to have a word with the vain-glorious owner of Chalfont, whom, indeed, she would dearly have enjoyed shaking.

Kate was looking after the retreating trio with rather a disconcerted expression, for her sharp ears had caught Reggie's remark, and she liked Reggie; her boasting had been principally to impress him with her importance.

"Every one seems to like Mollie!" she said crossly. "I suppose it is because she is a L'Estrange; Jane and Harriet say so. Though I think it is horribly mean of the Reverton people not to call on us, and make such a fuss over her, for, as Jane often says, I am the heiress and mistress of Chalfont, and much richer than Mollie."

"I will tell you why every one likes Mollie," replied Joyce, regarding the stylishly arrayed little imp severely. "It is not alone because she is very pretty, but because she is always pleasant and sunny. Who ever heard Mollie say biting and unkind things on purpose to hurt people, or boasting about her possessions?"

"I suppose you mean that I do." And Kate sat still on the swing, and flung her curls back with an angry gesture. "Yet Mollie has got some money, you know, or Aunt Clare would not make such a fuss of her. Harriet says that she is sure she means to marry her to Henri; I heard her. But Jane says that with my persition I ought to marry a title; and I intend to."

And having delivered herself of these sentiments in her high childish voice she pushed the swing off with one thin, black-silk-stockinged leg.

"Who are Jane and Harriet?" asked Joyce shortly.

"My servants."

"Oh! And when you marry this nobleman, suppose you have two dear little girls, you will naturally leave this property to the younger?"

"Certainly not; that would not be fair. I should leave the most to the elder, or divide it." Kate had begun with lofty eloquence; then she caught Joyce's eye, and, being a very quick child, saw the pit into which she had fallen, and stopped abruptly. "You think Mollie has not been properly treated? The people in Reverton think so," she ended, below her breath.

"That has nothing to do with us, Kate," Joyce said gravely. "But if you can see this, perhaps—though you are so young—you can also see how well Mollie behaves. She does not grudge you anything, though Chalfont was her home before you were born. She never says bitter things to you, yet who has the most reason? I wonder you don't love her!"

Joyce never forgot the strange old look on the little thin face, as the child glanced at her after a dead pause. There was something both sad and weird about it; she might have been a hundred, with all the cares of life on her small shoulders, and looking at her Joyce remembered with a wave of compassion that she was but 10, and, if report said true, her life had never been as other children's. She had been a tool in her father's hands from birth; she was one in her aunt's now. Spoiled from policy, neglected from want of affection, left to the care of ignorant servants, who flattered her for their own ends and filled her head with nonsense, what chance had the unfortunate little heiress had?

"Come along," she said, holding out her hand to the silent child. "I see my mother beckoning to us from the drawing room window; let us run and call the others in for some tea."

CHAPTER V.

The White House was one of the most comfortable of homes; no dissension was ever heard there. The very servants, who had been in Mrs. Anstruther's service for years, seemed to share the prevailing harmony of contentment, and took a pride in serving the family faithfully.

And Mollie could not but notice the difference as, after a somewhat quiet walk home along the country road that separated the two houses by about a mile, the gates of Chalfont had clanged to behind them, and a morose-looking maid opened the hall door.

No household could have been happy under Madame Dubois' tyrannical rule, Mollie had quite made up her mind to that; and also another point—namely: That both mother and son were to be kept at arm's length; that she was a L'Estrange, and could not—could not—stand them!

And she had walked home in a ferment of indignation because Henri, after all the rebuffs she had given him, had actually dared to call her "Mollee" before the Anstruthers and a few vistors who had come in, and assumed airs of proprietorship as he marched them home.

So as Kate skipped off after the sulky-looking maid, she turned abruptly to the young man, who was lounging in the doorway furtively watching her with a faint cynical smile in his round black eyes. She was but a school girl, this young English mees, but she was adorably pretty, with a skin—ah, such lovely white skin—what would not Celestine or Lucie give for it!

"Monsieur Dubois," she said gently, fixing her clear gray eyes upon his dark face, "now my half-sister is gone I wish to speak to you—to remind you that we are mere acquaintances, and to such I am not 'Mollie,' but Miss L'Estrange. I am sorry you have forced me to mention this. I hoped that you understood it."

For a moment they stood facing each other, but her eyes never quailed before his; she had spirit and courage, this mere school girl, he recognized, yet a very evil look came into his face for a second ere he replied:

"And why for not, mademoiselle; you are my mother's ward, and that long-legged Anstruther he calls you what he please, doesn't he?"

"The Anstruthers are old family friends," she said hurriedly. "But it is not a subject to argue. I simply state my wishes, which I feel sure you will respect."

"Do not be too confident," he muttered between his teeth. "It is possible that I may resent being treated worse than this other fellow—"

"You have no right to resent anything, monsieur," she interrupted, with a haughty gesture. "I am alone here, but I can appeal to Madame Dubois, as I am in her care."

And she paused irresolutely as his mocking laugh fell upon her ear.

"Bah, mademoiselle, she lives but for me!" he said, with veiled insolence. "I am master here."

It was true Mollie's heart was beating uncomfortably fast; the prospect looked gloomy; but she had plenty of spirit, and Henri's whole manner was so detestable that her pride came to her aid and stilled her fears.

"If I am not treated with ordinary politeness, and allowed to live in peace, I shall complain to my trustees," she retorted, with flashing eyes.

"Of no use at all," he returned, with a sweeping bow. Then, coming closer and laying a small claw-like hand on her arm: "See here, Mol-lee, you are in my mother's power absolutely for two years, and she has an awful temper when opposed. You had better be friends with me. I, Henri Dubois, offer you my friendship."

Mollie shrank from his touch, from the sound of his thin, false voice, with unutterable loathing, realizing, poor child! with terrible distinctness that, like the man in the parable, she had fallen among thieves; then she drew back, throwing up her head with a scornful jerk, while her knees trembled so much that she leaned back against the door for support.

"You have again disregarded my wishes, monsieur." And by a great effort she spoke firmly. "I have nothing more to say." And she went down the steps into the garden.

Supreme Bench Dignity Irksome.

That the dignity of the Supreme bench is sometimes burdensome is illustrated by a remark made by Justice Brewer to a Washington official. The justice was about to take his vacation, and he said: "I am glad I am going to a resort where I can wear one gallus, no collar, and roll up my pants."

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, October 20, 1900.

John Pearson, superintendent of the Mutual Telephone company fire alarm system, while working on a high pole at Ninth and Walnut fell to the ground, a distance of fifty-five feet. Falling he struck on the concrete sidewalk and was rendered unconscious for some time, and it was at first thought that he was seriously injured. Examination, however, disclosed the fact that he had only suffered fractures of the left thigh and right foot.

Harry West says the party, with whom he is to be associated in pork packing, will be here the latter part of this month, and that the plant will be ready for operation not later than the first of November. A small strip of land between the two buildings, belonging to the packing plant, has been purchased, and the work of razing an old stone building to the ground will begin at once. Very little work is necessary to place the machinery in absolutely sound conditions.

By decision of the supreme court, Theodore Bertoch, who for more than two years has been an inmate of the state penitentiary and whose sentence was for life, will be set at liberty. Fate has been playing a peculiar game with Bertoch since September 12, 1897. His strangely involved case has twice demanded the consideration of the supreme court. A year ago last April they reversed the decision of the district court because Bertoch had been convicted of second instead of first degree murder, but a petition for a re-hearing was immediately filed by the state, and for another year and a half Bertoch has been awaiting the word from the court of last resort. The decision was in Bertoch's favor again, but for a different reason. The plea of the state that the instructions to the jury were not prejudicial to the defendant and that the supreme court should not have reversed the case on the grounds, has equally divided the court, Justices Waterman, Ladd and Sherwin dissenting, and so under the law it stands affirmed as without prejudice to the defendant, although the court is united that the instruction was erroneous. The case was reversed on grounds of insufficiency of evidence, something that was not even considered in the former opinion.

Governor Shaw has received and endorsed to the state treasurer a warrant for $10,248.70 for aid for the Soldiers' home at Marshalltown. It is the quarterly allowance for the period ending June 30, 1900, but it is not quite the full amount, as the appropriation has not been all provided for. The full amount of the quarterly allowance from the government is $12,100.

City Physician Schlitz has ordered the quarantine of Fred Barrs in Sevastopol for smallpox. Barrs is 15 years of age, and resides with his parents. There are six others in the family, all of whom have been exposed and will be kept under quarantine. The source from which he obtained the disease is a mystery, but it is not believed any other case exists in the city. This is the first case that has been reported in two months.

James F. Howard, a young attorney of Webster City, has had his license to practice in the courts of the state suspended for two years on account of unprofessional conduct. Disbarment proceedings were begun in Hamilton district last year, S. M. Weaver, judge, finding it appeared from the record in the case of George Barber vs. George C. Olmstead there was reasonable ground to revoke or suspend the license and directing N. B. Hyatt, A. N. Boeye and Wesley Martin, practicing attorneys of Hamilton county, to begin proceedings. The investigation resulted against Howard, who appealed to the supreme court and lost.

Reports of an alarming nature, telling of the existence of twenty-five to thirty cases of smallpox in Monona county, have reached the office of the state board of health. The cases are reported from Center and Jordan townships in that county and from the town of Moorehead. It is reported proper disinfection is not being enforced. Dr. Kennedy of the state board of health has written to Dr Condit of Sioux City and requested him to look after the matter.

The supreme court has sustained the decision of Judge Stevenson of the Polk county district court in the case of A. F. Bissell, administrator of the estate of Frank S. Law, deceased, appellant, vs. Frank Starzinger. The case was one in which the administrator alleged by reason of sales of liquor made by Starzinger to Law, when the latter was intoxicated and habitually drunk, the Law estate was damaged in the sum of $5,000. For this sum judgment was asked against Starzinger, who owned and operated a saloon in Des Moines. The defendant demurred to the petition on various grounds. One of these was that the estate had not been damaged as the evidence introduced showed the plaintiff to have been a habitual drunkard and incapable of earning money. The demurrer was sustained and judgment was rendered against the plaintiff, dismissing the action and for costs. The plaintiff appealed, but the supreme court fully upholds the trial court's decision.

PROGRESS OF AN OLD FRIEND.

It may be interesting to its friends to know of the tremendous gain in popularity and usefulness of one of the oldest aids to the weaker sex. It is upwards of fifty years since the first Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine was made, and during that time the business of the company has steadily grown, until now their machines are used by the millions and are known in every civilized country in the world. In cities there are a large number of women who earn their living entirely by sewing. These workers find that they can do more work on the No. 9, and therefore earn more money than with other makes. This advantage is accounted for because of the rapid sewing and easy running qualities of the No. 9, it being able to sew about three yards while the ordinary shuttle machine sews two. The Wheeler & Wilson Co. have been the most progressive in adapting new and labor saving devices to their family sewing machine, they being the first to introduce ball bearings and having the only lock stitch machine without a shuttle. Their machine to-day is claimed to be without a peer for simplicity and durability. "Competition," a handsome half-tone engraving which is attracting considerable attention, is being mailed free to any one writing for it to the Wheeler & Wilson Mfg. Co., Chicago, Ill.

Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. My Dear Mr. Editor:

The Passenger Department of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway begs leave to present to you under separate cover, by mail, a little souvenir, gotten up to remind our friends that our fast train, the "Katy Flyer," is still a flyin' between St. Louis and the Gulf of Mexico. Best up-to-date equipment, and short hours to and from the cities of St. Louis, Kansas City, Hannibal, Sedalia, Ft. Scott, Nevada, Parsons, Denison, Dallas, Ft. Worth, Waco, Houston, Galveston and San Antonio.

Should our friend, the Editor, feel disposed to make mention of the souvenir in his paper, (a unique penknife), he will please say that the cost of the souvenir prevents its general free distribution. We shall, however, send a souvenir to any of your readers on receipt of twenty-five cents, being less than its cost. Very truly, James Barker, G. P. & T. A., St. Louis, Mo.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

HOSHEBA'S HEROIC DEED, SUNDAY'S SUBJECT.

Draws a Useful Lesson from the Rescue of Joash from the Murderous Athaliah—The Saving of Souls—Perpetuity of the Bible.

(Copyright, 1900, by Louis Klopsch.)

The text is II. Kings xi., 2, 3: "Jehosheba, the daughter of King Joram, sister of Ahaziah, took Joash, the son of Ahaziah, and stole him from among the king's sons which were slain, and they hid him, even him and his nurse, in the bedchamber from Athaliah, so that he was not slain. And he was with her hid in the house of the Lord six years."

Grandmothers are more lenient with their children's children than they were with their own. At 40 years of age if discipline be necessary chastisement is used, but at 70 the grandmother, looking upon the misbehavior of the grandchild, is apologetic and disposed to substitute confectionery for whip. There is nothing more beautiful than childhood. Grandmother takes out her pocket handkerchief and wipes her spectacles and puts them on and looks down into the face of her mischievous and rebellious descendant and says, "I don't think he meant to do it. Let him off this time. I'll be responsible for his behavior in the future." My mother, with the second generation around her, a boisterous crew, said one day: "I suppose they ought to be disciplined, but I can't do it. Grandmothers are not fit to bring up grandchildren." But here in my text we have a grandmother of a different type.

I have been at Jerusalem, where the occurrence of the text took place, and the whole scene came vividly before me while I was going over the site of the ancient temple and climbing the towers of the king's palace. Here in the text it is old Athaliah, the royal murderess. She ought to have been honorable. Her father was a king. Her husband was a king. Her son was a king. And yet we find her plotting for the extermination of the entire royal family, including her own grandchildren. The executioners' knives are sharpened. The palace is red with the blood of princes and princesses. On all sides are shrieks and hands thrown up and struggle and death groan. No mercy! Kill, kill! But while the ivory floors of the palace run with carnage and the whole land is under the shadow of a great horror a fleet footed woman, a clergyman's wife, Jehosheba by name, stealthily approaches the imperial nursery, seizes upon the grandchild that had somehow as yet escaped massacre, wraps it up tenderly but in haste, snuggles it against her, flies down the palace stairs, her heart in her throat lest she be discovered in this compassionate abduction. Get her out of the way as quick as you can, for she carries a precious burden, even a young king. With this youthful prize she presses into the room of the ancient temple, the church of olden time, unwraps the young king and puts him down, sound asleep as he is and unconscious of the peril that has been threatened, and there for six years he is secreted in that church apartment. Meanwhile old Athaliah smacks her lips with satisfaction and thinks that all the royal family are dead. But the six years expire, and it is time for young Joash to come forth and take the throne and to push back into disgrace and death old Athaliah.

The Crowning of Joash.

The arrangements are all made for political revolution. The military come and take possession of the temple, swear loyalty to the boy Joash and stand around for his defense. See the sharpened swords and the burnished shields! Everything is ready. Now Joash, half affrighted at the armed troop of his defenders, scared at the vociferation of his admirers, is brought forth in full regalia. The scroll of authority is put in his hands, the coronet of government is put on his brow, and the people clapped and waved and huzzaed and trumpeted. "What is that?" asked Athaliah. "What is that sound over in the temple?" And she flies to see, and on her way they meet her and say, "Why haven't you heard? You thought you had slain all the royal family, but Joash has come to light." Then the royal murderess, frantic with rage, grabbed her mantle and tore it to tatters and cried until she foamed at the mouth: "You have no right to crown my grandson. You have no right to take the government from my shoulders. Treason, treason!"

While she stood there crying that the military started for her arrest, and she took a short cut through a back door of the temple and ran through the royal stables, but the battleaxes of the military fell on her in the barnyard, and for many a day when the horses were being unloosened from the chariot after drawing out young Joash the fiery steeds would snort and rear passing the place as they smell the place of the carnage.

Cannot Be Extinguished.

Well, my friends, just as poor a botch does the world always make of extinguishing righteousness. Superstition rises up and says, "I will just put an end to pure religion." Domitian slew 40,000 Christians, Diocletian slew 844,000 Christians. And the scythe of persecution has been swung through all the ages, and the flames hissed, and the guillotine chopped, and the Bastille groaned, but did the foes of Christianity exterminate it? Did they exterminate Alban, the first British sacrifice, or Zwingli, the Swiss reformer, or John Oldcastle, the Christian nobleman, or Abdallah, the Arabian martyr, or Anne Askew, or Sanders, or Cranmer? Great work of extermination they made of it. Just at the time when they thought they had slain all the royal family of Jesus some Joash would spring up and out and take the throne of power and wield a very scepter of Christian dominion.

Perpetuity of the Bible.

How many individual and organized attempts have been made to exterminate that Bible? Have its enemies done it? Have they exterminated the American Bible society? Have they exterminated the British and Foreign Bible society? Have they exterminated the thousands of Christian institutions whose only object it is to multiply copies of the Scriptures and spread them broadcast around the world? They have exterminated until instead of one or two copies of the Bible in our houses we have eight or ten, and we pile them up in the corners of our Sabbath school rooms and send great boxes of them everywhere. If they get on as well as they are now going on in the work of extermination, I do not know but that our children may live to see the millennium. Yea, if there should come a time of persecution in which all the known Bibles of the earth should be destroyed, all these lamps of life that blaze in our pulpits and in our families extinguished, in the very day that infidelity and sin should be holding jubilee over the universal extinction, there would be in some closet of a backwoods church a secreted copy of the Bible, and this Joash of eternal literature would come out and come up and take the throne, and the Athaliah of infidelity and persecution would fly out the back door of the palace and drop her miserable carcass under the hoofs of the horses of the king's stables. You can not exterminate Christianity. You cannot kill Joash.

The second thought I hand you from my subject is that there are opportunities in which we may save royal life. You know that profane history is replete with stories of strangled monarchs and of young princes who have been put out of the way. Here is the story of a young king saved. How Jehosheba, the clergyman's wife, must have trembled as she rushed into the imperial nursery and snatched up Joash! How she hushed him lest by his cry he hinder the escape! Fly with him, Jehosheba! You hold in your arms the cause of God and good government. Fail, and he is slain. Succeed, and you turn the tide of the world's history in the right direction. It seems as if between that young king and his assassins there is nothing but the frail arm of a woman. But why should we spend our time in praising this bravery of expedition when God asks the same thing of you and me? All around us the imperiled children of a great king. They are born of Almighty parentage and will come to a throne or a crown if permitted. But sin, the old Athaliah, goes forth to the massacre. Murderous temptations are out for the assassination. Valens, the emperor, was told that there was somebody in his realm that would usurp his throne and that the name of the man should begin with the letters T, H, E, O, D and the edict went forth from the emperor's throne, "Kill everybody whose name begins with T, H, E, O, D." And hundreds and thousands were slain, hoping by that massacre to put an end to that one usurper. But sin is more terrific in its denunciation. It matters not how you spell your name, you come under the knife, under its sword, under its doom, unless there be some omnipotent relief brought to the rescue. But, blessed be God, there is such a thing as delivering a royal soul. Who will snatch away Joash?

Instruction for Children.

This afternoon in your Sabbath school class there will be a prince of God, some one may yet reign as king forever before the throne; there will be some one in your class who has a corrupt physical inheritance; there will be some one in your class who has a father and mother who do not know how to pray; there will be some one in your class who is destined to command in church or state, some Cromwell to dissolve a parliament; some Beethoven to touch the world's harp strings, some John Howard to pour fresh air in the lazaretto, some Florence Nightingale to bandage the battle wounds, some Miss Dix to soothe the crazed brain, some John Frederick Oberlin to educate the besotted, some David Brainerd to change the Indian's warwhoop to a Sabbath song, some John Wesley to marshal three-fourths of Christendom, some John Knox to make queens turn pale, some Joash to demolish idolatry and strike for the kingdom of heaven. There are sleeping in your cradles by night, there are playing in your nurseries by day, imperial souls waiting for dominion, and whichever side the cradle they get out will decide the destiny of empires. For each one of those children sin and holiness contend—Athaliah on the one side, Jehosheba on the other. But I hear people say: "What's the use of bothering children with religious instruction? Let them grow up and choose for themselves. Don't interfere with their volition." Suppose some one had said to Jehosheba: "Don't interfere with that young Joash. Let him grow up and decide whether he likes the palace or not; whether he wants to be king or not. Don't disturb his volition." Jehosheba knew right well that unless that day the young king was rescued he would never be rescued at all. I tell you, my friends, the reason we don't reclaim all our children from worldliness is because we begin too late. Parents wait until the children lie before they teach them the value of truth. They wait until their children swear before they teach them the importance of righteous conversation. They wait until their children are all wrapt up in this world before they tell them of a better world. Too late with your prayers. Too late with your discipline. Too late with your benediction. You put all care upon your children between twelve and eighteen. Why do you not put the chief care between four and nine? It is too late to repair a vessel when it has got out of the drydocks. It is too late to save Joash after the executioners have broken in. May God arm us all for this work of snatching royal souls from death to coronation.

Work of Soul Saving.

Can you imagine any sublimer work than this soul saving? That was what flushed Paul's cheek with enthusiasm; that was what led Munson to risk his life amid Bornesian cannibals; that was what sent Dr. Abeel to preach under the consuming skies of China; that was what gave courage to Phocas in the third century. When the military officers came to put him to death for Christ's sake, he put them to bed that they might rest while he himself went out and in his own garden dug his grave and then came back and said, "I am ready." But they were shocked at the idea of taking the life of their host. He said, "It is the will of God that I should die," and he stood on the margin of his own grave, and they beheaded him. You say it is a mania, a foolishness, a fanaticism. Rather would I call it a glorious self-abnegation, the thrill of eternal satisfaction, the plucking of Joash from death and raising him to coronation.

The third thought I hand to you is that the church of God is a good hiding place. When Jehosheba rushes into the nursery of the king and picks up Joash, what shall she do with him? Shall she take him to some room in the palace? No, for the official desperadoes will hunt through every nook and corner of that building. Shall she take him to the residence of some wealthy citizen? No, that citizen would not dare to harbor the fugitive. But she has to take him somewhere. She hears the cry of the mob in the streets; she hears the shriek of the dying nobility; so she rushes with Joash into the room of the temple, into the house of God, and there she puts him down. She knows that Athaliah and her wicked assassins will not bother the temple a great deal. So they are not apt to go very much to church, and so she sets down Joash in the temple. There he will be hearing the songs of the worshipers year after year; there he will breathe the odor of the golden censers; in that sacred spot he will tarry, secreted until the six years have passed and he come to enthronement.

The Best Hiding Place.

Would God that we were all as wise as Jehosheba and knew that the church of God is the best hiding place! Perhaps our parents took us there in early days. They snatched us away from the world and hid us behind the baptismal fonts and amid the Bibles and psalm books. O glorious inclosure! We have been breathing the breath of the golden censers all the time, and we have seen the Lamb on the altar, and we have handled the vials in which are the prayers of all saints, and we have dwelt under the wings of the cherubim. Glorious inclosure! When my father and mother died and the property was settled up, there was hardlly anything left. But they endowed us with a property worth more than any earthly possession because they hid us in the temple. And when days of temptation have come upon my soul I have gone there for shelter, and when assaulted of sorrows I have gone there for comfort, and there I mean to live. I want, like Joash, to stay until coronation.

HURT IN STREET-CAR WRECK.

Injuries to Thirteen Persons at Indianapolis.

RUN DOWN BY SWITCH ENGINE.

Passengers Are Pinioned by the Broken Timbers—Conductor Sent Ahead to See if Track Is Clear Fails to Act in Time.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 22.—A Lake Erie switch engine crashed into a street car at Thirteenth street, injuring thirteen of the twenty-one passengers, four of whom may die. Those who were injured are: Arthur Staats, Jefferson avenue, may die; Eaton Barnes, No. 859 Virginia avenue, may die; Hattie Gurley; Sadie Weeks, No. 449 Madison avenue, may die; Mrs. Prudence Campbell, No. 406 North West street; Miss Mamie Campbell, No. 406 North West street; Bert Baldwin, No. 232 East St. Joseph street, may die; Dr. E. B. Brigham, No. 1110 East Tenth street; Atlas Moore, No. 23 South Oriental street; Henry Strieby, No. 1823 Temple street; Emanuel Coonfield, No. 716 Madison avenue; Charles Barnes, No. 406 East Michigan street; H. P. Brunaugh. The engine struck the front end of the car, smashing it to kindling wood and carrying it for twenty feet, finally throwing it against a freight car standing on a side track. The passengers, many of whom were in the wrecked end of the car, were pinioned by the broken and twisted timbers. The doors could not be opened and the uninjured persons in their mad rush to escape trampled over those unable to help themselves. To add to the general confusion the steam from the engine enveloped the wrecked car and it was with great difficulty the work of rescue was accomplished. Half the passengers were women, and their screams and the crash awoke people living within two blocks of the scene of the accident. The wrecked car was returning from Brightwood, and had on board a number of people who had been attending a Republican meeting. When the tracks were reached the conductor, Harry Kraus, went ahead as usual to see that the road was clear. A Monon engine going north passed the crossing, drowning the noise made by the Lake Erie engine. He was unable to see the engine till too late. He yelled to the motorman, and four or five passengers on the rear platform jumped to safety.

Hanna in Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb., Oct., 22.—Senator Hanna opened up war at close range on William J. Bryan. He spoke in fourteen Nebraska towns to an aggregate of 30,000 people. Starting early in the morning at Sioux City, Iowa, where he talked to 2,000 men on their way to work, he crossed the Missouri river and began his two days' tour of this state at Emerson. From that point he worked through the eastern central country, north of the Platte river, ending the day's campaign at Lincoln.

On the Prohibition Train.

Baltimore, Md., Oct. 22.—The prohibition special train with John G. Woolley and party aboard, left Jersey City, N. J., at 9 o'clock over the Pennsylvania road, reaching Chester, the first stop, at 12:3[illegible] o'clock. Afternoon stops were made at Wilmington and Newark, in Delaware, and Elkton and Havre de Grace, in Maryland. The night meeting was held at Baltimore.

Students Hear Bryan.

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 22.—William J. Bryan scored off 500 Cornell students to-day in a lively game of politics in Ithaca. For the second time during the campaign the presidential candidate was put on the stand and closely examined as to the integrity of his political views, the first instance being at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Mr. Stevenson Is at Utica.

Utica, N. Y., Oct. 22.—Adlai E. Stevenson arrived here shortly after noon from Lowville, where he spoke last night. He expressed himself as highly gratified with the meeting in Lewis county and said it augured well when 1,500 men came out to hear a speech in a small town on a cold fall night.

Change in General Manager.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 20.—The management of the Choctaw, Oklahoma & Gulf Railroad company issued a circular today announcing the resignation of Col. Henry Wood as general manager and the selection of President Francis I. Gowen to succeed him.

Roosevelt at Charleston, W. Va.

Hinton, W. Va., Oct. 22.—The Roosevelt meeting at Charleston, W. Va., was the most remarkable since leaving Cleveland. Colonel Roosevelt took occasion to denounce William Jennings Bryan and the Democratic leaders with extraordinary vehemence.

JOY FOR PAUL KRUGER.

Said That France Will Give Him an Encouraging Word.

New York, Oct. 19.—It is stated on excellent authority, says a cablegram to the Times from Peking, that ex-President Kruger will, after landing at Marseilles, pass through Paris and he will be received with all the honors due a head of state. The municipality of Marseilles is making preparations for a grand reception for Kruger, and it is quite certain he will be enthusiastically welcomed by the population in general.

Recommencement of the active defense in the Transvaal has re-awakened European interest in the Boer cause, and the French government, in common with other European governments, is not sorry to see this re-awakening of sympathy, as Great Britain's hands are all but completely tied while the Boers remain active.

In China, and in the settlement of any difference with Great Britain, her rivals can therefore take the advantage. It is likely, for this reason, that Europe, and especially France, will give the semblance of encouragement to Kruger, and will hold out a vague hope of intervention. A well informed politician stated this will be the policy of the French government. Kruger will be well received, and the Boers will be encouraged as much as possible. The end of hostilities need not therefore be looked for at present. Kruger's friends are still hoping he will visit America.

PUT SECRETLY ON BOARD.

President Kruger Leaves His Country For Holland.

Lorenzo Marquez, Oct. 20.—Kruger was secretly taken at 5 o'clock a. m. on board the Dutch cruiser Gelderland, on which vessel he is to sail for Holland.

The reason given for his embarkation is he feared the Boers here would attack him. The feeling of the refugees against Kruger for fleeing the country is very strong.

London, Oct. 20.—Roberts reports from Pretoria:

"A party of Boers got into Jagersfontein the night of October 16. A fight ensued the next morning. Our loss was eleven killed. The Boers lost the commandant and twenty killed. A column under Hughes Hallet should reach Jagersfontein today."

Lorenzo Marquez, Oct. 20.—Local railroad authorities have been instructed to hand over to the British all rolling stock of the Netherland railroads.

CHOLERA IN HOG SHIPMENTS.

More Than One Hundred Cases Found at Chicago Stock Yards.

Chicago, Oct. 20.—Cholera has appeared among hogs being received at the stock yards. Among 36,828 animals, 107 cases have been found by the bureau of animal industry. The infected animals were condemned by the government inspectors and ordered tanked.

Most of the affected hogs come from the northwest. Dr. Orion E. Dyson, chief of the bureau of animal industry, said:

"Just at this time of the year there is always more or less cholera among swine, but in the last few days there has developed more than at any other one time. My inspectors, however, are on the alert and I don't expect we shall miss a case."

WILLIAM L. WILSON DEAD.

Author of the "Wilson Bill" Passes Away at Lexington.

Lexington, Va., Oct. 19.—General William L. Wilson, former congressman and cabinet officer, and father of the famous "Wilson bill," regulating the tariff, died at his home Wednesday. His death was sudden, and the news proved a severe shock to the people here, with whom the former postmaster general was popular. General Wilson served several years in congress. He was distinguished as a soldier, a statesman and an educator and had since his retirement from political life occupied the position of president of the famous Washington and Lee University. Last year he was mentioned prominently as a candidate for the presidency of Yale and was said to have been tendered the post.

LIBBY'S FOOD PRODUCTS LEAD

The Grand Prix d'Honneur and two gold medals have been awarded by the International Jury of Awards at the Paris Exposition, to Libby, McNeill & Libby, of Chicago, for the purity, excellence and superiority of their canned foods. Here in America, the "Libby" Brand has always been recognized as typical of the highest standard of excellence attained in the preservation of meats, and it is a noticeable fact that the products of Libby, McNeill & Libby have received the highest awards at every Exposition held in the United States during the past two decades. This firm issues a book "How to Make Good Things to Eat," which will be mailed free on request. Drop a postal to Libby, McNeill & Libby, Chicago, Ill., for it.

Russia Will Act Independently.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 18.—The Russian government permits it to become known that its attitude in China will be an increasing independence of the concert of the powers. It is explained that Russia is disposed to attach less value to joint action since her interests have been fully secured in the successful campaign in Manchuria. Moreover, Russia is not willing to follow the irreconcilable policy of some of the powers.

The real estate transfer of this county show sales where there is an increase of $18 per acre within thirty days on a half section near Goodell. The first selling price was $32 an acre. When you can get land for that amount in this or Wright, buy it quick.

A serious fire was averted yesterday noon by the fortunate early discovery of it by K. A. Arsland. He noticed smoke issuing from the northeast upstairs window of the residence occupied by Mr. Kluckhohn and at once gave the alarm. A bed and the clothes were found to be afire and by quick action the fire was stopped.

The Hancock County SIGNAL says: "The Klemme TIMES under the able editorship of our late follow townsmen Chas. P. Ell, is developing into one of the bright news papers of the county."

One of our bank employes tells a good story on one of his associates, but it is given to us under conditions that no name be mentioned and we will have to abide by our promise. It was Sunday and the hero of our tale had some writing to do. The flies were thick and mean and he hunted up two sheets of fly paper which he placed in a couple of chairs near the windows. That evening he went out for a walk and it was late when he returned. He forgot the tanglefoot and sat down in one of the chairs. He got up right away and proceeded to pick the the paper off the south end of his trousers. As it was a bad place to get at he took them off and while cleaning them unconsciously sat down in the other chair—tableau.—Waukon Democrat.

SPASMS!

From the Crystal Lake Reflector. Corrected and Commented on.

Bro. Ell would know more if he were a "school boy" instead of a "man among men."

That's alright.

Bro. Ell refers us to a democratic editor who edits a republican paper. We know of no one who fills the bill.

That's better.

We need enlightenment, says the Klemme Times. It will take some one better qualified than it(')s editor to give us our needed enlightenment.

That's excellant!

Bro. Ell evidently neglected his composition, grammer, and rhetoric when he was a "school boy" and befor(e) he became a "man among men."

And that's fine!

The writer of the article ? clipped from the Klemme Times is (a) hot one with which to class a person unless they—(he) wish—(wishes) to discourage him—(them.)

Question mark in first line should have been omitted. The a in second line we supplied. In last two lines "they" should be "he," "wish" should be "wishes" and "him" would sound better were it "them."

We edit this paper, which is an independent paper, (that's just what we imagined, you are too 'independent to suit!) without the "aid" of any one. (Certainly, "help" would be better!) We help edit no other paper. (That fact is self evident through your present efforts!) So Bro. Ell kindly tell us the name of the democratic editor who edits both a democratic and a republican paper.

That's getting sublime!

Free advertising was brought to our mind in a rather queer way of late. There are many kinds of free advertising as any news paper man knows. Here comes a fellow who wants it so cheap one may as well give it to him and say nothing. Over yonder stands the talker who does nothing but advertise and defame someone's name. Then there are editors who give free advertising in the way of "puffing" their patrons. The fellow that pays $5. or $10. to have some "scape grace" show menion his name during the programme, and many other ideas about advertising. But the sleekest scheme for FREE ADVERTISIING is to have a brother editor who knows more than you do! One who has grammer, rhetoric and composition down pat! He who can tell you more in a minute than you can learn in seven year! Who knows all about this and the other world! Who works on a salary of $5.00 a week! Who is the wisest, smartest and most noble man in this county! One who runs an "Independent" paper four timss the size of our own (in feeling!) To have him devote an entire issue of his valuable paper to tearing down all we have buiided in five years of hard labor is what makes us feel so good! But we are quite sure that he has damaged our mental powers and physical structure only a teenty weenty little bit. We are as high in the estimation of our friends as ever! Surprising is it not? The best medicine to feed fellows of such a jealous nature is to simply give them a passing cuff and kick and let them do their worst. We will pay no more attention to such monsters! If Bro. James Forrest wishes to devote another issue of his paper to advertising The Klemms TIMES free of charge he is at liberty to do so. We have said our say. 'Tis Done!

The number of aborigines in New South Wales continues to decrease. According to the last report of the Aborigines' Protection Board, there were 3,203 full-bloods and 3,689 half-castes, or 6,892 in all, in the colony at the end of June. The full-bloods have decreased from 6,540 in 1882, whilst the half castes have increased from 2,379.

Mansfield, O., had its usual relaxation with a Dowie elder the other day, when a mob attacked Homer Kessler, advertising manager of "The Coming City" and stoned him and the deputy sheriffs who had taken him in charge. In the exchange of stone compliments the deputies and a cabman seem to have fored worse than the Dowieite. It now seems reasonably certain that Mansfield does not want the Dowieites, but it is also certain it is taking the most effective steps inspreading the humbug cult. Dawieism has plenty of converts, who are glad to achieve the cheap martyrdom Mansfield seems willing to bestow upon them.

After carrying a Union bullet in his body for thirty-eight years, General R. N. Richbourg of Montgomery, S. C., has got rid of it. He commanded the fourth brigade, South Carolina militia, was twice wounded at the battle of Frazier's farm, June 7, 1862, and while charging the breastworks a bullet struck him full in the breast. The other day at Montgomery he felt a pain in his back, and that night he placed a drawing plaster to the spot where there was inflammation. The next morning the pain was relieved, and taking off the plaster, he found the bullet sticking to it.

The coast and geodetic survey has recently completed some very careful leveling operations which show that the surface of the Gulf of Mexico lies perceptibly higher than that of the Atlantic ocean. Btween the surface of the ocean at St. Augustine, on the eastern snore of Florida, and the surface of the gulf at Cedar Keys, on the western shore, there is a mean difference in level of nine-tenths of a foot. This is considered to be sufficient to account for the outpouring current of the gulf stream, which in the narrower part of the Strait of Florida touches bottom. The surplus of water which raises the gulf above the level of the ocean is apparently received through the Yucatan channel, being driven in by the prevailing equatorial currents from the east.

The International Railway Surgeons convention recently approved certain hygienic suggestions made by Dr. J. N. Hurby, and it is said that two of the western railroads have already agreed to carry them out. They call for the removal from passenger cars of plush coverings, carpets, boxes over steam pipes, carved work, slat blinds and all other materials, fittings and ornaments that are likely to catch or disseminate disease germs. Doctor Hurby said unpleasant things, too, about the tin drinking cups used by everybody, and advocated providing individual paper cups. Of course, he did not fail to give a thrust at the ventilating appliances. in all these matters there is room for improvement, and doubtless travelers by railway would willingly dispense with "plush and gingerbread work" in favor of clean, airy, wholesome cars.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

NEW COLLEGE PRESIDENT.

Dr. Adams, of Kalamazoo, Made President of Des Moines College.

Muscatine, Oct. 25.—The board of the Des Moines college held a meeting here, the following being present: Wm. Atkinson, Des Moines; H. A. Heath, Keokuk; F. W. Parsons, Marshalltown; A. Abernathy, Osage; J. A. Earl, Waterloo; W. M. Walker, Des Moines; Henry Jayne, Muscatine; F. W. Bateson, Denison; H. L. Stetson, Des Moines; L. D. Leland, Boone; W. S. Goodell, Des Moines; Arthur Fowler, Muscatine; E. P. Bartlett, Des Moines. The board extends the presidency of the college to Rev. George B. Adams, D. D., of Kalmazoo, Mich. When asked whether he would accept the invitation to the presidency, Dr. Adams said: "Yes, I shall accept the honor extended to me, and will probably take up my new duties about the first of January."

Kalamazoo, Mich., Oct. 25.—Rev George D. Adams, the new president of the Des Moines college, Iowa, has served for some time as pastor of the First Baptist church of this city, whose pulpit he leaves to enter upon his wider sphere of activity as an educator.

Dr. Adams won an enviable popularity during his pastorate of the First church here. His thorough appreciation of the desirable points of a Christian clergyman is very keen. His dignity and generosity, his charity and equanimity endeared him to all classes of the people, and his learning won from them their unstinted admiration.

Rev. Mr. Adams is in all respects capable of administering the work of the office to which he has been called. He is a graduate of Colgate university, New York, where he won degrees in the arts and in other branches of learning. He will formally announce his acceptance of the presidency of Des Moines at the Iowa State Baptist convention this week, where he will preach the convention sermon.

HOSPITAL FOR FORT DODGE.

Abraham Slimmer Offers $50,000 Toward Building It.

Fort Dodge, Oct. 29.—A. Slimmer, of Waverly has just made the city of Fort Dodge an offer to donate $50,000 for the erection of a city hospital. The only conditions attending the gift are that the city shall furnish another $50,000 to be devoted to the purpose of a permanent fund to the hospital and that the hospital service shall be free to persons of all colors and creeds.

Mr. Slimmer is a man of advanced age and abundant means and is becoming well known as a philanthropist. In 1898 he made a similar gift to the Finley hospital of Dubuque, which was accepted and has resulted in the erection of a handsome new building in that city.

The improvement is much needed in Fort Dodge, as the hospital accomodations are wholly inadequate. Mr. Slimmer's offer was entirely unexpected, as he had received no solicitation save from private sources.

The state convention of the Epworth League elected officers as follows: President, Fred L. Montgomery, of Fayette; Secretary, C. B. Roberts, of Adel; Treasurer, George I. Huffman, of Des Moines; Junior Superintendent, Miss Susie A. Mills, of Marshalltown; Vice-presidents, Prof. Charles Eldred Shelton, of Indianola; Rev. H. W. Troy, of New Hampton; Miss Louise Hinsey, of Ottumwa; Rev. George Whitfield, of Burt. The place of holding the next convention was left to the new cabinet.

Sioux City Man's Sad Death.

Sioux City, Oct. 26.—Particularly sad was the fate which befell Tom Finnegan, of Sioux City, who on his way home from the Klondike with the wealth with which he was going to surprise his old parents in this city, fell and injured himelf at Skagway, and died at Vancouver shortly afterwards, as a result of his injuries. His parents who have just learned of their son's death, are among the pioneer settlers of this vicinity. The extent of Finnegan's wealth is not known here, but it is known he made some good strikes in the gold country, where he went in the spring of 1898. His parents have waited anxiously for their son's return, and the news of his death was a great shock to them. The remains will be brought to Sioux City.

Janitor Strikes It Rich.

Cedar Rapids, Oct. 26.—Reginald Andrews, a young Englishman who recently came to this country, and who has been employed for the past few months as janitor at the Home for Aged Women in this city, has just received word that he is heir to $50,000 left to him by his uncle, who died a short time ago in England. A few months ago Mr. Andrews saved the lives of the inmates of the home by a most daring act, and one which won for him a splendid gold medal, suitably engraved.

Iowa City Salesman Killed.

Rising Sun, Neb., Oct. 26.—A broken rail caused the wreck of the west bound passenger train on the Union Pacific, one coach and the baggage car leaving the track and turning over on their sides. G. L. Flanagan, a salesman of Iowa City, Iowa, was caught under the car and killed. Mrs. Albert Sjoberg, of Lincoln, Neb., was injured, not fatally. The property loss is heavy.

FARMER ROBBED.

Permitted Two Men to Ride and They Got His Money.

Charles City, Oct. 25.—Oscar Squires a farmer who lives six miles from this city, was robbed of $150, while returning to his home from this place. Squires had been to the city with a load of hogs, which he had sold for $150, and drawing the money from the bank he placed it in his hip pocket and started for home. When scarcely out of the city two men wearing overalls and presenting all the appearances of laborers, accosted him and asked if they might have a ride. Their story was that they were going into the country to get a job husking corn. Having received permission to ride with the farmer, one took his seat at the side, while the other stood behind the two men. Both men were very talkative and kept the unsuspecting farmer busy with the conversation until at a sharp turn in the road they signified their intention of going the other direction and left the man, who drove on to his home. It was not till he reached his place that he discovered the money was missing. The back of his coat and his pocket had been cut with a knife and all the contents of his pocket taken. It is believed that the crooks saw the farmer come from the bank and laid for him. Squires is a young man just starting out in his farming and his loss, though it was small, was a severe one to him.

WEBSTER CITY WINS.

Mrs. Freda Oppenheimer is Elected Grand Matron of O. E. S.

Des Moines, Oct. 26.—As a reward of merit and as a result of the withdrawal of Mrs. Mary B. Rathbun, who served as worthy matron for the past two years, and who declined re-election, the officers of the Grand chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star were advanced in office. Mrs. Freda Oppenheimer of Webster City, formerly associate grand matron, was elected worthy grand matron, without any opposition. The officers selected are as follows: Worthy grand matron, Mrs. Freda Oppenheimer, Webster City; worthy grand patron, A. J. Small, Des Moines; associate grand matron, Mrs. Jane Weber, Cherokee; associate grand patron, Dr. J. C. W. Coxe, Washington; grand secretary, Mrs. Maria Jackson, Council Bluffs. The next convention, which will be the twenty-fourth annual convention, will be held in Sioux City, the fourth week in October.

For Violating Revenue Law.

Rockwell City, Oct. 27.—Jacob Zeigler, a Williams township farmer, was taken into custody by United States revenue officers and taken to Fort Dodge. He was charged with having violated the internal revenue laws by neglecting to affix a properly cancelled revenue stamp on an order for strawberry plants which he gave to Fred Chapman, a nursery stock peddler, some months ago. The plants were to have been delivered in the proper season, in the spring, but were not delivered until along in July. Zeigler refused to take them, and Chapman sued him. Zeigler won the case, and now comes Chapman charging Zeigler with a violation of the internal revenue laws.

Des Moines Mulcts Evils.

Des Moines, Oct. 27.—The city's income from gambling rooms and the socia evil is now about $3,200 per month. Four hundred and twenty dollars was paid into the city treasury by women yesterday, who voluntarily walked into the captain's office and laid down $13 each. These women were about one-third of those of their class who are on the list of Sergeant Morris and are supposed to pay fines monthly. The gamblers are supposed to contribute about $200 monthly for each of the nine places now in operation.

He Gets Five Years.

Clarion, Oct. 27.—Harry Harper gets five years at hard labor at Anamosa for setting fire last summer to Lunday's wagon shop, which also destroyed other property. Lunday's trial followed, when Harper took the stand and made a clean breast of the affair, implicating Lunday as planning the whole affair for the insurance. From the fact Lunday had been in the asylum once it was disbelieved by part of the jury and they disagreed. His trial will come up again next term.

Sent up For Twenty Years.

Mason City, Oct. 29.—Judge Clyde yesterday passed sentence upon Fred Lawrence, the confessed rapist, giving him a term of twenty years in the penitentiary. The court also sentenced to the penitentiary for two and a half years Bert Lorrimer, who recently, while playing pool with an associate, Claude Morris, extracted $160 from his coat pocket.

Native Christains Massacred.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 29.—Dispatches from Mudken received at the war office say that proof is at hand that 400 native Christians were massacred at Mukden before the Russian occupation. Fifty modern guns, mostly Krups, several thousand small calibre rifles and twenty million cartridges have been found.

Paid His $1,000 Fine.

Clarion, Oct. 27.—J. D. Denison, Sr., paid to the county clerk his fine of $1,000 for violating the liquor law. Soon after Sheriff Duer arrested him on an indictment along the same line having been found by the grand jury. He gave $1,500 to appear in next term of court.

NEWS IN GENERAL.

HAD TO RETREAT.

Americans, Outnumbered by Filipinos, Retreat With Loss.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The war department has received the following from McArthur:

Manila, Oct. 24.—First Lieutenant Febiger, with forty men from Company H, Thirty-third regiment, and Second Lieutenant Crasson V. Heidt, with sixty men from Troop L, Third cavalry, attacked the insurgents fourteen miles east of Tarvican, Ilocos province, Luzon. They developed a strong position occupied by about four hundred riflemen, and 1,000 bolomen under the command of Juan Villamor, a subordinate of Timos. A desperate fight ensued, which was most creditable to the force engaged, though under a heavy pressure of overwhelming numbers, our troops were compelled to return to Tarvican, which was accomplished in a tactical and orderly manner. Acting Assistant Surgeon Rath and a civilian teamster, captured early in the fight, were released by Villamor. According to their acounts the insurgents are much stronger than reported herein, and their loss at a moderate estimate was over 150. Our loss: Killed, First Lieutenant George L. Febiger, Charles A. Lindenberg, William F. Wilson, of Company H, Thirty-third regiment; Andrew T. Johnson, Farrier, Guy E. McClintock, Troop L, Third cavalry. Nine men were wounded, and four men and twenty-nine horses missing.

WILL OF JOHN SHERMAN.

Estate of $3,000,000 Goes Principally To Relatives.

Mansfield, Ohio, Oct. 29.—The will of the late John Sherman has been offered for probate. It is estimated that the estate of the former secretary of state, the greater part of which is real property in Washington and Mansfield, amounts to $3,000,000.

With the exception of bequests of $5,000 each to Kenyon College, at Gambier, Ohio; Oberlin College, Ohio, and Sherman-Heinnemann Park at Mansfield, the estate is left to relatives of Mr. Sherman. The largest share is that of Mrs. Mary McCallum, the adopted daughter of Mr. Sherman, whose portion will amount to over $500,000.

The residuary legatees, besides Mrs. McCallum, are five nephews of the deceased, one son of each of the five brothers. They, with Mrs. McCallum, inherit all of the estate, with the exception of the $100.000 given independently to Mrs. McCallum, and $95,000 specifically bequeathed. The names of those receiving the bulk of the estate are: Mrs. McCallum, the heirs of Henry S. Sherman, of Cleveland, son of the late Judge Charles T. Sherman; P. Tecumseh Sherman, of New York, son of General William Tecumseh Sherman; Charles M. Sherman, of Chicago, son of Hoyt Sherman, of Iowa; Hoyt Sherman, Jr., of Salt Lake City, son of James Sherman; Charles H. Sherman, of San Francisco, son of L. P. Sherman. All the brothers of the late secretary are dead except two.

CONGER PREFERS CHARGES.

Accuses Captain N. T. Hall of Marines of Cowardice.

Washington, Oct. 29.—Minister Conger has preferred charges of cowardice against Capt. Newt T. Hall, United States M. C., the second in command of the marine force at Peking during the siege. The details are closely guarded, the regulations of the war and navy department strictly forbidding publicity at this stage. It is gathered, however, that Mr. Conger questioned Mr. Hall's courage because of the latter's declination to carry out certain military operations suggested by the minister. General Chaffee examined the charges, made an inquiry on his own acount, and sent the papers to Washington, with a recommendation that no further proceedings be had.

The navy department, however, decided that the high morale of the marine corps required the most formal and complete acquittal of an accused officer from such a charge. Consequently the papers were referred to General Heywood, the commandant of marines, who is taking steps to have a thorough investigation by a proper court.

RADICAL ADVICE TO ROBERTS.

London, Oct. 29.—With the exception of the unexpected activity of the Boers and the re-appearance before the public of a statesman supposed to be politically dead, nothing has occurred this week in England capable of disturbing the enthusiam over home coming of the city imperial volunteers. The news of the guerrilla successes in South Africa which has been received in the last few days, has prompted some of the more serious publications to sound notes of alarm. The Saturday Review begs Lord Roberts to take "a lesson from one who was a greater soldier than he, namely, Caesar, and ruthlessly suppress the rebellion." "The truest mercy in the present case," says the Globe, "is to be merciless.

That fairly voices the average opinion of the government organs, while a few out-and-out radical organs scarcely conceal their satisfaction arising from their ability to say "I told you so" in reference to the war being long drawn out and enduring racial hatred that time will not dispute.

NO MENACE IS INVOLVED.

Count De Quadt Says Germany Has No Ulterior Motives.

Washington, Oct. 25.—In view of the widespread comment that the Anglo-German alliance campaign in China was open to the possible construction of an implied or indirect menace or threat against some other power interested in the Chinese question, the attention of Count de Quadt, the German charge d'affaires, was called to this point. Count de Quadt said that he was able to give categorical and very positive statement, on the highest autnority, that the agreement involved no menace whatever to any power concerned in China. He said this applied to all the parties which had taken a hand in Chinese affairs. Count de Quadt stated with equal positiveness that there was no foundation for reports of further or additional features to the agreement beyond those transmitted to the various governments and made public. He said that document covered the entire transaction. The response of the United States to the Anglo-German agreement is still held in abeyance.

A dispatch from Peking says: "A preliminary convention between China and the combined powers has been proposed by Prince Ching and Li Hung Chang. It is as follows:

"Article 1. Laying siege to the legations of foreign ministers is a high offense against international law. No country can possibly tolerate such a thing. China acknowledges her great fault in this respect and promises that it will never occur again.

"Art. 2. China admits her liability to pay an indemnity for the various losses sustained on this occasion, and the powers will each appoint officials to examine and present all claims for a final consultation and settlement.

"Art. 3. As to future trade and general international relations, each power should designate how the matters are to be dealt with, whether the old treaties should continue or new conventions should be made, slightly modifying the old treaties, or canceling the old treaties and negotiating new ones. Either of these plans may be adopted and when China has approved them further special regulations can be made in each case as required.

"Art. 4. This convention will be made with China with the combined powers to cover the general principles, which apply alike to all. This settlement reached, the foreign ministers will remove the seals they caused to be placed in various parts of the tsung-li-yamen and attend to business as usual. And further, each power should arrange its own special affairs with China, so that separate treaties may be settled in due order. When the various items of indemnity are all arranged properly, or an understanding has been reached about them, the powers will successively withdraw their troops.

"Art. 5. The troops sent to China by the powers are for the protection of the ministers and no other purpose, so when the negotiations begin for treaties of peace each power should first declare an armistice."

LEADERS END THEIR LIVES.

High Chinese Dignitaries Help Emperor Out of Trouble.

Washington, Oct. 27.—The Chinese minister has received a dispatch stating that Kang Yi, a member of the cabinet with Yung Yi, one of the intense anti-foreign leaders whose punishment was demanded by the powers, died of illness on the 18th inst.; also that Hu Hsien, the late governor of Shan Si, who is said to have been responsible for the death of many missionaries, has committed suicide by swallowing gold leaf. Minister Wu regards this act as the result of the disfavor which the high officials have received from the throne.

The text of the communication handed by the Chinese minister to the secretary of state today is as follows:

"Cablegram from Viceroy Chang Chi Tung, dated October 25, states that governor of Shan Si reported that Kang Yi died on October 18; that Yu Hsien (late governor of Shan Si), has committed suicide by swallowing gold leaf, and Prince Tuan has not been permitted to accompany the court.

"A cablegram, dated October 24, from Director General Sheng states that an imperial decree has been issued directing Prince Ching and Earl Li to fix and submit for approval the several penalties to be inflicted on those princes and ministers that ought to be punished."

He adds that Yang Yi has died of sickness and that Prince Tuan and Prince Chwang have not been allowed to accompany the royal court to Peking. The death of Kang Yi is an important event, as he was one of the ringleaders whose punishment was demanded by the powers.

Danish West Indies Offered.

Copenhagen, Oct. 24.—C. Brun, Danish minister at Washington, who has been in Copenhagen for some time, leaves here within a few days for the United States. He will be the bearer of an offer to the American government, from Denmark, to sell the Danish West Indies for $7,000,000.

Chinese Rebels Rou[illegible]

London, Oct. 29.—A special dispatch from Shanghai says that a battle was fought between government troops and rebels Oct. 23 and that the rebels were ultimately routed, many of them being slaughtered.

MY HALF SISTER

xxx By ELTON HARRIS xxx

"Oh, I know you think us the dirt beneath your feet!" he sneered, his face livid, as he twirled his little black moustache and glared at her with unwilling admiration. "We are nothing, no no; but it is those who win laugh, oh, yes! I snap my fingers at Reverton, for which we are not good enough; but they shall accept us, though they did not my amiable uncle, whom, I allow, you had no cause to love."

"I shall certainly let all Reverton know if I am made unhappy here," she answered, with a sudden flash of comprehension, under which Henri winced. "For Mr. Barlowe, I had little cause to like him; but he is dead! he came to a terrible end! Have you any chance of discovering who killed him, or why?"

So intent had they been in their conversation that they had been oblivious to the clang of the garden gate and the sound of wheels. As Mollie turned quickly to see Madame Dubois driving up, the horses lathered by their reckless speed, but well in hand, she did not notice that Henri's face had gone a sickly yellow, that the fingers holding a cigarette suddenly crushed it as in a vice. Madame looked from Mollie's flushed face, to her son's sullen, dark one, as she drew up, and her lips tightened; but the girl entered the house before her, and, once out of sight, dashed to her own room.

What was she to do? she thought, as with clenched hands she paced her room. What could she do but keep her eyes open, and bear it? She was surprised to find that she was neither frightened nor dismayed; indeed, wondering more what Reggie would think if he knew—Reggie, whose blue eyes had given a sudden flash as that "Mollee" had caught his ear. Yet it was a matter of relief when madame appeared as usual at dinner, even making a little show of affection for her, though looking pale and distraught, while Henri was effusively polite.

But nothing could prevent the evening being dreary and constrained, and as early as she could, she bade mother and son good night. At the far end of the large square hall was the handsome oak door of Mr. Barlowe's study, and she paused at the foot of the stairs to regard it with a felling akin to awe. What scene had that closed door witnessed 12 months ago that very night? What was the secret of Leonard Barlowe's tragic death? Well indeed it was for Mollie that the future is hidden from us; that she could not foresee the manner in which the truth would be revealed!

As she went slowly up stairs the drawing room door opened suddenly and madame came out and walked swiftly across to the closed door, her usually stately step faltering and uneven, her face wild and haggard; but ere she had gone many yards Henri had slipped after her, caught her by the arm, and pulled her roughly back.

"Let me go!" she cried excitedly. "Have you not tormented me enough? —you, for whom I have borne everything; you, whom I have shielded?"

"There, don't make a fuss and rouse the place!" he said hoarsely. "For heaven's sake come back and calm yourself. What is the use of getting in a frenzy because an unfortunate event has happened in the house, and the servants say it is haunted? Come back, I say!" And the drawing room door closed again on their angry voices without either having perceived Mollie's presence on the stairs above.

She went on to her room down the dimly-lighted corridors, for madame was economical in lights in some instances. There was a feeling of unrest and mystery abroad in the house tonight, more to be felt than described, which unconsciously influenced her. She wished she were not so young. How long it seemed since she had left her peaceful German life behind, and been plunged into a sea of difficulties; yet she would not have gone back. Unbidden rose the thought that there was no Reggie in Hanover.

She took her Bible and read a chapter, trying to fix her thoughts on the Easter day that would soon dawn, the day our Lord rose from the dead. The warm old dressing gown in which she was wrapped accentuated the brightness of her hair, and her lovely face showed sweet and thoughtful in the gas light, but as she closed the book it was with a sigh that she put her elbows on the toilet table and dropped her white chin into them.

All the evening her thoughts had been back with her mother—remembering her sorrows and sufferings—and yet there kept running in her mind also the words she had just read, "Love your enemies." Ah! how impossible it seemed; to how many more than poor little Mollie has it appeared too hard a precept to follow! But she struggled for it, asking help from above to forgive Leonard Barlowe, and endeavor to live in peace with her relatives, returning good for evil.

A hasty rattling at the door handle, Kate's voice screaming, roused her, and, running to open it, the child almost fell against her, her thin little face colorless, her tiny hands grasping, as if for dear life, at the folds of her dressing gown.

"Let me stay with you, dear, dear Mollie!" she sobbed and sighed. "I cannot—cannot stop alone; I should die!"

It was terrible to see the nervous excitement, the fear that shook the child from head to foot, and as Mollie caught her up she only remembered that she was her mother's baby, the little sister she had tried to love. Shutting the door, she carried her to the window, pausing to wrap a rug round her, for she was in her small night gown, just as she had jumped out of bed, and shivering violently.

"Yes, yes, you shall stay with me," she said soothingly, in her round, soft voice. "But what is the matter? Where are Jane and Harriet?"

"Jane has gone; she said she was not going to stay in this house tonight for anything we could offer her. She just got the gardener's boy to take her box after dark, and went. I don't know what Aunt Clare will say, and Harriet will not sleep in my room without her."

"What! they both slept there?"

"Yes, because of the strange noises and—and things. I woke up and called out, and when I got up and felt Harriet was not there, and her blankets were gone, my heart seemed to stop beating—I could not breathe. All I thought of was you; I should be safe if I could get to you. Something passed me in the passage; I felt it brushing against me. It was a ghost, wasn't it?" And she cowered down into Mollie's arms, a pitiable object indeed.

Kate was almost beside herself, and it was long ere Mollie could calm her agitation. Inwardly the sister's heart burned with wrath against the two maids, who in their own ignorant fear had left this highly-strung child alone at such a time, after the shock of the preceding year. Seriously alarmed, she rubbed the icy little hands and feet, talking cheerfully the while, and then rocked to and fro until the breathing grew quieter, and the flaxen head lay still on her shoulder, while she hummed the old lullaby which had sounded in her own drowsy ears when she was a little child.

"Mother sang that," Kate said, suddenly looking up with a faint smile. "When I found I was alone, I said all I could remember of my prayers—'Our Father' over and over again."

"I am glad of that," replied Mollie simply. "I feared you did not, Kate."

"I am a Freethinker in the daytime; but at night in the dark, when I am frightened, I always say all I can think of," said the child, with quaint innocence, all the self-importance knocked out of her for the moment by terror.

She listened very quietly when Mollie tried to show her that this was wrong, and then her thoughts went back to the last Easter eve, and she spoke of her father.

"It was very cold—oh, very!" she said reflectively. "He took me out in the dogcart, and I cried with the cold, so he was cross. I did not know he was going to die, you see, or I would have tried not to."

"But you loved him, Kate?"

"Pretty well," she responded truthfully, for she had not words to express what she was sharp enough to know—that her father had cared for her for what she had represented to him. "When I went to the study to say good night to him, he called out he was busy, so I went away. Next morning when I awoke the snow was thick, and I heard screams and shrieks, so I jumped out of bed and ran to the top of the stairs and looked down, and all the servants were there at the study door, looking in and wringing their hands, and crying, and Aunt Clare, with her hair streaming about, calling out that they must get a doctor and send for Henri. I went further down the stairs and asked what was the matter, and they shrieked more, and said: 'Take the child away!' But I would not go until nurse called me, and she told me my father was dead. I asked what made him die, and she said: 'Want of breath.' And then heaps of people came, and there was a bequest."

"Inquest," corrected Mollie, with a shiver, the little girl's words bringing the whole scene before her with startling vividness; then, as she felt that Kate was again shuddering in her arms, she added: "But we will not think of it any more."

"I can't help it!" she moaned, trembling. "Something in black has glided up and down the passage ever since. That door is heard to open and shut when every one is in bed. All the servants know this, and won't stay. Ask them."

"Oh, Kate, this is really nonsense!" Mollie exclaimed in horror; then, drawing back the blind she pointed to the still, quiet night without, where the soft breeze was sighing through the budding trees, the moon riding serene in the dark blue sky above. "And see, even the weather is different this year. Look at the beautiful world God has given us to live in! And if we are good He will certainly take care of us; we need fear nothing. Why, even a little sparrow cannot fall to the ground but what He sees it; and we are His children, whom the Lord Christ came to save."

Kate drank in her words with a look of old intelligence that made her seem as if she had never been a child. But as Mollie put her into bed, two slight arms were suddenly flung round the soft white throat, and she whispered with passionate fervor:

"Oh, I am glad—I am awfully glad that God has given me you for a sister, Mollie."

But long after the little one had fallen asleep, Mollie sat by her, thinking, thinking—what did it all mean?

CHAPTER VI.

Who had killed Leonard Barlowe? For days Mollie pondered over this question, and another one that would keep coming back to her—had the Dubois any private knowledged that had not been published to the world? They must have known more of Mr. Barlowe, his past life and enemies, than any outsider could possibly do. Henri had hated his uncle, she knew, yet surely he had had no hand in sending him out of the world; that could not be the meaning of madame's wild words! That he was cold-blooded and cynical to a degree about everything save himself was clear; but it was incredible that he could have committed such a crime undetected; besides, Kate said that he had been in London at the time.

She thrust the thought from her, and determined to try and think no evil—a good resolution put to a very hard test when she discovered that her freedom was gone, and that madame was always making slighting remarks upon the Anstruthers, implying that Mrs. Anstruther was a worldly mother, who had engaged her daughter to a rich man, and was now seeking an heiress for her son. About this latter, indeed, she shook her head ominously; she had heard tales of him —he was a terrible flirt, or worse.

It was in vain Mollie protested hotly that the young naval officer to whom Joyce was engaged was far from rich; that she had never heard a word against Reggie, that Mrs. Anstruther was kindness itself and had loved her mother. Madame nodded her handsome dark head mysteriously, and said her dear Mollie was very young and innocent, and all young men were not like Henri, so good and wise and trustworthy. Certainly she had plenty of opportunity of discovering these virtues in Henri, had they existed for he spent the greater part of his time hanging about her, and she grew heartily tired of him and the tales of his gay Parisian life.

Why did he not return to it? she thought wearily. Why did he stay on here, rolling his black eyes at her sentimentally, and pretending that Reverton was now more to him than Paris?

"It is because I am an heiress," she thought wrathfully, when he had accompanied her to the Anstruthers, and kept so close to her that she had been unable to have the good grumble to Joyce that would have relieved her pent-up feelings. "Oh, this hateful money! My mothers' life was ruined for it, and they would ruin mine. But I am not so gentle as she; and madame will find that I have a will of my own. I think she suspects it, for sometimes I see her eyes fixed on me with such a strange expression. God forgive me if I wrong them; but somehow I mistrust them utterly."

As a rule hard luck never associates with prudence and industry.

MORSELS of WIT & HUMOR

Took a Bite in the Dark.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer:

A young man whose work keeps him downtown until the early morning hours usually reaches home with a sharp appetite. His mother, an indulgent mother, too, puts a little lunch out where he can get it, but this frequently fails to satisfy him. His wise parent knows this and she saves the larder from a wholesale onslaught by locking things up.

Now, if there is one thing in particular that this youth dotes upon it is jelly. But jelly is an article of food that takes time and skill in its preparation, and if the lady left her jelly jars at his disposal—well, there would be none to dispose of after a few mornings. So the jelly is locked up the tightest of all.

The other morning the youth let himself into the house just as the gray streaks of dawn were cross-barring the eastern sky. There was milk and bread awaiting him, but his soul craved for jelly. He determined to hunt for some. Taking a slice of bread and a knife he stole down cellar and searched the fruit shelves. What happiness! He dimly made out the outlines of a jelly jar. Was there any jelly in it? He dipped in his knife and felt the soft and quivering mass. What a joke on his usually careful mother. She had actually forgotten to turn the key on this treasure.

He drew out a generous quantity and carefully spread it on the bread. He had to do it largely by guesswork, because the cellar was almost totally dark. When the spreading was done he smacked his lips lightly and took a generous bite.

No, it wasn't jelly. It was soft soap.

Democratic Rally in Klemme Monday evening Nov. 5th.

We are anxiously awaiting the election returns—want to yell. Hurrah anyway!

Bills are out announcing a democratic Rally to be held in Klemme, Nov. 5th. with Wm. H. Hughes as speaker. Everybody turn out and hear a democratic speach

To the people of Klemme and vicinity I wish to say that I am still here and in business with a large and complete stock of Boots and Shoes, Overshoes, and Rubber Goods of all descriptions. F. Gruetzmacher.

F. E. Blackstone requests us to tell our readers in German township that Mr. J. Hammil and M. R. Chambers of Garner will deliver republican speeches in the F. W. Lenz, center school house, on Saturday evening Nov. 3rd.

Say Mister Voter, are you going to spoil your ballot? Don't do it. Make a cross like this (x) in the circle at the head of the party that you wish to support, and leave the squares alone. Don't monkey with them as you are in danger of destroying your ticket.

We see notices posted announcing the wish that the general election for Ell township be held at the town hall of Klemme instead of the S. House The town hall is located first door south of Peitzke's blacksmith shop. is a much more convenient place for an election than the formal place of meeting.

Next Tuesday is "it," "the day," election day. Every man in the township regardless of work should go and cast his vote. It don't make any differance whether you vote for Wm. or some one else, go and vote. Your vote is wanted and you should be registered as a rightful voter.

The ladies of the order of Mystic Worker of the World gave a supper last Saturday night in honor of their husbands and new members who have joined this order. This order will initiate four new members that have undergone the examination and taken out insurance, at their next regular meeting. Deputy Geo Lein was here to assist in the evening programme. It being a private lodge supper a fine social time was enjoyed by all.

If there is not as much news this week as usual, lay it to the fact of our having used the time in setting up church cards and a town, township and county directory located on the front page. These are an invaluable aid to the town and shall be a permanent fixture to the TIMES. If any errors are in same we will be glad to have someone call attention to them and they will be corrected. Lodge secretaries, by making out lodge cards not over one inch in length will be given the benefit of our column free of of charge. Bear with us this time for it it will "not always rain."

The First Winter Term of Ellsworth College, Iowa Falls, Iowa, will open Nov. 13, 1900. Unexcelled accommodations and equipments. To meet the growing demand of this institution an additional building has just been completed nearly doubling its capacity. Special inducements will be made to those making application prior to date of opening. For further particulars address: J. D. Stout, President.

MARRIED:—At the M. E. parsonage, Thursday, October, 25th, at eight o'clock P. M. Mr. Alexander Ross of Klemme, to Miss Abbie Busick of Goodell, with Rev. E. A. Phelps officiating. After partaking of a bountiful repast at the home of the bribegroom's sister, Mrs. Wm. Smith, the happy young couple departed for the home which the groom had prepared for their occupancy The bride we know not consequently can say but little, but of the groom can be said that he if an honest, energetic prosperous young man with bright prospects for the future. The TIMES joins the community in wishing them a joyous and happy life.

Lightning seems to be metting out vengence on the farmers by burning up their straw stacks. Aug. Schaper is the last man to report a loss of this kind. He informs us that during the storm Saturday night lightning struck his big stack and burned it to the ground. Of itself the straw is not a wonder, but when one stops to think of August having hauled all the oats to the house to make a large and convenient straw stack he realizes the worth of the same. The stack was about 15 rods from the house. All he has now is wheat straw from a ten acre patch. Aside from this it killed two and injured three of his best hogs.

So Sayeth The Preacher.

Special meetings at the English M. E. Church November 7, 8, and 9th.

In connection with the great Twentieth Century Forward Movement instituted by the call of God through our Bishops for the conversion of two million souls before the close of the year 1901 and the need of thoroughly consecrated workers moving forward in a united effort for the salvation of souls and the conquering of sin. The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of Testimonials.

HOW WEAK CHILDREN ARE MADE STRONG, VIGOROUS AND WELL

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hallows, of Peckham St., Globe Village, Fall River, Mass., have cause to thank Dr. Greene's Nervura for restoring to health, and probably preserving the life of their little son. Almost from infancy Everett Hallows was troubled with indigestion and nervous troubles, and nothing seemed to help him. Finally Dr. Greene's Nervura was recommended and tried with success. A few bottles were sufficient to effect a cure, and to-day the little one is enjoying the best of health. By the use of Dr. Greene's Nervura the sickly child was transformed into a happy, hearty, robust boy.

Dr. Greene's Nervura | for the Blood and Nerves

Thousands of other children can thank Dr. Greene and his wonderful remedy for the strength and health they enjoy. Children to whom it is given have less sickness, better health, better growth, and longer and more vigorous lives. Parents should realize that it is their duty to give it to every child who is not in perfect health. There are no diseases more dreaded by parents than fits, epilepsy, and St. Vitus' dance. Yet no child would be troubled by them if Dr. Greene's Nervura were given when the first symptoms appear.

Charles L. McBay, a highly esteemed police officer, who resides at 14 Myrtle St., New Bedford, Mass., says:

"About two years ago my little daughter became run down in health and suffered from St. Vitus' dance. Soon after she was prostrated by rheumatism, which severely affected her low limbs.

"After trying various remedies without obtaining relief, she began taking Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and experienced immediate benefit. She continued its use, and after taking five bottles her rheumatism was practically cured. Her appetite returned, her pains disappeared, she was again able to walk without lameness, her general health was restored, and she was able to attend school and to play like other children."

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the prescription and discovery of the well-known Dr. Greene, of 35 West 14th Street, New York City, who is the most successful specialist in curing all forms of nervous and chronic complaints, and he can be consulted in any case, free of charge, personally or by letter.

MYSTERY SOLVED IN GRAVE

Body of Miss Johns, Who Disappeared, Is Found.

COURTED BY MARRIED MAN.

Girl Dies at a Hospital and the Railroader with Whom She Had Kept Company Allows Her to Be Buried Without Notifying Searchers.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—After a lapse of nearly three months the mystery connected with the disappearance of pretty Mary Johns has at last been solved. While detectives and relatives were scouring the city for some clew to her whereabouts, the body of the unfortunate girl was buried in Mount Greenwood under an assumed name, and all trace of her apparently lost forever. Mary Johns, who was a handsome young woman of 20 years, left her home in Van Wert, Ohio, last February, and came to this city to pay a visit to her aunt, Mrs. Mary A. Fritter, of 840 Garfield boulevard. After deciding to make her future residence in Chicago the girl secured a situation in Kries, Hubbard & Company's umbrella factory on Fifth avenue, and all went well until she chanced to meet John Allman, who is in the service of the Fort Wayne and Chicago railroad.

Courted by Married Man.

Allman began to pay devoted attention to the country girl, and it is believed that she cherished a hope of becoming his wife. The relations between the pair soon became known to Mrs. Fritter and the indignant aunt warned the girl that Allman already had a wife living, as well as another who had procured a divorce from him. Although shocked at this revelation, the girl continued to meet Allman clandestinely. On Aug. 22 the young woman left her aunt's house as usual, but gave up her situation in the umbrella works without asking for a week's salary that was due her, and without notifying her relatives of her intention. That was the last time Mrs. Fritter ever saw her niece alive.

Police Fail to Find Her.

As time passed and no word was received from the absent girl, an investigation was made by the police, but no trace of her was discovered, and the mystery was allowed to remain unsolved. A short time ago Mary's cousin, Ida Brown, met Allman by appointment and threatened him with criminal prosecution unless he revealed the truth regarding the girl's sudden disappearance. Allman, it is alleged, then confessed that Mary was dead and had been buried at Mount Greenwood Aug. 27, under the name of his wife, Mrs. John Allman. According to his story the unfortunate girl left her aunt's home in company with Allman and went with him to his home, 5743 Fifth avenue, where she was known as his sister. On Aug. 23 the girl was taken to the Englewood Union Hospital, where she died three days later. Early the next morning, the body was buried without the fact becoming known either to her friends or the police, who had been searching for her.

Truth Wrung from Allman.

Allman remained uncommunicative and denied all knowledge of the girl until Miss Brown wrung the truth from him. Yesterday the girl's father, E. W. Johns, and her brother, William Johns, arrived in the city from their Ohio home, and laid the case before Captain Colleran att he Central station. Detectives were detailed to make a thorough investigation and to trace any evidence of a crime having been committed. Meanwhile Allman denies any criminality, but says that he is now even with the girl's aunt for warning Mary against him. The body will be disinterred and after a post-mortem examination, will be taken back to Van Wert to lie beside those who knew and loved her best.

In Favor of Annexation.

New York, Oct. 27.—The cable dispatch from St. Thomas, Danish West Indies, stating that adverse feeling has been caused there by the revival of the report that Denmark intended to sell her islands to the United States caused surprise among and denials from Danes and Americans who claim to be posted on public opinion. Many say they are willing to have the island sold to the United States.

Woman Ends Her Life.

New York, Oct. 27.—Mrs. Mabel Hanson, said to be the wife of a prosperous furniture dealer in California, committed suicide by drinking carbolic acid. She and her husband had separated and this is given as the cause of her taking her life.

Phoenix, Ariz., Oct. 27.—The government is preparing to relieve the suffering of the drought-stricken Indians on the Sacaton reservation. Several carloads of rations will leave here in a few days and will be distributed among the destitute.

MINERS STRIKE IS ENDED

Offcers of the Miners Issue an Address to Workers.

Hazleton, Pa., Oct. 26.—The following statement was given out for publication tonight by President Mitchell of the union of mine workers of America:

"To the Miners and Mine Workers of the Anthracitt Region: After carefully canvassing the entire strike situation we, your officers, district and national, have concluded that your victory is so nearly complete that no good can be served by continuing the strike longer. The contest has been in progress for thirty-nine days and the companies employing you have, with few exceptions, signified their willingness to pay the scale of wages formulated by the Scranton convention of October 12 and 13. We are aware that some disappointment and dissatisfaction has been caused by the failure of operators in districts 1 and 7 to separate the reduction in the price of powder from the advance in wages, but after careful inquiry we are satisfied that each mine employe will actually receive an advance of 10 per cent on the wages formerly paid. In the Schuylkill and the Lehigh regions the largest companies have agreed that the sliding scale should be suspended; and that wages should remain stationary at 10 per cent until April 1 1901, thus removing one of the iniquities of which you have complained for many years.

While it is true that you have not secured redress for all your wrongs, while it is true that the increase in your earnings will not fully compensate you for the arduous labor you are compelled to perform, you have established a powerful organization which, if maintained and conducted on business priciples, will enable you to regulate many of your local grievances and make your employment less hazardous and more profitable than before the strike began.

The companies agree in their notices, to take up with their mine employes all grievances complained of.

We would, therefore, advise that when work is resumed committees be selected by the mine employes and that they wait upon the superintendents of the companies and present their grievances, in orderly, business-like manner, and ask that they be corrected.

Your attention is respectfully called to the fact that the laws of the state of Pennsylvania provide that miners should be paid semi-monthly upon demand, and we should therefore advise that each mine employe should serve notice upon the companies that he expects to be paid his wages twice each month, as provided by law.

The special benefits to the miners which accrue from thorough organization have been so clearly demonstrated during this strike that it should be needless for us to urge upon you the necessity of maintaining your union intact. We trust, however, that those who are now members of the union will be unceasing in their efforts to induce all other mine workers to ally themselves with the United Mine Workers of America at once, as it will be impossible for you to secure higher wages, in the future, or even to maintain the present rate of wages, unless you are prepared to offer a united resistance if any attempt is made to reduce your earnings upon the expiration of the present offer.

As there are some few companies who have not posted, notified or signified, in any manner, their willingness to pay the 10 per cent advance in wages and suspend the sliding scale, we would advise that unless the men employed by such companies receive notice before Monday that the advance will be paid they remain away from the mines and continue on strike until the companies employing them agree to the conditions accepted by the other companies, and that the employes of the companies who have offered the advance of 10 per cent and abolished the sliding scale are hereby authorized to resume work Monday morning, October 29, and to be prepared, if called upon to contribute a reasonable amount of your earnings for the miners who are continuing on strike.

BRITISH LOSSES HEAVY.

Roberts Reported on Fight With Dewets Forces Oct. 25.

London, Oct. 29.—A dispatch from Roberts referring to the fighting by General Barton's column with General Dewet's forces October 25th says:

"The British losses are heavier than at first reported. An additional officer and twelve men were killed and three officers and twenty-five men wounded. The Boer loss is twenty-four killed and nineteen wounded on the field and twenty-six Boers made prisoners. Three Boers who held up their hands in token of surrender, then fired on the British, were court-martialed, convicted and sentenced to death. I have confirmed the sentence."

The dispatch, after reference to some minor affairs in which the troops of Kitchener and Methuen were engaged, says a serious incident occurred between Springfontein and Philippolis, Orange River Colony, where fifty cavalrymen were ambushed and captured by the Boers, only seven of the party escaping.

Another dispatch from Roberts says: "Barton attacked the ubiquitous Dewet near Frederickstad. The Boers scattered in all directions."

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, October 28, 1900.

The members of the board of control have returned to the city after a visit to all the state institutions in northern Iowa. Judge Robinson and John Cownie of the board left on the tour of inspection October 11, and later were joined by Judge Kinne. The board expects in a short time to formulate the rules governing county hospitals, it having inspected the different county institutions in the past several months.

The typhoid fever epidemic at the state hospital at Independence is greater than has been generally known. There have been over two hundred cases since it recently broke out there, and it has resulted in twenty deaths. There is also a great deal of sickness at the Soldiers' home at Marshalltown. Over seventy inmates of the home are now in the hospital. No epidemic prevails there but the general health is not good.

The supreme court handed down an opinion in the Bonaparte dam case adverse to the state. The supreme court holds that when the state transferred the Bonaparte dam by grant it did not abrogate its right to exercise thereafter a police power; that no consittutional right of defendant Byron F. Meek is involved, and on every other point sustains the contentions of the state except that it is held the decision of a justice of the peace to the effect defendants had a contract right to maintain the dam without a fishway, and, being unappealed from, the judgment is final, for there is no showing that defendants have lost that right since the formal trial, and upon this single point the supreme court's decision against the state is based.

P. H. Skinner has been agreed upon by State Treasurer Herriott and Auditor Merriam as the expert to examine the various offices. At the last meeting of the executive council the treasurer and auditor were named as a committee to select some person to make the examination. Their selection is subject to the approval of the council. If Mr. Skinner makes the examination he will be empowered to select his assistant, subject to the council's approval. For some days past W. S. Richards, pardon clerk under Governor Shaw, has been engaged in an examination of the records and accounts in the office of Auditor Merriam. This examination is entirely distinct from the one ordered by the executive council. It is within the power of the governor to direct such examinations to be made at any time.

Chairman Estabrook of the Marshall county republican committee, Auditor Hargrave and Coroner Lierle were in the city consulting with Attorney General Remley and Chairman Weaver in regard to the attempt on the part of the democrats to invalidate the coming election in Marshall county unless the name of the democratic nominee for coroner is placed upon the ticket. Attorney General Remley looked the case over carefully, and after thoroughly investigating the subject, took the ground that the republicans need not be alarmed over the threats made. He gave the following opinion:

"First—Under the showing there is no vacancy in the office of coroner in Marshall county.

"Second—If there was a vacancy and the auditor should refuse to place the name of the democratic nominee upon the ticket, the remedy would be by mandamus proceedings.

"Third—If the ticket goes out without the name of the democratic nominee upon it, it is still a valid ticket, for the law does not contemplate the disfranchisement of the voters.

"Fourth—The right to challenge a voter depends solely upon the qualifications of the voter to vote, not on what may or may not be on the ballot."

The supreme court has affirmed the decision of the lower court in the Polk county court house controversy. The court holds that the county may sell the old court house site and use the proceeds thereof in the purchase of a new site and may use any available money in the county treasury in a like manner. The court holds that the county cannot issue bonds for the purchase of a new site, but may issue non-negotiable warrants for the purpose and may levy a tax running over a term of years for the redemption of these warrants. This permits the county board to buy a new site, which it is trying to do.

CASTORIA COUNTERFEITERS.

Their Factory Unearthed and the Manufacturers Arrested—A Warning to Imitators.

The Centaur Company of New York city, manufacturers of Castoria, recently learned that their well known preparation was being counterfeited in St. Louis, Mo., and that worthless imitations were being sold.

After a careful investigation by Chas. H. Fletcher, president of the company, it was learned that a preparation in imitation of Fletcher's goods was being prepared by the Palestine Drug Company of No. 107 South Second street, and sold by a few druggists. Warrants were sworn out for the imitators. Yesterday John Bick, president of the offending company, and Benjamin Chireaun, chemist for the concern, were arrested, but later were released on bond.

The cases will be tried before Judge Clark of the Court of Criminal Correction. The Centaur Company has determined to protect the public from worthless imitations of their goods.—St. Louis (Mo.) Republic, Sept. 30, 1900.

Many women long for a child to bless their home, but because of some debility or displacement of the female organs, they are barren.

Preparation for healthy maternity is accomplished by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound more successfully than by any other medicine, because it gives tone and strength to the parts, curing all displacements and inflammation.

Actual sterility in women is very rare. If any woman thinks she is sterile, let her write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., whose advice is given free to all expectant or would-be mothers.

Mrs. A. D. Jarret, Belmont, Ohio, writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I must write and tell you what your Vegetable Compound has done for me. Before taking your medicine I was unable to carry babe to maturity, having lost two—one at six months and one at seven. The doctor said next time I would die, but thanks to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I did not die, but am the proud mother of a six months old girl baby. She weighs nineteen pounds and has never seen a sick day in her life. She is the delight of our home."

Mrs. Whitney's Gratitude.

"DEAR MR. PINKHAM:—From the time I was sixteen years old till I was twenty-three I was troubled with weakness of the kidneys and terrible pains when my monthly periods came on. I made up my mind to try your Vegetable Compound, and was soon relieved. The doctor said I never would be able to go my full time and have a living child, as I was constitutionally weak. I had lost a baby at seven months and half. The next time I continued to take your Compound: and I said then, if I went my full time and my baby lived to be three months old, I should send a letter to you. My baby is now seven months old, and is as healthy and hearty as any one could wish. I cannot express my gratitute to you. I was so bad that I did not dare to go away from home to stay any length of time. Praise God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and may others who are suffering do as I did and find relief. Wishing you success in the future as in the past, and may many homes be brightened as mine has been."—MRS. L. Z. WHITNEY, 4 Flint St., Somerville, Mass."

Joe Weeks has been elected by the republican as one of the "venerable council" or trustee to succeed Fred Bock.

F. A. Arnold, H. C. Lau, and Wm. Becker acted as judges for the Ell township election and F. Bock took care of the ballot box.

For the county L. D. Womeldorf was re-elected as clerk, Ole Peterson as recorder, E. F. Brummond as audifor and J. E. Wichmen county attorney.

The republican rally on Friday night with Sen. Harriman as speaker and the democratic rally on Monday might with Wm. H. Hughes as speaker were both well attended by people and enthusiasm.

All we know about the general election in a national way in regard to the states is the reports that McKinley has the greater portion to his credit.

Taken altogether the election passed off quietly for a presidential year. Although there was some cheering for the men aspiring to the nation's highest honor, the presidential chair, it was not as boisteress as it could have been. No wrangling, jangling or fighting, no cases of disorderly conduct, no drunkeness. Every man voted to suit himself asking odds of no one.

Any one could tell by casting his peepers down the street Thursday morning that the night before was Hallow'een, much to the glory of the boys who played havoc with all the loose machinery in town—'twas all on main street the next morning. There is just one thing the boys did which is the most unique hallow'een prank we have heard of. A large sign was painted, on muslin, with Mark Hanna on the left end, pointing to "Democratic Head quarters" in glaring red letters, and then it was tacked on the store of some of our republican gentleman, as a josh, and to finish the deal and cap the the wager, artist Miller took a snap shot of same. The ingenuity of the boys is admirable in this case.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, November 5, 1900.

John Cownie of the state board of control has returned from Davenport, where he closed the purchase of a bit of land for the state. The Orphans' home, as it is at present, is without a garden, and it was felt that it was absolutely necessary for the state that land be purchased to keep those capable of working in that institution busy. For this purpose an appropriation was made by the legislature. The entire matter was placed in the hands of the board. The purchase made is known in Davenport as the Tondorff tract, and adjoins the Orphans' home.

State Superintendent Barrett will issue a circular in a few days relating to the plan of transporting children from rural school districts to township centers as was provided by the Twenty-eighth general assembly. The idea is being used in a number of places in the state, and has been adopted with especially fine success in Buffalo township, Winnebago county, where six busses are run every day and ninety-eight children from the country districts are conveyed to Buffalo Center. The school at Buffalo Center is a good one, and six teachers are now employed there. In speaking of the economy of the new system as well as of its other advantages, Mr. Barrett said that last year in one of the counties of the state there were three school districts where the combined attendance of the children did not average quite five. Each of the three teachers was paid $30.

Among the notables in attendance at State Epworth League conventi n were Bishop Isaac W. Joyce of Minneapolis, president of the Epworth League; Dr. B. L. Berry of Chicago, general secretary; Dr. B. L. Paine of Lincoln, Nebraska, and Rev. Dr. J. C. W. Coxe of Washington, Iowa, members of the General Board of Control; Mrs. Lucy Ryder Myer of Chicago, deaconess; and Dr. S. L. Hamilton of Los Angeles, Cal., traveling in the interest of the International Epworth League convention to be held at San Francisco next July. This Eleventh convention was the largest and most enthusiastic one in the history of the state organization. At the closing services on Sunday evening a grand revival service was held and fifty or more seekers were at the altar, at least half this number testifying to a glorious experience.

In the trial of the peculiar Mary Gordon case before the county insane commissioners an old slavery lay of the state of Missouri was quoted to support the contention of one of the parties. Mary Gordon is a young white girl who ran away from her home in Missouri and married a colored man. Her father and other relatives overtook her in this city, whereupon she set up the claim that she had negro blood in her veins, derived from her mother, and that her father had abused her and was pursuing her to get control of property she inherited from her grandfather. It was shown under the law of Missouri that a colored person, no matter how slight the trace of negro blood, cannot inherit from a white person. If the girl is colored she could not inherit the property in question. The father preferred charges of insanity, and the court sustained the charges. It is proposed to place her in a private asylum in Missouri.

The auditor of state has learned of a swindling operation which has been practiced on the farmers about Minburn. H. E. Boyd, a justice of the peace at Minburn, informs the insurance department that there is an association called the Threshers' National Protective association with headquarters at 531 Wabash avenue, Chicago, which alleges it is doing an insurance business. Its representatives have insured a number of threshing machines about Minburn, taking notes therefor, together with the applications for insurance and promising to send policies insuring the machines against fire and lightning. None of the policies have ever been sent. C. E. Miller, president of the concern, has sent the notes to Boyd, claiming he was an innocent purchaser of the paper and wants his money. The auditor has sent a letter to Boyd informing him he was right in surmising the scheme a fraudulent one, as the company has no legal right to transact business in Iowa. The persons who entered into the scheme are supposed to have given ordinary promissory notes for which they will probably be held responsible.

Spain Orders New Navy.

Poris, Nov. 1.—According to the Paris Matin, the rebuilding of the Spanish fleet will be entrusted to French builders. The Spanish government says the paper, has given an order for eight ironclads of 12,000 tons burden each, four armored cruisers of 8,000 tons burden each and 100 torpedo boats. The order is to be executed within ten years.

Steyn Refused to See Him.

London, Nov. 1.—A belated dispatch from Pretoria says General Botha received Paget's flag of truce courteously and admitted the defeat, but said it was impossible to treat for surrender as long as any of the burghers wished to continue the war. President Steyn refused to even see the bearer of the flag of truce.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Washington, Oct. 30.—The state department has issued the following:

"By the President of the United States—Proclamation: It has pleased Almighty God to bring our nation in safety and honor through another year. Works of religion and charity have everywhere been manifest. Our country through all its extent has been blessed with abundant harvest. Labor and great industries of the people have prospered beyond all precedent. Our commerce is spread over the world. Our power and influence in the cause of freedom and enlightenment have extended over distant seas and lands. The lives of our official representatives and many of our people in China have been marvelously preserved. We have been generally exempt from pestilence and other great calamities, and even the tragic visitation which overwhelmed the city of Galveston made evident the sentiment of sympathy and Christian charity by the virtue of which we are one united people.

"Now, therefore, I, William McKinley, president of the United States, do hereby appoint and set aside Thursday, the 29th day of November next, to be observed by all people of the United States at home and abroad, as a day of thanksgiving and praise to Him who holds the nations in the hollow of His hand. I recommend that they gather in their several places of worship and devoutly give Him thanks for the prosperity wherewith He has endowed us. For seed-time and harvest, for valor, devotion and humanity to our armies and navies, and for all His benefits to us as individuals and a nation. And that they humbly pray the continuance of His Divine favor, for concord and amity with other nations, and for righteousness and peace in all our ways.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand, etc.

"WILLIAM M'KINLEY.

"By the president:

"JOHN HAY, Secretary of State."

IN THROES OF A REVOLUTION.

Liberals Start an Uprising in State of Colombia.

New York, Nov. 1.—C. B. Hart, United States minister to Colombia, South America, who arrived here and is on the way to his home in Wheeling, W. Va., said in an interview: "Matters in Colombia are seriously mixed. The liberals started a second revolution a few days ago, and it developed great strength. Fighting has been fierce, and up to date the killed and wounded have numbered 30,000. "While the liberals met with much success, it is my belief that the government will eventually be successful. But the revolution is seriously disturbing business. General Prospero Pinzon is in command of the government forces and the revolutionists are commanded by General Rafael Uribe. The scene of the trouble is in the department of Causa."

ALIGNMENT OF THE POWERS.

How the Nations Stand on the Anglo-German Pact.

Washington, Nov. 2.—The alignment of the powers on the British-German agreement is now complete. Aside from Italy and Austria, whose adherence to the agreement is expected, owing their political relations with Germany, Japan is the only power which has given unconditional assent to the agreement. As the matter now stands, five powers are united in all the terms of the agreement, Great Britain, Germany, Italy, Austria and Japan. Three powers, the United States, France and Russia, accept to clause relating to the open door and the territorial integrity of China, but withhold action on the third clause relating to the future procedure in case any power seizes territory.

ANTHRACITE LABORERS STRIKE.

Miners of Minor Collieries Go Out Because of Disagreements.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Nov. 2.—The laborers at the Conyngh m mine of the Delaware and Hudson canal company went on a strike yesterday. The miners refused to pay the laborers 10 per cent advance in wages, claiming that the company had only advanced them 10 per cent and that they would not pay the laborers the whole increase. At this mine the company does not pay the laborers. They work for the miners and are paid by them.

Hazleton, Pa., Nov. 2.—The mine workers employed by the firm of Crawford and Dugan, numbering about fifty men, quit work at the Honeybrook stripping yesterday, and say they will remain out until they get an increase of 10 per cent which the firm declines to grant.

POPULATION OF UNITED STATES.

It Reaches the Number of 76,298,222. a Gain of 21 Per Cent

Washington, Oct. 31.—The official announcement of the population of the United States for 1900 is 76,295,220, of which 74,627,907 is contained in the forty-five states, representing approximately the population to be used for apportionment purposes. There is a total of 134,158 Indians not taxed. The total population of 1890, with which aggregate population the present census should be compared, was 63,069,756. Taking this population as a basis, there has been a gain of 13,325,464 during the past ten years, representing an increase of nearly 21 per cent.

FRESH DEMANDS ON CHINA.

Powers to Insist on Retirement of Empress.

FAR-REACHING QUESTIONS

To Be Determined Outside of the Matter of Indemnity and the Punishment of the Leaders of the Revolt—Drowns Emperor's Wife.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 5.—It is stated today in quarters well versed in Chinese affairs that outside of the questions of indemnity, punishments, etc., now under negotiation at Pekin, there are three vital and far-reaching questions to be determined—viz.:

First—The removal of the empress dowager, personally and through the influence of her advisers, from all participation in the Chinese government.

Second—The creation of an indemnity fund by the increase of China's customs revenue, either by the payment of the duties in gold instead of depreciated silver as at present, or else by doubling the present silver duties from 5 per cent to 10 per cent ad valorem.

Third—The establishment of a minister of foreign affairs, in place of the old and cumbersome system of the Tsung-li-Yamen.

The demand for the retirement of the empress dowager is said to result from the conclusion now generally accepted that the imperial government of China was responsible for the Boxer uprising.

Progress of Negotiations.

Paris, Nov. 5.—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Pekin, dated Oct. 31, says:

"The foreign ministers continued today the discussion of the peace propositions to be presented to the Chinese. The French proposals were accepted. Additional specifications will be discussed on Monday. On account of the necessity for thorough accord between the different cabinets the final note will not be presented for several weeks."

A Havas agency dispatch from Pekin, dated Nov. 1, says:

"The French troops arrived at Si-Ling on Oct. 28 and occupied the tomb of the Empress. The Germans, Italians, and English arrived afterwards and occupied the other imperial tombs."

Drowns the Emperor's Wife.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—A special dispatch to the Hamburg Correspondent says:

"In a well situated in the imperial palace precints in Pekin was found the body of Emperor Kwang Su's favorite wife, Shen Ti, whom the Empress Dowager caused to be drowned before the flight of the court from the capital. The second favorite, Shing Fi, and a hundred women belonging to the imperial harem are prisoners in the hands of the allies."

Five Boxers to Die.

Pao-Ting-Fu, Friday, Oct. 26.—The commission of inquiry into the outrages on missionaries here has sentenced to death Tien-Yang, the provincial judge; Wang-Shung-On, the military commandant; General Kiu and two other officials. German and French troops will garrison at Pao-Ting-Fu for the winter. The preparations are complete for destroying, Oct. 27, the most venerated temple in the city.

Mowatt Easy for Sullivan.

Chicago, Nov. 3.—The pugilistic rocket that "Young" Mowatt, the street car conductor, went up with through two fights with Benny Yanger struck the ground last night. Mowatt met Tommy Sullivan, the brick-topped fighter from Brooklyn, at the Star theater and was outclassed in every stage of the battle. Mowatt did not land many clean blows. Jimmy Barry, who refereed, gave the decision to Sullivan.

Choynski Wins on a Foul.

Denver, Nov. 3.—With blood streaming from cuts over each eye, Fred Russell, the California heavy-weight, broke from a clinch as the gong sounded the close of the fourth round of his fight with Joe Choynski before the Colorado Athletic association and put two stiff punches to Joe's body, knocking him clear through the ropes to the floor, where he remained nearly five minutes. The foul cost Russell the fight, which he probably would have won but for his inattention to the bell. The "go" was scheduled for ten rounds. Russell tried to make a smash and bang affair of it, and had Joe running a good deal of the time.

Services for Prince Victor.

New York, Nov. 2.—The memorial service for Prince Christian Victor in the Chapel Royal in London was attended by the entire diplomatic corps, Lord Salisbury and all the prominent officials, says a London dispatch to the Tribune. The service was brief, simple and stately.

ASK DEBS TO WITHDRAW.

Friends Urge the Social Democrat to Quit Race for Presidency.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 3.—The Globe prints an open letter to Eugene V. Debs urging his withdrawal in favor of Bryan, the signers being Prof. Frank Parsons, president of the National Public Ownership league; B. O. Flower, founder of the Arena; Eltwood Pomeroy, president of the National Direct Legislation league, and Dr. G. W. Galvin, all personal friends of Mr. Debs. The signers are all believers in the co-operative commonwealth, but are of the opinion that its advent will be hastened by Bryan's election. They declare that Bryan represents the movement against monopoly; that it is better to take the first step toward improved conditions than no step at all.

Arrest Socialist Speakers.

New York, Nov. 3.—Six speakers of the Socialist Labor party who insisted on talking to an enormous crowd at Seventh street and Avenue C were arrested by the police. A good deal of clubbing was done by the officers, who numbered over thirty. The scene about the corner for several hours was wildly exciting and the police dispersed the crowd several times. The socialists went back to their headquarters overlooking the corner after securing bail and talked again.

Labor Fight in West Virginia.

Wheeling, W. Va., Nov. 5.—In a pitched battle between the strikers at the Riverside works of the National Tube company, and the men who have taken their places, Walter Davis was fatally injured. Shots were exchanged and missiles of every description were thrown. More trouble is expected.

Almost Every Miner at Work.

Hazleton, Pa., Nov. 5.—The strike of the anthracite miners can be said to be a thing of the past. Nearly every man who went out was at work today, and in many mines enough coal was mined to warrant the starting of the breakers. The outbreak at Cranberry is settled, and at Milnersville, where it was expected there would be a long fight, an agreement was reached and the strippings are being worked. It is not likely that President Mitchell will return to Hazleton.

Disagree on Engineers' Wages.

Danville, Ill., Nov. 3.—The Illinois coal mine operators and the hoisting engineers of the state are here endeavoring to fix a scale for the ensuing year. There is said to be a serious disagreement between the operators and the engineers. Tomorrow morning the operators will submit to the engineers their terms, which it is hardly believed will be accepted.

Count Caserta in Distress.

Rome, Nov. 5.—Count Caserta, who styles himself "heir to the Neapolitan crown," is deep in financial difficulties. In order to extricate himself to some degree from this uncomfortable position and satisfy his inexorable creditors, he has sold his magnificent residence in Rome, the famous Palace Farnese, to the French government, as a residence for the French ambassador.

Open Royal Victoria College.

Montreal, Que., Nov. 5.—The Royal Victoria College for Women was formally opened here. Lord Strathcona and Mount Royal, the Canadian high commissioner to England, and their excellencies the governor-general and Lady Minto were present, and Lord Minto unveiled Queen Victoria's statue, which stands in front of the college. The college is Lord Strathcona's gift to McGill university and to the women of Canada.

Hanna Addresses 12,000.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 3.—Senator M. A. Hanna closed an evening of speech-making last night at the big tent at Bloomingdale road and North Western avenue, where he arrived at 9:30 o'clock, and talked for nearly two hours to the 12,000 persons who had been waiting to hear him since 7 o'clock.

PURE BLOOD AND STRONG NERVES

With glowing health all things are possible, small annoyances fade into nothingness and real troubles are battled with successfully. Women who are blessed with perfect health are a constant joy to themselves and all around them. The beauty which health alone can make permanent is a crown which raises a woman above other women. Such beauty is always accompanied by a sweet disposition, for snappishness is a sure sign of ill-health and leaves its mark quickly on the features.

It seems to be the fashion for women to ignore health and sacrifice it to the little every-day trials, or offer it up on the altar of devotion to daily tasks. Then again the nervous organization of women is constantly attacked by woman's natural experiences, so that it is practically impossible for her to retain the beauty which nature gave her, unless she has discriminating advice and right support.

Dr. Greene's Nervura
for the Blood and Nerves.

Trials and troubles are easily overcome by the women whose strength is the genuine strength of perfect health. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, bridges the chasm that separates the sickly woman from happiness. It fills her veins with blood that is pure and clean.

MRS. WM. E. BOSSE, of 85 Farrington St., Flushing, L. I., says:

"In regard to myself, I have suffered for years with disease, having been troubled with great nervousness, female complaints, indigestion, and great weakness and prostration. I did not have strength to do much of anything. Knowing the great value of health and strength I consulted doctors and took many medicines, but they all failed to cure me, and I grew worse rather than better. I happened to see in the papers how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, was doing in restoring to health everybody who took it, and I thought I would try a bottle. I used it and to my surprise I began to gain strength every day. I am so thankful that I tried it! It is certainly the most excellent tonic and strength giver. I recommend it very highly and wish that other people who are troubled in any way would take warning and use it."

TO PRESERVE WOMANLY BEAUTY

At all the stages of a woman's life Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is shown to be efficient to ward off the results of nervousness, or overwork, or impure blood. From early girlhood to advanced years, this world-renowned medicine builds up the forces destroyed by disease, grief, or overexertion, and the effects of this great medicine are quickly felt and permanently retained. Let women guard well their health, and consult Dr. Greene freely. Nothing they can possibly do will so surely keep them strong and well, or repair the exhaustion from acute illness, nothing will work so continually to the preservation of beauty as the great health-giving Nervura. Dr. Greene's office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, where he may be consulted either by personal call or by letter Women may write in perfect confidence, and get Dr. Greene's advice free.

STORYETTES.

It is said that Mr. Evarts was once going up in the elevator at the State Department with many applicants for ministerships and consulships. "Well," said he, to a friend, "this is the largest collection for foreign missions that has been taken up for a long time."

A Scotch divine took one of his parishioners to task for his non-attendance at kirk; the man said: "I dinna like lang sermons." The parson, with some wrath, replied: "John, ye'll dee, and go to a place where ye'll not have the privilege of hearing long or short sermons." "That may be," said John, "but it winna be for lack of parsons."

After his return to London from his first tour in the United States, Matthew Arnold visited old Mrs. Proctor, widow of the poet, "Barry Cornwall," and mother of Adelaide Proctor. Mrs. Proctor, who was then eighty years old, in giving Mr. Arnold a cup of tea, asked him: "And what did they say about you in America?" "Well," said the literary autocrat, "they said I was conceited, and they said my clothes did not fit me." "Well, now," said the old lady, "I think they were mistaken as to the clothes."

Acording to the Wasp, Mr. Flynn, a prominent contractor, while conducting a civil service examination at the City Hall, the other day, asked Tim Murphy, a candidate for a job under the board of public works: "How many feet of paving would you consider a good day's work, Murphy?" "Do you mane for yourself or for the city, Mr. Flynn?" Staggered, but not quite knocked out, Mr. Flynn replied, with a gurgle in his voice: "Well—ah—a good day's work for any one, Mr. Murphy." "Hm—well, Mr. Flynn, I would say a good day's work for yez would be eighteen hundred feet, an' for the city one hundred and eighty."

Frederick Sandys, who some one has called the greatest of English draughtsmen and Millais said was worth any five Academicians, was waited upon in his young days by a deputation from a corporation which wanted a portrait of an estimable grocer, their mayor. When the question of terms was reached, the spokesman of the party announced that they were willing to pay the magnificent sum of two hundred and fifty flollars. As the painter's face fell, the worthy town councilor hastily added that they only wanted a half length. "Oh, of course, that makes a difference," said the artist, urbanely; "which half would you prefer, gentlemen?"

Mrs. Mutsu, whose death has recently been announced, was one of the most attractive women who ever presided at the Japanese legation at Washington, D. C. Her end, it is said, was hastened by her sorrow for the death of her husband, which occurred three years ago. Mr. and Mrs. Mutsu were a most devoted couple, and when Mr. Mutsu was stationed at the national capital they were constantly seen together. Asked at an afternoon tea what was Minister Mutsu's favorite sport, his gentle little wife looked up archly and said: "Oh, madam, my husband he like to flirt best of all things in the world. He thinks this American sport most adorable. We flirt and flirt all day long. I flirt witn him, he flirt with me."

WOMEN MUST SLEEP.

Avoid Nervous Prostration.

If you are dangerously sick what is the first duty of your physician? He quiets the nervous system, he deadens the pain, and you sleep well.

Friends ask, "what is the cause?" and the answer comes in pitying tones, nervous prostration. It came upon you so quietly in the beginning, that you were not alarmed, and when sleep deserted you night after night until your eyes fairly burned in the darkness, then you tossed in nervous agony praying for sleep.

MRS. A. HARTLEY.

You ought to have known that when you ceased to be regular in your courses, and you grew irritable without cause, that there was serious trouble somewhere.

You ought to know that indigestion, exhaustion, womb displacements, fainting, dizziness, headache, and backache send the nerves wild with affright, and you cannot sleep.

Mrs. Hartley, of 221 W. Congress St., Chicago, Ill., whose portrait we publish, suffered all these agonies, and was entirely cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; her case should be a warning to others, and her cure carry conviction to the minds of every suffering woman of the unfailing efficiency of Lydia E. The hospital is a good place for a homeless man to be ill, but he would doubtless rather be well out of it.

The gold output of the Australian mines (including those in New Zealand) for the first six months of the current year aggregate in value $35,303,988, an increase of $279,334 over the figures for the same period last year.

Oberammergau has been casting up the accounts of this year's Passion Play. There were 48 performances and 200,000 visitors, who paid $300,000 for admission. The profits of the village from lodgers, the sale of trinkets, etc., were between $750,000 and $1,000,000. Munich and Bavarian railroads have also profited, the latter showing a surplus of $2,500,000.

A monumental statue of the late Cardinal Lavigerie was recently dedicated at Biskra, on the confines of the Sahara desert. The cardinal is represented standing, his eyes turned towards the desert, holding in his right hand his pastoral cross, which he seems to be planting in that desert land toward which went forth all his aspirations as bishop and colonizer.

Among the documents in the Forum have been discovered certain writings tending to cast considerable doubt on the generally accepted statement that Nero set fire to Rome and fiddled as he watched it burn. It now appears from many evidences that the fire was started by the Christians. It is shown by various documents that the fire originated close to Nero's own palace, and that the suburbs inhabited by the poor Christians escaped the conflagration.

A stranger called at the police headquarters of Salina, Kan., the other day, according to a Kansas City paper, and related a circumstantial story of how he had been robbed of a forty-dollar-bill. Every policeman in town was furnished with a description of the alleged thief, and a whole day was spent in looking for him before it dawned upon any of the sleuths that there is no such thing as a forty-dollar-bill. By that time the joker had disappeared from Salina.

One of the many narrow escapes of being shot dead in the war occurred when Colonel Stowe's train was held up by Theron, near Kroonstad, the other week. Mr. J. E. Sharp shared the saloon with Colonel Stowe. They were awakened by Theron's Mauser volley at twenty-five yards' range. Mr. Sharp sustained a wound through his foot. But for the mistake of a servant making up the bunk the wrong way about he would undoubtedly have had the bullet through his head.

The role of the mosquito in spreading malaria has just been demonstrated quite conclusively in England. Some insects, which had repeatedly stung men suffering from tertian fever, were sent from Rome to London, and there allowed to sting the son of Dr. Manson, who had never had malaria. The young man so bitten soon developed a typical attack of tertian fever, and examination of his blood showed the presence of the germ peculiar to that variety of malaria.

A muddy river betokens one of the greatest of national losses. It means that the rich soil, which Jack Frost and other natural agencies have been ages in forming, is washing away into the ocean. Tillers of the land could do much to prevent the loss by keeping the ground on hillsides covered with trees or with sod. It is the cultivated field on a slant which washes away most rapidly. It is contrary to public policy, or at least to the welfare of the future, that the topsoil of such land should be sent down to the ocean when it might be yielding grass crops. Many rivers that are now muddy were clear before the coming to this continent of civilized man.

One of the most novel exhibits at the Paris exhibition is the complete set of bed hangings from Madagascar, manufactured from the silk of the halabe. The halabe is an enormous and ferocious female spider, which, although it has a way of eating the males which come near it, and feeding on the weaker members of its own sex, has been most effectually dealt with by M. Nogue, the head of the Antanarivo Technical school. He has invented a neat arrangement for winding off the brilliant golden-colored thread, and each spider yields from 300 to 400 yards of silk, which, although finer than that of the silkworm, possesses remarkable strength

CHARGED WITH FORGERY.

Son of Dr. E. R. Hutchins of Des Moines Under Arrest.

Des Moines, Nov. 1.—Complaint was made at the police station that Geo. Hutchins, son of Dr. E. R. Hutchins, obtained money under false pretense by the use of forged checks. The alleged victims are Smith & Smith, proprietors of a saloon at West Third and Locust streets. The checks were executed and cashed in September. Both were drawn on the Des Moines National bank and signed T. M. Fee. One was made payable to Hutchins in the sum of $10.25 and the other, executed a few days later, was for $15.28. Both were endorsed by Hutchins in lead pencil, the signature appearing to be in the same handwriting as that on the face of the checks.

It is understood the victims of the forgery have attempted to effect a satisfactory adjustment out of court, but finally despaired of succeeding and came to the police as a last resort.

Frequent complaints have been made to the police that bad "paper" was being passed by Hutchins from time to time, but nothing was done by them, it being a foregone conclusion with them that Hutchins' parents would make good the amount obtained fraudulently.

FEVER SCARE IS ABATING.

Situation at State Agricultural College Now Less Serious.

Ames, Nov. 3.—The typhoid fever scare at the Iowa Agricultural college is, in a measure, abating. Since the report of Dr. Kennedy, of the state board of health, has confirmed the conclusions reached by the college authorities there seems to be now no reasonable cause for fear. About five new cases have developed in the last ten days, all of whom were taken to the hospital. Besides these, many have gone home threatened with or in the first stages of the disease. It is calculated that from 100 to 150 students have gone home or are sick, and the concensus of opinion among those remaining seems to be that, in justice to all, the school should be closed and assemble early in the new year. Many anxious parents are sending for their sons and daughters, but there seems to be a general and commendable desire to stay and face it out.

The sickness has had a most depressing effect on school work and school life. Classes are small and interest slack and the fever is the one great topic of thought and conversation. A gloom enshrouds the whole school. Despite all these discouraging features, the authorities deem it wise and expedient to continue school work. A number of the patients are very low, but no fatalities, aside from the first two deaths, have occurred.

Attempt to Rob a Bank.

Allison, Nov. 2.—An attempt was made to burglarize the Bank of Allison, but it was unsuccessful. The outer vault door was drilled in two places and gunpowder poured in. The explosion failed to strike the bolt and the burglars were frightened away without making the second attempt. A supply of tools taken from a local blacksmith shop was found in the bank. No drills were recovered among these, so it is presumed that the men carried these with them. The men evidently had plenty of time in which to make their escape, and there is no clue to their identity. It is presumed that they are professionals.

Poisoned an Indian Chief.

Toledo, Nov. 3.—Circumstances point strongly toward the poisoning of Much-E-Push-E-To, who has been at the head of a large following of the Muchwaki Indians, or the Iowa Sacs and Foxes. Much-E-Push-E-To, who has been held by his followers as the rightful chief of the tribe in Iowa, died recently, and the belief that he was poisoned is based on the fact that there has been considerable strife on the reservation for some time past, Much-E-Push-E-To leading one of the factions, and Push-E-To-Ne-Ke-Qua, the recognized chief, has led the other.

Hanged Himself in the Barn.

Colo, Nov. 2.—Ellis Wheatley, aged about 45 years, living five miles southwest of Colo, committed suicide by hanging in his own barn. He was found by his hired man, who went into the barn to unharness the horses. He was never married and his mother, who had been keeping house for him, left about four years ago to live with some other children, since which time he has been keeping house himself. Despondency is supposed to be the cause.

Wants New $100,000 Hotel.

Fort Dodge, Nov. 1.—A movement has been inaugurated here by a number of prominent business men to organize a stock company for the construction of a new $100,000 hotel. An effort will be made to have twenty leading citizens each subscribe for $5,000 of stock. Hon. S. T. Meservey and George W. Mason, prominent business men, are back of the project.

Tiny Babe in a Box Car.

Davenport, Nov. 3.—The section men working in the vicinity of the Rock Islands yards found the dead body of a wee baby in a box car in the yards near the Riverside mills. It is unidentified.

IOWA APPLES WON AT PARIS.

Reeves and Harrington Exhibit Took Medals and Diplomas.

Des Moines, Nov. 2.—Secretary Wesley Greene of the State Horticultural society is in receipt of notification that Iowa aples won the prizes, medals and diplomas at the Paris exposition. He expects official notification from Director Brackett, who is in charge of the Iowa fruit at that exposition, shortly. Elmer Reeves of Waverly and F. O. Harrington of York Center made the exhibit. They did it, however, not as individuals, but for and on behalf of the State Horticultural society. The understanding is, therefore, that the society will get the premiums. The prizes consist of a gold medal, a diploma and a bronze medal, all for the highest awards under the rules of the exposition. It is a remarkable victory for Iowa fruit.

LYNCHING THREATENED AT ALBIA

To Checkmate a Mob Sheriff Doner Took His Prisoner to Fort Madison.

Ottumwa, Oct. 31.—Ed Booker, a colored man of Albia, the county seat of Monroe county, was arrested charged with assaulting Sarah Hovel, a widow. There was strong talk of lynching, and this evening Sheriff John Doner was compelled to get his prisoner out of town. He started for Ottumwa, but later decided to take him to Fort Madison. Booker, it is alleged, forced an entrance into the Hovel home and first attacked the 11-year-old daughter of Mrs. Hovel. In defense of her daughter's honor, Mrs. Hovel, it is alleged, was compelled to submit to the ravisher. Booker, it is said, displayed a 44-caliber revolver and threatened to kill both Mrs. Hovel and her daughter.

CONFESSES CRIMES.

J. W. Lynch Tells a Strange Tale to Oskaloosa Authorities.

Oskaloosa, Nov. 5.—J. W. Lynch was arrested by the police here on a charge of having stolen a grip from the Iowa Central station. He confessed to the offense, and when sentenced to thirty days' imprisonment he wrote out a confession of several other crimes. He says he stole from the agent of the Illinois Central railway at Manchester an express package containing $300 in December, 1899, at Earlville at the same time he stole a bolt of green silk and $5 in money from the Adams Express company; at Toronto, Iowa, in 1891 a package containing $125 and a dress pattern in Arkansas. In addition to this Lynch says he held up a man at Gainsville, Mo., and took $25 from him.

Decided for Settlers.

Primghar, Nov. 1.—The secretary of the interior has recently made final decision involving thirteen quarters of the disputed O'Brien county lands in favor of the homestead claimants, who have resided on the land from fourteen to sixteen years. The lands are more familiarly known throughout the state as forfeited Sioux City & St. Paul Railroad company lands, which reverted back to the United States by a decision rendered in the United States supreme court on October 21, 1895. These lands were sold by the railroad company to different parties, who fought the settlers on the land from the local land office at Des Moines to the secretary. The lands are now quite valuable and could be sold at the present market value, the 2,080 acres just won out by the settlers for $50 an acre, making the sum of at least $100,000.

Iowa Defeats Chicago.

Chicago, Nov. 5.—The University of Iowa football team defeated the Chicago university team by a score of 17 to 0 in a stubbornly contested game of football on Marshall Field here Saturday. Over 5,000 people watched the contest, which is said to have been the bitterest this city has known this year. The first half ended with a score of 0 to 0, Chicago having the best of the play and keeping the ball in Iowa's territory most of the time.

Held for Larceny.

Cedar Rapids, Nov. 1.—A. A. Palmer, who came here from Des Moines about three weeks ago, was held to await the action of the grand jury in bonds of $500 on the charge of larceny from a building in the night time. It is charged that Palmer entered the room of a couple of young men at the Arcade hotel and stole $25 in cash and a revolver from their trunks. He is also charged with numerous other petty thefts.

Frank Rudd Drowned.

Dow City, Nov. 1.—Frank Rudd, an old and highly esteemed resident of this city, was drowned in the Boyer river opposite the mill. He had been trapping and in some manner the boat capsized. Several boys who were hunting the vicinity heard his cries for help and when but a few yards from the mill dam a pole was thrown to him, but he wanted to save the boat and in again attempting to reach it was washed over the dam

Liquor Causes Suicide.

Cedar Rapids, Nov. 5.—Eugene Rittengurg while under the influence of liquor went to the home of his father last evening and fired a bullet through his head with suicidal intent. He cannot live. He is about 40 years old and leaves six children, whose mother died a year ago.

NEWS IN GENERAL

ROBERTS SOON TO RETURN.

South African Situation Said to be Much Improved.

London, Nov. 3.—The South African situation is improving, and Lord Roberts will shortly return to England with a majority of his staff. Arrangements are being made in Cape Town to send the first batch of refugees back to Johannesburg and accommodation is being provided at Bloemfontein for a garrison of 7,000.

Nevertheless, the activity of the Boers continues. On October 26th a commando of 300 captured a garrison of thirty men at Reddersburg, but afterward released them. Trains from the south of Pretoria are attacked by the Boers almost daily. On October 24th the burghers occupied Koficontein.

On the other hand General Knox has inflicted a reverse on General De Wet's forces near Parys, capturing two guns, one of them a strong post. The daily detail of British casualties is heavy. During the month of October the British lost 167 killed in action, including fifteen officers, 367 who died of disease, twenty-two who died of accidents and ninety-seven captured or missing. This makes a total almost equal to the average for the duration of the war.

The Daily Express publishes sensational statements that the Boer revival is more serious than has hitherto been relieved and that in consequence Lord Roberts' return is likely to be still further postponed. It is said that no considerable party of troops will return before January or February, while the regimental drafts from England will continue to be sent out. The paper definitely declares that the Boers are well armed and abundantly supplied with ammunition, and that the campaign is likely to last another six months.

TWENTY-SIX NOT FOUND.

No Remains of Bodies in New York's Recent Fire.

New York, Nov. 1—A revision made tonight of those persons missing and thought to have perished in the explosion and fire at Tarrant & Co.'s drug house shows twenty-six unaccounted for. Not a single body had up to 10 o'clock last night, been found in the ruins, though what looked like parts of bodies had been dug out. What was supposed to be parts of bodies, taken from the ruins Thursday night, turned out, on examination at the morgue, to be blackened pieces of melted gum arabic. Again yesterday another mass was found, which the workmen first thought to be human flesh, but it is now thought to be melted rubber. The authorities are pushing the investigation into the amount of explosive stored in the building, with a view to prosecution.

CALLS IT ALL GAMBLING.

Dealing on Board and Through Bucket Shop the Same.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Judge Vail in open court, created a sensation by declaring that in his opinion dealing on the Chicago board of trade, and dealing in one of the institutions which the members of the board of trade had stigmatized as a "bucket-shop," were practically the same. He stated the same thing was called "gambling" in th bucket-shop and "speculation" on the board of trade, but that both were "bet ing, pure and simple," the occasion for these remarks being furnished in the closing of the case brought by the Central Stock and Grain exchange against the board of trade for an injunction to prevent the board from stopping it from receiving market quotations. Judge Vail postponed a formal decision pending the submission of briefs and authorities by the contending attorneys.

BOERS HOLD UP A TRAIN.

They Loot, Destroy Mails, Set Fire to Train and Capture 90 Men.

Capetown, Nov. 3.—It transpires that a Boer commando captured a British outpost and ninety men in the vicinity of Geneva, October 28, afterwards held up the Capetown mail train, looted carriages and passengers, destroyed the mails, set fire to the train and decamped on an approach of an armored train. Not wishing to be hampered the Boers later released the prisoners they had captured.

JAPAN COMES INTO LINE.

Gives Cordial Endorsement to Anglo-German Agreement.

Berlin, Nov. 1.—The formal reply of Japan, unreservedly acceding to the terms of the Anglo-German agreement, has been received at the German foreign office.

London, Nov. 1.—The Japanese minister here said yesterday that he had delivered a note to Lord Salisbury in which Japan unconditionally assents to the Anglo-German agreement on China.

Declares Aguinaldo is Dead.

San Diego, Cal., Nov. 5.—James C. Hussey of National City has received a letter from James Thompson, a private in Company C, Twenty-seventh infantry, written while in the hospital at Manila, P. I., and dated September 1, in which the writer says that a young Filipino occupying a bed next to him in the hospital, stated that Emilio Aguinaldo was really shot dead, as reported some time ago, but it was to be kept quiet for political reasons.

EMPRESS TO BE REMOVED.

No Longer to Have Charge of Chinese Affairs.

Washington, Nov. 3.—It is stated in quarters well versed in Chinese affairs that outside of the questions of indemnity, punishments, etc., now under negotiation at Peking, there are three vital and far-reaching questions to be determined:

First—The removal of the empress dowager personally and through the influence of her advisors from all participation in the Chinese government.

Second—The creation of an indemnity fund by an increase of China's customs revenue, either by payment on duties in gold instead of depreciated silver, as at present, or else by doubling the present silver duties from 5 to 10 per cent ad valorem.

Third—The establishment of a minister of foreign affairs in place of the old cumbersome system of the tsung-li-yamen. The demand for the retirement of the empress dowager is said to be the result from the conclusion now generally accepted that the imperial government of China is responsible for the Boxer uprising, as the empress dowager was the ruling authority of the imperial government during the uprising, and this responsibility will be brought home directly to her.

There is understood to be no purpose, however, to visit upon her any personal punishment or indignity, but merely to so form the reconstructed government as to exclude her from all participation in it. It is deemed advisable for that reason that she should remain permanently away from Peking, and that her advisors also should be kept away from the seat of government. The plan of doubling China's customs duties has arisen from the need of finding a source to pay the war indemnities, which the various powers demand.

TRUSTEE FOR HIS SISTER.

George Gould to Guard Countess Castellane's Fortune.

Paris, Nov. 1.—The civil tribunal has appointed George J. Gould trustee for the Countess de Castellane, his sister. According to the pleadings in the case, her husband, Comte Boni de Castellane squandered 23,000,000 francs in four short years, whereas his income from his wife's fortune is only 3,000,000 francs. The action in the case was the result of a suit brought by George J. Gould against his sister.

Paris, Nov. 2.—Further details regarding the appointment of George J. Gould as trustee for his sister, Countess Castellane, show the indebtedness of Count Boni and wife to be about $5,700,000. Of this sum there was expended on real estate in connection with the charity bazaar, and private home on Avenue Malakoff $740,400; mortgages, $1,312,052; loans, notes and tradesmen's bills, $858,631; art and bric-a-brac dealers, $182,000. M. Wertheimer, one of the art dealers interested, claims that goods were bought and taken back, then re-sold, to the amount of $1,000,000, and that in these transactions there now remains due him the sum of $400,000.

OVERSHADOWS ALL ELSE.

Chinese Question is the Paramount Issue in Berlin.

Berlin, Nov. 5.—The Chinese question continues to overshadow everything else here. The Tageblatt prints a special dispatch from Peking, dated October 29, saying:

"A detachment of the Second German infantry regiment, under Major von Forster, fought a victorious engagement against a vastly superior Chinese force of regulars in a mountain pass near the Chinese wall not far from Tsi-Ting-Kuan. Five guns were taken by assault, and the German flag has hoisted over the ramparts. Major von Forster was wounded or killed, and the Chinese lost fifty dead."

The opinion is generally held that the military operations are by no means over, but that the Chinese troops have, thus far, lacked organization, and it is surmised that Prince Tuan, whom the Chinese report as having fled, is quietly reorganizing the Chinese forces for a winter campaign. This opinion is held here even in the highest military circles.

TWELVE KILLED IN AN EXPLOSION

Accidental Discharge of Dynamite in a West Virginia Mine Proves Fatal.

Philippi, W. Va., Nov. 5.—Twelve men were killed in an explosion which occurred in the mines of the Southern Coal and Transportation company at Berrysburg, six miles from this place. The dead are Ollie Marks, pit boss; Albert Brown, Pack Adams, Andrew Blackwell, Lawrence Duncan and several others who names are not obtainable. The injured are Will Marks and James Jackson, both of whom will die. The explosion was so great that mules were killed at the mouth of the mines and cars were blown forty feet from the track. The explosion was probably the result of an accidental discharge of dynamite, caused, perhaps, by the concussion of a blast. The property loss is light.

Alvord Freed, Then Nabbed.

New York, Nov. 3.—City Magistrate Flammer discharged Cornelius L. Alvord, defaulting note teller of the First National bank, from custody yesterday on the grounds that he had no jurisdiction in the case. Alvord was re-arrested by a United States marshal and taken before United States Commissioner Shields. The commissioner held Alvord in $150,000 bail for examination.

MY HALF SISTER

Week after week dragged on in weary sameness. No one ever came to call, sometimes there was hardly a servant in the house. Madame grew daily more silent and morose, and while she absolutely adored the ground her little French dandy of a son stepped upon, they often had fierce quarrels in private.

Madame's only amusement was reckless driving, and the sight of the mail phaeton with its fiery chestnuts tearing about the country, and madame sitting square and grim in the driving seat, grew a familiar one round Reverton. Henri generally declined to accompany her; he had not nerve to stand it, nor had Kate; but Mollie often went, for she rather enjoyed it, and it had the great advantage of taking her out of Henri's society for a time.

"It is all very well!" exclaimed Reggie half angrily. "Let her break her own neck if it pleases her, but she has no business to break yours!"

It was a glorious spring afternoon, bright sunshine was flooding the quaint old Reverton High street, and the phaeton had no sooner drawn up with a clatter before the post office, and madame gone in, than Mr. Anstruther's tall, soldiery form appeared at the Conservative club doorway opposite, and he lost no time in coming round to Mollie's side. The groom was at the excited horses' heads, so they could talk unrestrainedly, and as Reggie's brown face was upturned to Mollie's, and his blue eyes sought hers they were certainly making the most of their chance.

"I don't mind; she drives very well," she replied. "You never saw such strong hands as she has!"

"She drives as if she were possessed!" he retorted. "I don't like—well, it is not fit for you to be whirled round the country like a tornado."

"It is better than stopping at home," Mollie answered, laughing. "You see, there is no room for Henri."

"Henri!" said Mr. Anstruther, with a slight grimace. "One rarely sees you nowadays without that detestable little tailor's block. There, Mollie, I beg your pardon; you may like him, but you are not going to throw over your old friends for your new, are you? The mater and Joyce declare that they believe you are not allowed to come to see them. Tell me, is it true?"

"I am afraid it is, Reggie," was the response, given dolefully. "Please beg them not to think me ungrateful. It is not very nice at Chalfont; but I shall do the best."

"It is a burning shame!" he burst out hotly. "What right have they to make you unhappy? I should like to wring their necks."

"Don't be bloodthirsty"— and she laughed. "And I do not intend to be unhappy, especially if you will explan to Mrs. Anstruther—"

"All right," replied Reggie promptly; then persuasively: "Mollie, don't you think that it is very selfish of you to wear those violets, when you see that I have none?"

"I had not thought of it in that light," she said demurely. "Poor little Kate gathered them for me."

"Suppose you see how they look in my coat?"

"Well, I don't wish to be selfish," she said, unfastening them, and leaning down to put them in his outstretched hand.

Reggie caught the hand, flowers and all, and, as he looked up into those beautiful soft grey eyes that had played such havoc with his heart, he said, with quickening breath:

"Look here, Mollie, I hate to think of you miserable; it is more than I—than any fellow can stand. Oh, bother! here she comes! I can see her feathers bobbing through the door. When shall I see you again?"

"Impossible to say, for madame and Henri seem to have taken a dislike to—everyone. But don't worry, I am not miserable; at least, not very; tell Joyce."

"And Henri—do you like him? Is he a pretty good sort?" he demanded hastily.

But madame had caught sight of a pair of broad shoulders, a closely-cropped sunny head, and ere Mollie could reply she had swept out, her glance falling with equal disfavor on Reggie fastening the violets in his buttonhole, and Mollie's smiling face.

"You are making a long stay in Reverton this time, Mr. Anstruther," she said blandly, as she gathered up the reins.

"Yes, there is no place like home, and I have heaps of friends here!" he answered pleasantly, raising his hat. "By the way, Madame Dubois, I hope the rumor I heard at the club this afternoon is true—that the police have some important clue respecting poor Mr. Barlowe's assailant?"

For a moment madame turned her eyes with a quick, wild glance on him, reminding Mollie somehow of a savage animal caught in a trap; but the next instant she had recovered herself with a determined effort, and answered calmly:

"This is news to me, indeed, for I have heard no such thing. How is it we have not been told—we, who have the best right to know; we, who have longed and looked for the truth to be found out all this weary year? No, I cannot believe it; I fear to hope! Look, I am quite overcome at the thought! Tell me all you know!"

She was overcome. She had worked herself up as she proceeded, yet the girl at her side felt that the reason she gave was not the true one, and again it occurred to her that madame knew more than she had ever told; yet she might be misjudging her. Perhaps she had cared for Mr. Barlowe with something of the fierce tenderness she showed for Henri!

But she had little time to think. Madame ascertained all Reggie knew, and chatted a few minutes with self-possession; but directly she had turned the horses' heads and they were leaving Reverton behind, her face grew black as a thunder-cloud, her lips were pressed together in a thin line, and her eyes, burning with a somber fire, glanced over the horses' heads unseeingly as she urged them on.

Never did Mollie forget that drive! How much faster did she mean to go? she thought, in real terror. She was a brave girl, with nerves well under control; but it was mad—mad to tear along like this. She was absolutely obliged to hold on tight as they swayed from side to side; while, as they shaved past a heavy wagon and swept round a corner, she saw that the groom at the back was standing up in his seat watching the road anxiously, his face chalky and white.

She tried to remonstrate once or twice, so did the man; but madame only answered impatiently, and, if possible, went faster, and it seemed a Providence indeed that the roads were quiet that afternoon. Many times Mollie glanced up at the set face beside her, lighted by a fierce look of exultation, as trees and hedges vanished from sight almost before seen, and the wind blew cold on their faces. Was she trying to drive away from her own thoughts, flying where no man pursued?

Mollie could scarcely believe her own good fortune when she once more alighted at the hall door of Chalfont, safe and sound. Kate came running to meet them, and as madame caught sight of her it evidently recalled something to her mind, for she paused and turned to Mollie with a frown.

"You seemed to be talking very earnestly with that young Anstruther," she said abruptly. "What was it about?"

"Nothing that would interest you, madame," she answered politely.

"I am your guardian, and insist upon knowing." Then, as Mollie's frank face was turned upon her, madame either remembered the old proverb about taking a horse to the water, but failing to make him drink; or that the L'Estrange were a family of soldiers, and that the fighting spirit was flashing resentfully from those gray eyes now, for she added hastily: "I know the world; you do not; and I forbid you to give flowers to gentlemen. Yes, Kate, my precious one, you should give your violets to auntie, not to your half-sister, who did not value them." And she swept away in quest of her son.

"They were hers, to do as she pleased with," the child called after her sulkily, as she hung round Mollie, and made grimaces after her retreating relative. "You see, Mollie, you ought to have given them to Henri, who is so good, so adorable, so sweet!"

"Hush! hush, Kate!" said the elder girl quickly. Angry as she was she would not encourage the child against her aunt, and she walked to the door and stood looking out into the sunshine with misty yes. "Love thine enemies," she thought. "Overcome evil with good." Oh, it was really too hard; she could not try.

The groom's voice speaking to the gardener, who was bedding out the tulips in the borders, here came wafted towards her.

"Tomorrow I gives notice. Yes, I lose my place, sure enough; but if I sticks it, who would look to the missus and kids when I lose my life? See them 'orses all lathered up? Several times I thought we were done. We were bound to go, and the young lady, she sat as still—well, I never see her equal for pluck—and the wheels ground away."

God had been very good to her, and brought her safely through danger, thought Mollie remorsefully, and yet she had just been grumbling! Then she wondered what Reggie would have felt had they been killed; and then she saw Kate's sharp, hazel eyes watching her intently, so she took her hand and raced round the garden until they came to the swing, splendid with new ropes.

"Why, Kate, how is this?" she cried.

"I thought it would be nice to use the swing our mother had put up," muttered she ungraciously.

And when Mollie pulled her down on the seat by her side and kissed her thin cheek, she blushed quite guiltily, as if detected in some crime!

CHAPTER VII.

Dinner was very late that day, for Henri did not return home from a visit to the police station until long after the usual hour, and then Mollie heard him tell his mother that the rumor must have originated through some tramp being taken up with suspicious articles in his possession; but otherwise the inspector had no further clue to the perpetrator of the crime.

It was a warm night, almost sultry, and Mollie opened the long French windows and went out onto the pantiles, leaving them alone, though Henri's high tones sneering at the English police, and at madame for believing all she heard, reached her for some time.

How soft and fresh the air felt; how high above her head the myriads of stars were twinkling in the vast vaults of heaven! There was a whisper of coming summer in the little breeze that just lifted the curls on her brow, speaking of the primroses that were blooming down by the stream, the violets in the shady woods. The roof covering the pantiles was supported by iron pillars, and the scene was the same as from her bedroom window, which was just above. But Mollie never tired of it, and was standing in dreamy thought, when a voice close to her startled her.

"Ah! mademoiselle. I have found you at last. I have been looking for you everywhere!" said Henri briskly, closing the glass doors. "You enjoy the lovely night—yes?"

"Anyone would, monsieur," Mollie replied, adding mischievously: "Surely it makes you think of Paris—the lights, music, dancing, and all that kind of thing—does it not?"

"You are laughing at me, mademoiselle," he said, with a very genuine sigh as the vision rose before him. "But tell me, would you not like to go there, see all these things—are you not tired of being here?"

"Oh, no. Why, when I was in Germany I was just longing to be home to watch the flowers come out, to ramble in the woods."

Henri shrugged his shoulders and glanced down at his dainty boots.

"Yet it is very unpleasant for you," he argued. "My mother is peculiar. She has never recovered from the shock of her brother's sudden death. Two years with her would appal me, were I a girl. And had I the chance of going to beautiful Paris, having a home of my own, a husband devoted to me, I should take it, would not you?"

"No!" said Mollie quickly, suppressing a gasp of dismay. "Besides, what good would they be to me if I were not devoted, too. I am going in"—and she moved to the window.

"Stay, do not be so cruel!" and he stepped in front of her. "You know I love, adore you. Only say, 'Henri, I return your ardent affection, and will be yours!' and my life will be spent in making you happy."

"But I don't—I never could!" she cried, not waiting to choose her words in her hurry. "Nor do you love me, Henri, so let us say no more about it."

"I tell you I do!" protested he sullenly. "Why do you doubt me? Consent, and I will carry you to my gay Paris and teach you to love!" And he came nearer and laid a hand on her arm.

Instinctively she shrank back. His face, sallow and cunning, was too near to be pleasant; his black eyes were fixed, with an expression of assured triumph, on hers. Clearly to be read in them was the conviction that he, Henri Dubois, was hardly likely to be refused, that no girl could resist when he pleaded. And yet there was a certain admiration there too, which she had felt and hated for the last few weeks.

Some of the best lessons we ever learn we learn from mistakes and failures. The error of the past is the wisdom and success of the future.

FENCING A PASTIME.

A Lobster That Fights Hard for His Liberty.

That fencing is a pastime among lobsters I have no doubt from some little experience I have had with them. Once I found a lobster near low water in a pool some nine feet long by six feet wide, having a rough bottom and eight or ten inches of water on it, with a cavern at each end. Although I was armed with a crab hook, or iron gaff about three feet long the extreme darting and fencing of the lobster were too much for me to grapple with. When in the deeper caverns I found it could see me through the water as plainly as I could, so that the better constructed eyes of the genus homo had no advantage over the rough, hard stalk eyes of the crustacean, and as I could not get to gaff across it every effort I made was evaded. At last, however, by mere vigorous and energetic gaffing I made the cavern so uncomfortable for the lobster that like a lightning flash it darted between my legs and back into its old haunt. Here the same game went on, and with like results, for in a moment he was again between my legs and back into his old haunt. Finally, becoming tired of gaffing and missing (for its fencing was perfect and could not have been achieved without long practice) I declined to be beaten by a mere crustacean, and proceeded to bail out the pool. It was only by this effort that I eventually conquered it. And here I must confess that throughout the battle so deft, crafty and subtle were its actions that it was like fighting a being endowed with human intelligence. I have further proof that they manifest a severe martial spirit in the sea when hunting for food. It is nothing uncommon for fishermen when drawing up their traps in the morning to find the large claw of another lobster in the pot beside the prisoner, says the Contemporary Review, and there have been instances where three large claws have been found together with the above conditions and a lobster with one arm, as a prisoner, showing that in a recent fight the victor had lost one and the vanquished both arms. But these are only trifles when compared with that the late Sir Isaac Coffin saw when on the coast of Nova Scotia, for it is given on his authority that he once witnessed a terrible battle between two armies of lobsters, and that they fought with such fury that the shore was strewn with their claws.

Fate of the Peacemaker.

A certain traveling salesman from the Bluegrass country was wending his way over the rocky roads of the southern part of the country to reach the store of a friendly merchant before night overtook him, says the Jackson (Ky.) Hustler. As he was passing a log house near the roadside he heard a terrific noise, screams and yells within, and, rushing into the humble domicile, discovered a man whipping his wife. He seized the burly mountaineer, and entreated him to desist, when the woman quickly turned to one side and grabbed a large earthen bowl of sour buttermilk and dashed the entire lot all over the knight of the grip, who took to the creek near by as fast as his legs could carry him, with the faithful watchdog swinging to his coat tail. The next time, he says, that he runs up on a man and wife in a scrap he will let them fight it out.

About the Bathroom.

The bath itself must, of course, always be kept spotlessly clean and the taps brilliantly polished, and the linoleum covering the floor always carefully swept and washed, but even more than this is needed to make a really comfortable bathroom. A cork or rubber mat should be kept in every bathroom. Woolen mats are useless; they absorb the moisture and become unhygienic. A place should be found on the wall for a mirror—a plain one with a black frame will answer the purpose admirably; the longer it is the better, and it should be placed where there is a good light. Two wire trays should also be fastened to the wall beside the bath, and low enough to be within easy reach of the person using it. These are to hold the sponge and flannel and soap when not in use during the bath. Also shelves should be made and placed upon the walls of every bathroom. These may be of plain deal, enameled any color that is liked.

In Need of Renewal.

Apropros of the trouble the Shah is causing at Ostend, a story is being told by the "Belgium Times" of the first visit of Nasr-ed-Din, the father of the present monarch, to the king of the Belgians at the Chateau de Laeken. When he saw the queen surrounded by ladies-in-waiting, the shah said to the king, "Your harem, sire?" The question took the king so much by surprise that he did not for a moment reply, and the shah, taking his silence for consent, looked critically along the line and added, mildly, but decidedly, "You will have to renew it."—London Express.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON VI, NOV. 11—LUKE XVI: 19-31.

The Rich Man and Lazarus—"Lay Up for Yourselves Treasures in Heaven"—Matt. 6: 20—The Worldly Man at His Earthly Best.

19. "A certain rich man." His name is not given, perhaps to show that in heaven's estimation it is not worth while even to mention a man's name simply because he is rich, though among men it is proclaimed by a thousand trumpets. The name Dives, often given to him, is simply the Latin for rich man, used in the Latin translation. "Was clothed in purple." "The imperfect, frequentative tense, denoting his habitual attire." "And fared sumptuously." Better "made merry in splendor." Greek, living in mirth, gorgeously, magnificently, shiningly. "Every day," and not merely on special occasions.

20. "A certain beggar named Lazarus." "The Greek name Lazarus comes from Eleazar (God helps) abbreviated by the rabbins to Leazar; hence Lazarus."—Godet. "Laid at his gate." By some kind friends or relatives. He was too sick to care for himself. "Full of sores." St. Luke here uses a medical term, "ulcerated all over."

21. "And desiring to be fed with the crumbs." "The crumbs are not the trifling fragments which would fall from one of our tables, but the soft part of the thin cakes of bread in use in the East, which the wealthy, it appears, are sometimes accustomed to wipe their fingers with and throw under the table, themselves eating only the crust."—C. C. Starbuck. "Moreover (yea, even) the dogs came and licked his sores." "A distorted wreck of a man, that the dogs mistake for a carcass thrown out to them."—Dods.

22. "It came to pass, that the beggar died." Nothing is said of his burial, because probably his body "was, without honor, thrown into a ditch," like worn-out clothes, but his soul, his real self, "was carried by the angels (blessed bearers, glorious funeral train!) into Abraham's bosom." The type of paradise, where Abraham was the host of a great feast (Matt. 22: 2; Rev. 19: 7-9), and "to lie in his bosom, as St. John in that of our Lord (John 13: 23), was to be there as the most favored guest." "The rich man also died, . . . was buried." There is a sublime irony in this mention of his burial, connected as it is with what is immediately to follow.—Trench.

23. "And in hell." The invisible land, the realm of the dead, including both Elysium and Paradise. "Being in torments." "Tormented in this flame," not literal fire, for a spirit cannot be touched by flame, but "an anguish of soul as intolerable as the touch of earthly flame is to the nerves of the mortal body."—Ellicott. "And seeth Abraham afar off." So represented, because both in condition and in character they were as far apart as possible. "And Lazarus in his bosom." Reclining in honor at the banquet of bliss.—G. W. Clark.

24. "And he cried . . . Father Abraham." "This is the only instance in Scripture of praying to saints."—Jacobus. "Have mercy on me . . . send Lazarus." Asked either in the old selfish arrogance, wanting Lazarus for a servant, or in conquered pride, willing to take a favor even from Lazarus. "Dip the tip of his finger." He dares ask but the smallest favor. "Cool my tongue." "The man who had lived so luxuriously now speaks of relief for his tongue, which has been gratified with dainties. "Tormented in this flame." "Figures are employed in the Bible, not because the reality is less than the figure, but greater. Our Lord here teaches, all the more strongly because incidentally, that after death the souls of the impenitent suffer as terribly as if fire were tormenting their bodies."—Riddle.

25. "Son." How kindly Abraham speaks, showing his merciful wishes! "Remember." "The river of death is no water of Lethe, bringing with it the forgetfulness of past evil."—Plumptre. "Thou in thy lifetime . . . good things, . . . Lazarus evil things." Of this there are two explanations: (1) It may mean that the good things, all that he regarded as good and sought for (thy good things), were worldly goods, and he gained them. He had not sought salvation and eternal life, and why should he expect to have them?

26. "And besides all this." The reason drawn from the fitness of things is followed by reason drawn from the necessity of the case.—Kendrick. "A great gulf fixed." The necessary separation growing out of difference of character, and embodied in different places adapted to the different characters.

27. "Send him to my father's house." Note the same supercilious willingness that Lazarus should serve him. Doubtless Lazarus would have been glad to help him.

28. "That he may testify unto them." Bear personal witness to what he had seen, and knew from experience of the results of the earthly life.

29. "They have Moses and the prophets." The Old Testament revelation, through whose teachings many had lived holy lives and gone to heaven, including Abraham and Lazarus. They have already been warned, but have not given heed.

30. "But if one went . . . from the dead," and spoke with the power and authority of one who knew by experience, he was sure they would then "repent."

31. "If they hear not Moses (if they reject the testimony they have) . . . neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." They would resist the new influences, and find excuses for not repenting, just as they had done under the old.

A Military Marriage.

Nothing was done at a recent marriage in Middletown, Conn., to lessen the force of that trite joke about marriage being a preparation for battle. To the strains of a military march Lieut. George Adolphus Nugent of the Fourth artillery, U. S. A., and Miss Emma Howard Bacon marched to the altar in the Church of the Holy Trinity. The approach of the wedding party was preceded by the sounding of the reveille on the cornet. The ushers presented arms to the bridesmaids and the party two-stepped down the aisles to the altar. Flags decorated the church and many soldiers were present in full-dress uniforms with helmets in hand.

H. E. Peitzke met with an accident Friday which has caused him a very sore foot of late. Upon going into his barn he struck his foot against a pitch fork, stumbled and drove the tines into the bone on the upper side of his foot. At this time he is getting better however.

Over at Meservey the people of the Evangelical denomination have builded a church, the editor has builded him a house; the liveryman has extended his barn 30 feet and the hardware man fell through the sidewalk and sprained his wrist which he now carries in a sling, and the drayman was sick in bed for a couple of days.

The Scientific American of Nov. 3rd gives an article and illustration of an invention in the way of a sulky attachment to a harrow which can be put onto any kind of a harrow and saves a farmer a great amount of walking. Draging then, like plowing now, will be a pleasure rather than a drudging labor.

Special meetings at the English M. E. Church November 7, 8, and 9th.

In connection with the great Twentieth Century Forward Movement instituted by the call of God through our Bishops for the conversion of two million souls before the close of the year 1901 and the need of thoroughly consecrated workers moving forward in a united effort for the salvation of souls and the conquering of sin. It has been arranged for special meetings continuing through three evenings, on each of the charges on the Algona district. The meetings at Klemme are as follows:

Nov. 7th Rev. Albertson, Pastor at Garner, Subject: Individual responsibility.

Nov. 8th, 7:30 p. m. Rev. Case Pastor at Swaledale. Subject: How to Win Souls.

Nov. 9th, 7:30 p. m. Rev. Fox Pastor at Lincoln Center, Subject: Who will Volunteer?

I hope everyone will arrange to attend these services.

The best record for corn picking this season is 106 bushels in a day by Ben, Buckingham of Rowen.

The new parsonage and buildings for the reverend at Meservey are receiving the finishing touches.

Mrs. Chas. Gruetzmacher, of Klemme, was a Garner visitor between trains Tuesday.-Garner Herald.

Mr. and Mrs. John Zook, of Klemme were very pleasantly entertained at the Elder home Sunday—Goodell Globe.

The Britt foot ball team has at last fell heir to the title "conqueror" putting it onto Wesley by a good heavy score last week.

Goodell people will be favored on Monday night with an intertainment given by the Sherry's Musicians, who are up-to-date in this line.

The restuarent which has been idle at Meservey for the past year has again resumed business with A. J. Arends of Parkersburg, as proprietor.

Mrs. Geo. Bartholomew and Miss Nellie Brenner of Klemme, were calling on Garner friends and transacting some important shopping business Monday.—Herald.

According to the Clear Lake Mirror Geo. McClemmet landed the biggest pickerel of the season. It weighed 13 pounds and was 38 inches long—Meservey Messenger.

Father Nagle, Catholic priest of Garner, Britt, Duncan and other churches in Hancock has been called to take charge of the Dubuque pastorate. In this Hancock county loses one of its brightest and best men.

Thomas Osman, who lives west of Goodell had the misfortune to have his barn burned Friday night a week ago. 5 horses were consumed, 200 bu. of wheat and considerable farm machinery. Some insurance was carried.

Mrs. L. Carpenter, who has been in Washington State for some time returned home to Goodell Wednesday. She was one of the injured in the Northern Pacific wreck and was lucky to escape with as slight injury as she did.

Over at Mererver the are getting to be genuine Rockfellers and Carnagies. The liveryman has bought all the barnes in two blocks so ho can monopolize that line. There were two machine firms and the Fisher Bros. have bought out Mr. Thompson and that settles the machinery for next season --its bound to go up as there is capital back of it. Beware of the trusts.

Fred Ridder, the prosperous and energetic Klemme Machine shops proprietor came up Tuesday on business, and favored this office with a cheery call. Mr. Ridder conducts one of the most complete machine shops in the county, and is an up-to-date workman in all that he undertakes to manage. His increasing business is the best proof of his excellant work.—Herald.

Down in Wright county the drinking and boozing element is trying to establish permenant saloons in some of the larger plases like Clerion, Belmond and Eagle Grove. Petitions were circulated on election day and several names have been secured yeaing the idea. The Iowa Valley Press says: "Of two evils let us choose the smaller," thereby favoring the saloon in preference to a "blind pig."

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggest, of Beleville, O.' writes. "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickley, run down man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by J. L. Harr druggist.

Suicide Of Fenton Young Man.

Fenton has never before since it's foundation experienced such a shock as that which startled the town Tuesday morning when the news spread abroad that Henry Hirsch had suicided

Early Tuesday morning the dead body was found by the steps back of the Hirsch Bros. & Co. hardware store a bullet hole in the right temple, and a revolver lying near telling the tale of self destruction. Henry slept Monday night with his cousin, Will Stoeber. When Will awoke in the morning, he found himself alone. On the table was a note in Henry's hand writing saying: "They are calling me and I must go. Be sure to meet me."

This note at once alarmed Will and a search was immediatly made. On going to the back of the store the horrible spactacle described above almost drove Stoeber wild. Henry was undoubtedly temperarily unbalanced mentally when he commited to rash deed. On Monday while working in the cellar Henry's back commenced to bother him with rheumatic pains, and he was still complaining of this trouble when he retired Monday night. It is thought that this effect his spinal column and mind, thus rendering him unaccountable.

Coronor Peters was called from Burt to consider the matter but no different conclusion was entertained.

By this sad event Fenton loses a model young man. Henry Hirsch was as clean and strong a man, physically, morally and mentally, as one often sees. He looked in the eye of those with whom he talked, and one knew instinctively that he was honest and true. No sadder occurances take plac in this world of ours the untimely de mise of such a man.

The two Hirsch boys came here bout a year and a half ago. Associated in business with them was their cousin Will Stoeber. They have had a fine trade, and it is very greatly to be regretted that such an occurrence has taken place to mar their success.

A short funeral service was held at the German M. E. church yesterday morning after which the body was shipped to Charles City, Henry's home for interment.

The above sad news we print by request, and as Mr. Hirsch was well acqualnted here undoubtedly it will be of interest to many of our readers.

Astonuding Discovery.

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troublud with bad cough always ensures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too," writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never it's equal for Coughs and colds." It's an unrivaled life-saver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at J. L. Harr.
Trial bottles free.

"A Space Filler."

"You can tell the people, if you want to fill up your paper, that I'm going to start a shop to manufacture wagons and carriages," said a fellow to a newspaper publisher. "Would you like a standing advertisement?" "Oh no, I only want an item," was the responce. "Would you like to subscribe for the paper?" "Well, no. I am taking all I can read now. I may take yours when one of them runs out.

The next day the editor wanted two spokes put in a buggy wheel and the dash board fixed. He went to the shopkeeper and said, "You can fix this buggy if you want a job to keep you busy." The shopkeeper looked it over and said: "The spokes will be 50 cents each and the dash board one dollar making two dollars for the necessary repairs." "But" said the scribe, "I don't intend to pay anything for it, I thought you might want to fill up your time, just an item you know "—Ex.

Sweden is suffering from the effects of a boom in manufacturing which has drawn thousands of the country people to the larger towns and caused house rents to advance 20 to 30 per cent. Many of the manufacturers have invested beyond their capital and are in distress. Money is very scarce and a crisis is threatened.

New Zealand seems to be prosperous. The revenue for the year shows a record surplus equal to more than $3,000,000 over expenditure. The public debt of the colony stands at £47,000,000 ($228,715,000) and the financial statement proposes that parliament should authorize another £1,000,000 ($4,866,000) loan to be expended chiefly in the extension of railways. The loan will no doubt be authorized.

Two of the old cannon which the English took from the French in 1745 and threw into the harbor of Louisbourg have been brought to Toronto They are among a number recently fished out of Louisbourg harbor and have been purchased by the government. The cannon have been lying at the bottom of the sea for 150 years Each cannon is about nine feet long and weighs over 3,000 pounds.

A firm in Lyons, France, takes advantage of the shortening of cotton fibers under nonmercerized treatment by caustic potash to produce in silk webs certain peculiar and very rich embossed effects. The silken webs have cotton threads at fixed distances which, when the chemical solution is applied, shrink, while the silk, keeping its original length, is gathered in tiny folds. In this way the most diversified patterns are produced.

When the Roosevelt train pulled out of Greeley, Col., a woman climbed on the back platform in order to give a home-made cake to the governor. The train gained such momentum that when the time came for her to get off she was obbliged to make a flying trapeze leap for terra firma. She rolled over a few times in the sand, got up and smiled at Roosevelt as he stood worried for her safety on the back platform. Then she waved her handkerchief in evident delight, and became the envy of a hundred women who had watched her acrobatic effort.

Bankruptcy proceedings are often prolific in enmities. They are not, as a rule, particularly conducive to friendship between creditor and debtor, even if the relations between the persons interested have been amicable. Some bankruptcies are fraudulent, no doubt, yet in many cases genuine misfortune is the cause, and the insolvency involves no dishonor. The Philadelphia Record describes a scene at the filing of a petition in bankruptcy. One of the creditors was the debtor when the papers were filed. Both were Quakers "There goes thy money, brother," said the debtor. "Yes," responded the creditor, "but I know that thee would pay me if thee could." Then the two men shook hands. It is a pleasant picture to hang beside many sketches which repel.

TRACING THE CRIME TO HOOT.

Damaging Evidence Against Waterloo Man Charged With Attempted Murder

Waterloo, Nov. 11.—The prosecution in the case of Jerome W. Hoot, charged with attempting to murder his wife through the agency of an infernal machine alleged to contain five pounds of dynamite, introduced much damaging evidence against the prisoner, and forged several links in the chain tending to fasten the crime on him. Among the principal witnesses was Adolph Krause, the Omaha cabinet-maker, who swore that he made for Hoot a box similar to the ne exploded, and that he had made for the prosecution a fac-simile box, which was exhibited to the jury and intro-

BURNED TO A CRISP.

Horrible Death of a Woman Near Fort Dodge.

Fort Dodge, Nov. 10.—Mrs. Mary Larson, a domestic employed by Charles Crouse, living ten miles southeast of this city, was burned so badly that she will die. She and Mrs. Crouse were both injured in an explosion of turpentine. The women were alone and the screams attracted passers-by a quarter of a mile away. When they reached the place the girl was burned to a crisp in many places and the air was filled with the sickening odor or burning flesh. The face of the girl was a blackened surface and the hair was wiped off, leaving the scalp a shining sore. The doctors say she inhaled enough of the deadly flame to produce death. Mrs. Crouse was seriously burned, but may recover.

BONDS FOR A COURT HOUSE.

Dallas County Empowered to Erect a Handsome Building.

Adel, Nov. 9.—By the election Dallas county is empowered to issue bonds for an $85,000 court house. The fight has been a long one, and several previous efforts to secure a tax have been defeated, but the people have finally seen the necessity of a new building, which will be somewhat commensurate with the wealth and thrift of Dallas county. The majority in favor of the $85,000 tax was larger by 500 to 600 than the most sanguine workers had anticipated, the majority reaching 1,289. The town of Adel and the whole county will be materially benefited by this decision, which is the culmination of an effort of over a quarter of a century.

RUSSIA IS SEEKING NO LOAN.

Finance Secretary of the Embassy at Washington Issues Denial.

Washington, Nov. 11.—M. Routkowsky, finance secretary of the Russian embassy, has denied the report that the czar's government is to order four new battleships in America. He also emphasized recent denials of the reports that Russia is seeking to borrow money in this country or elsewhere, saying: "The imperial Russian government is neither contemplating nor disposed to negotiate loans of any kind, the ordinary revenues and the free cash reserve of the treasury being more than sufficient to meet all expenses, not only ordinary, but also the extraordinary, necessitated by the events in the far east."

Tried to Kill the Family.

Fort Dodge, Nov. 9.—Dan Sullivan, Jr., living four miles and a half west of Clare, was adjudged insane before the insanity commission. Sullivan is 26 years of age, and for the past four or five years has been acting very strangely and has been watched very closely, and recently he broke out in violence and tried to kill all the members of his father's family. Dan Sullivan, Sr., his father, was the principal witness, and he said that he wanted his son sent to the asylum for the insane.

WILL HAVE A CONVENTION.

The State Apparently Voted for Revision of the Constitution.

Des Moines, Nov. 9.—Without any agitation on the subject or any especial attention being given to it the proposition to hold a convention to revise the constitution of the state was undoubtedly adopted at the election Tuesday. The proposition was submitted in accordance with a provision of the constitution requiring such a proposition to be submitted in 1870 and every ten years thereafter. Heretofore it has been voted down. The same outcome was expected this year. Neither state officers, legislators or political managers took any public interest in the proposition and defeat for it was anticipated. The explanation of success usually given is that a large proportion of the voters who voted for the proposition did so supposing it was connected with the Titus amendment providing for biennial elections which was submitted on the same ballot and which was adopted. Many, however, doubtless voted for a constitutional convention believing that changes in the organic laws of the state are advisable.

The Titus amendment providing for biennial elections was adopted. It will become a part of the constitution upon the issuance of a proclamation to that effect by the governor, after the result of the vote has been declared by the state board of canvassers.

HOOT ON TRIAL.

Shipped an Infernal Machine to His Wife at Marshalltown.

Waterloo, Nov. 8.—Jerome W. Hoot was arraigned yesterday in circuit court, charged with having attempted to murder his wife on October 28, 1899, by sending to her through the express an infernal machine loaded with five pounds of dynamite. He entered a plea of not guilty. He was captured last January in Algiers, La., and brought to this city. He was going under the assumed name of Howard at the time, and appeared to be very religious, says Mrs. Myers, with whom he was boarding when captured. His relative is supposed to have been to procure the insurance which Mrs. Hoot carried and the property which she owns here. They have not lived happily together, and have separated for a time or two. She says he has made an attempt on her life before by giving her chloroform. She has filed a suit for divorce. The criminal case will be taken up first, however.

ACCIDENT ON THE ROCK ISLAND.

Engineer Killed While Leaning From His Cab.

Council Bluffs, Nov. 8.—L. W. Parris, a Rock Island engineer, was accidentally killed while at his post of duty. Parris was handling the throttle of a switch engine and was pulling a string of cars from Council Bluffs to Omaha. About midway between the transfer and the end of the bridge on the Council Bluffs side Parris leaned out from his cab window with head turned away from the direction being pursued by his engine. Just at this instant a string of passenger cars backing toward Council Bluffs on an adjoining track passed, and the rear end of a coach struck Parris in the head. He was knocked insensible and blood flowed in streams from the wound in his head. His fireman ran the train into Omaha and Parris was carried into the yardmaster's office. Medical attendance was summoned, but before the arrival of a doctor Parris died.

NEGROES ARE DISMISSED.

State Fails to Convict Wilkenson and Davis.

Ottumwa, Nov. 10.—The case of the state vs. Walter Davis, charged with having sworn falsely as to the age of Mary Gordon, the white girl who married John Scott Wilkenson, colored, and Wilkenson, charged with subornation of perjury, were dismissed by Police Judge Hall on motion of attorneys for the defense. The prosecution failed to identify Walter Davis as the man who signed the application for Wilkenson's license to wed Mary Gordon. The clerk who administered the oath could not swear positively Davis was the man who signed the application. The case against Wilkenson being similar to that against Davis the court sustained a motion to discharge the latter. This ends the matter in police court as far as the charges of perjury and inducing perjury is concerned.

Alleged Forger Captured.

Ottumwa, Nov. 12.—After an exciting chase of nearly a mile Chief of Police Williams and Officers Black and Schwart captured a man who gave his name as Emil O. Jennett, whose home is near Bonaparte, and who is charged with having passed two forged checks. Jennett went into the business houses and after making small purchases tendered a check in payment and which was accepted, while the difference was given him in money. Shortly afterwards the checks were found to be worthless, and the case was put into the hands of the police, with the above result.

Burned in a Jail.

Lansing, Nov. 12.—The 12-year-old son of Chris Rudd was run down by a freight train and his left leg was severed below the knee. The father, who is eccentric, became irresponsible from grief and assaulted an officer, who placed him in jail. Twenty minutes later the jail and city hall building was discovered on fire. Rudd was burned to death. The building was destroyed.

NEWS IN GENERAL

NOW FOR FILIPINOS.

Suppression of Hong Kong Junta One of First Moves.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Great Britain will be requested by the government to suppress the Filipino junta at Hong Kong. The administration has had this in contemplation for some time, and now that no political obstacle presents itself the action is to be taken without delay. The Hong Kong junta has furnished the Filipinos with arms and ammunition for weeks. Secretary Hay has already been advised of the administration's wishes in the matter. He will direct Ambassador Choate to represent to the British government that the Filipinos are maintaining a junta at Hong Kong for the purpose of aiding Filipinos in their rebellion against the authority of the United States in the Philippines and that they are practically making Hong Kong a base of supplies for the insurrectionists. Objection will be based on the ground of a violation of the laws of neutrality. Great Britain is expected to promptly comconnection it may be said that Lopez, the representative of Agoncillo, who recently came to the United States from Europe, will be closely watched, and if excuse be found by reason of his conduct he will not be permitted to remain within the borders of the United States. The suppression of the junta at Hong Kong is in accord with the policy now to be pursued with respect to the insurrection in the Philippines. Accepting the results of the election as an unqualified endorsement of the president's Philippine policy, and believing that the American people have expressed approval of the attempted subjugation of the natives, military operations will now be carried on in the Philippines with greater vigor.

MINISTERS ARE FAR APART.

Chinese Negotiations Will Probably be Delayed.

Peking, Nov. 12.—Although the ministers affirm that their recent meeting was perfectly harmonious, they practically agree upon all the questions considered beyond the most elementary subjects. The question of indemnity, for instance, was not even discussed. It is of such magnitude that they seemingly are desirous of putting off its consideration as long as possible and the negotiations are likely to be protracted before anything will be ready to present to the Chinese plenipotentiaries. The present desire of the ministers is, first to contract a preliminary treaty acknowledging a few principles, such as indemnity and the security for the future of the lives and property of foreigners, leaving the other questions to be negotiated separately by each power. There is every probability that the negotiations will last for years.

Peking, Nov. 12.—Li Hung Chang has received a note from Emperor Kwang Su, declining to accede to the demand for the punishment of Tung Fu Hsiang and consenting only to the banishment of Yu Hsien. The note has not yet been formally comunicated to the ministers.

THERE WILL BE NO CHANGE.

America's Chinese Policy Will Be Continued.

Washington, Nov. 10.—Two of the three hours that the cabinet meeting yesterday lasted were occupied in a discussion of foreign affairs, necessitated in part by the fact that the president intends to exhaustively treat on this subject in his forthcoming message to congress. Reference was made to the expressions in portions of the European press that the United States' policy regarding China would undergo a marked change immediately after the election, and it is authoritatively announced that after a most exhaustive review of every step of the Chinese difficulty, from its inception to the present moment, delivered by Secretary Hay, the cabinet ratified every detail and moreover unanimously expressed its judgment that the policy so far pursued should be continued without change to its logical conclusion. Accordingly, the present legation guard at Peking will be maintained, and such troops as are not needed will be withdrawn, according to the original plan, and shipped to Manila.

AFTER FILIPINO JUNTA.

England Asked to Suppress the One at Hong Kong.

London, Nov. 12.—Another international matter likely to come up between the United States and Great Britain is the suggestion to prevent the Filipino junta at Hong Kong. Inquiries reveal that no instructions have been received at the United States embassy to this end, though should the United States ambassador, Joseph Choate, be instructed to apply for suppression of the junta, it is likely his request would be granted. An official of the foreign office said to a reporter of the Associated Press: "The extent of the steps we could take in this matter entirely depends on the strength of the case Washington made out against the junta. If it is proven that the junta is materially assisting the cause of the Filipinos, we certainly shall only be acting in the spirit of ordinary international friendship in suppressing the organization. Moreover, the British empire has no desire to harbor such bodies as the juntas."

WILL REDUCE WAR TAXES.

One of the First Duties to be Taken up by Congress.

Washington, Nov. 11.—A conservative reduction of the war taxes, reapportionment on the basis of the new census, an attempt to pass a Nicaraguan Canal bill, an army establishment bill and perhaps consideration of the shipping subsidy bill, which was up at the last session, will be the brunt of the work before congress at the short session which opens next month. With the advent of Sereno E. Payne of New York, chairman of the ways and means committee, in Washington, followed by a protracted conference with the president, gossip is now rife over the program set down by republican leaders in the house and senate. After his conference with the president Mr. Payne said he would issue a call for a conference of the republican members of the ways and means committee in Washington, to be held on the 20th of this month. Mr. Payne said that these representatives would then discuss and in part outline the business which they regard as the most important, and which they believe the interests of the country demand to be taken care of at once. He said that there is almost a unanimous opinion among republican members in congress that the war taxes should be cut here and there. He said he did not believe any member of the important committees favored a sweeping reduction under existing circumstances. The first cut will be a cautious one, and will not exceed $15,000,000 or $20,000,000. It will be made on articles put in the law under the stress of war times. In the tax on inheritances, for instance, no exception was made on bequests for charitable and benevolent purposes. The tax will be taken off such bequests. There will be a reduction on deeds, mortgages, medicines, etc. No cut will be made in the taxes on large commercial transactions, and there is a growing feeling in favor of permanently continuing a large part of this tax. It falls upon the wealthy and in a measure is an income tax.

M'KINLEY GETS NEBRASKA.

The Entire Fusionist State Ticket Probably Elected.

Omaha, Nov 9.—Complete returns from two-thirds of the counties in Nebraska and scattering returns from the balance show McKinley has carried Nebraska by a plurality of at least 2,000. An equal number of returns on the state ticket indicate that Nebraska has re-elected Governor Poynter and the entire state ticket by pluralities ranging from 500 to 1,800 over the republicans, the governor being high man.

If the balance of the state shows the same percentage of gain and loss Poynter's election is certain, and the counties to be heard from being mostly in the western part of the state, it is fair to presume that this is the case.

The legislature will likely be decided by Douglas county in which it will take the official count to determine the vote.

The World-Herald (dem.) claims the lieutenant governor will cast the deciding vote in the upper house, and that the lower house is evenly divided with two places in doubt.

BRYAN NOT A CANDIDATE.

He Will Not Run For the Senatorship in Nebraska.

New York, Nov. 9.—The Evening Journal prints the following telegram:

"Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 8.—To the Editor: You may say officially that under no circumstances would I accept the office of United States senator even if tendered me. I made the fight for the presidency and lost. I'm not going to take other men's positions from them.

"(Signed) WILLIAM J. BRYAN."

Bryan forwarded the following telegram at noon today to President McKinley:

"At the close of another presidential campaign it is my lot to congratulate you upon a second victory.

"(Signed WILLIAM J. BRYAN."

Shah's Assailant Sentenced.

Paris, Nov 12.—Francois Salson, the anarchist who attempted to shoot the shah of Persia August 2, while the latter was visiting the exposition, was convicted and condemned to penal servitude for life. He listened to his sentence in silence. Throughout the proceedings he showed no bravado, but on the contrary appeared timid, though he maintained an impassive demeanor.

Complain of Germany's Act.

Berlin, Nov. 11.—The United States embassy is crowded with applications for redress against the German government made by natives of Alsace-Lorraine who are now American citizens and who after the Paris exposition visited their old homes, only to be curtly expelled by the authorities Under the provisions of the treaty of 1868 Germany refuses to recognize them as entitled to protection.

Manila Hero Dead.

Sunk by a Typhoon.

Hong Kong, Nov. 12.—A typhoon struck the town Friday night and raged until morning. A British gunboat was sunk but the crew is safe. Great damage and loss of life occurred among the native crafts

MY HALF SISTER

xxx By ELTON HARRIS xxx

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued.)

"I thank you, monsieur, for your offer," Mollie said gently at length, "but I must decline it. I am very sorry if you feel hurt, but when you leave here I hope you will soon forget it."

"What, you refuse!" he exclaimed incredulously. "You will not accept my warning? You will be my enemy?"

"I hope not, surely. But if you are my enemy I shall not be yours," she answered steadily, backing away, yet keeping an eye upon the glass doors.

For a moment the young man stood gazing at her with more feeling in his face than she could have believed possible.

Mollie little knew how pretty she looked, as she stood there in her white gown, with the soft dark night as a background, and the lights from the drawing room falling on her curly, ruffled head, nor the simple dignity of the grey eyes that regarded him so fearlessly. All at once his expression changed, and grew black and fierce, distorted with evil thought.

"So you decline," he hissed in her ear. "You think you will marry that long-legged, curly-headed soldier! But disabuse your mind of that idea. You will marry me, Henri Dubois. I swear it! Whether you love me or not, I will be your husband. Oh, you will soon be glad enough to escape from madame ma mere, and you can do it by me—only by me. Ah! how quiet you are! Do you hear?"

"Yes, and so will every one else," Mollie replied, standing very erect, and eyeing with haughty disdain his excited face. "I have listened to you patiently, but I decline to be threatened or coerced. It may answer with some people—it never did with a L'Estrange. Let me pass."

For a moment Henri paused irresolute, glaring at her; then he gave way a step, and she was through the drawing room and half way upstairs before he could realize that he had been baffled and refused by this girl of 19.

He had thought to reduce her to submission, and at the first threat she, usually so gentle, had turned upon him fearlessly; and he, a coward by nature, failed to recognize, what his mother dimly felt, that it was impossible to cower a spirit that rose higher whenever danger threatened.

As for Mollie, she was angry and indignant; yet, once in her room, she could not help laughing.

"So I am to marry Henri, who will devote his life to making me happy!" she murmured, as she brushed her hair. "It will not be a money-making profession for him. I have an idea that once he had my wretched fortune he would turn his devotion to his own amusement."

But from that night the life at Chalfont became almost unbearable.

Madame openly espoused her son's cause, saying it was strange Mollie could refuse one so handsome and devoted; for whom other girls were sighing in vain. Slowly and steadily she tried to force her into the hated engagement, implying that it would be a great relief to her mind to have her married to so estimable a young man, the only one she could countenance for her; and well Mollie knew what this latter remark meant—neither Mr. Anstruther nor any one else need expect her consent. As for Henri, he was worse than ever, following her everywhere, sullen or sentimental by turns, repeating his proposals whenever he had an opportunity; and the only friend she had in the house was her little half-sister, Kate.

For the strange child, ever since the Easter eve when she had flown to Mollie for protection, had attached herself to her with a quiet persistence that was both amusing and touching. Every night she found her rolled up in one corner of her bed asleep, or pretending to be, and the fear of losing this privilege made her try to check this irritability that was part of her temperament, and be more amenable to the sorely-tried governess.

This much Mollie exacted, though she would never have had the heart to enforce it, for the little one's nerves were in a terribly strained state, and Mollie's room seemed her haven of refuge. There she felt safe—there, dark or light, nothing could touch her; there she never had horrible dreams. Bad things could not come near Mollie, who was so sweet and

Day by day she followed her about, at first with shy defiance, at last with unconcealed affection and a funny motherly solicitude, and ere the roses began to bloom there was no crime so great in her eyes as to hurt Mollie.

"What is the matter?" asked Mollie one morning, when she found her prancing about the lawn in a fury, scolding like a young virago the gardener, who was marking out a tennis court.

"Misses says she won't have no court here," said the man helplessly, touching his cap, "and the gentleman ordered me to mark one."

"It is my lawn; I won't allow it! He has no right to meddle, and I shall tell Aunt Clare so;" she stormed.

"But I would teach you to play," Mollie said quietly.

It was no idle threat on Kate's part, she knew. Her father's will strictly enjoined that her wishes were to be indulged, and madame happened to be in a frightful temper that day.

"Would you like it?" demanded Kate, stopping abruptly.

"I think it would be nice."

"You can go on, John," she said imperiously to the man. "Anything Miss L'Estrange desires is to be done."

It was the same in everything. Her little face would grow haggard with anxiety when Mollie drove with madame, and she had no peace until she met her on the steps; while one morning, when Mollie awoke, she heard her murmuring away to herself, and a furtive peep revealed the little maid sitting up in her frilled nightgown, nursing her knees, her flaxen curls falling thickly round her shoulders.

"She is so pretty; look at her long, curling lashes!" she was whispering in a tone of satisfaction. "But I should love her anyhow, for she is my sister; she is my own Mollie, my very own Mollie!"

"My own Mollie!" Just what her mother had always called her. Mollie knew better than to move or disturb the child, but from that moment she was never "my half-sister Kate" again, but the little sister her mother had left to her, to be guarded and shielded by every means in her power, to be loved and taught all that Mollie, humble in her strength, could teach her, that together they might struggle along that narrow path which leads to eternal life.

CHAPTER VIII.

It was a hot August evening, and after Mollie had heard Kate's hymns and prayers—for which purpose she always went upstairs after dinner—she took a book and sat at the wide open window in preference to returning to the drawing room. She often did this now, for lately things had been worse than ever, Henri more persistent. At first Kate tossed about, restless with the heat, but at length her regular breathing showed that she slept; and Mollie's book dropped unheeded, as she sat watching the harvest lightning flashing across the darkening sky.

She was thinking of Reggie, who had been obliged to rejoin his regiment in Ireland months ago, without saying good-by to her, though he had brought Joyce up to Chalfont to call for that purpose. Madame had never mentioned this. She only heard it from Joyce later, when it seemed too late to be angry, though she was very sorry.

She had missed him dreadfully. Reverton was not the same place somehow when there was no chance during their walks and drives of seeing his tall, upright figure swinging along, but he used to send all sorts of messages through Joyce. He would come back, and, meantime, she devoted herself to Kate, who daily grew happier and more childlike. Mrs. Anstruther and Joyce did their best for her; but madame cut her off from every one, and lately they had been away, which was a great matter of regret, for it was something to feel their friendly presence near, though she was free to wander in the woods and fields with Kate in their absence.

The scent of a cigar, chairs being dragged along the pantiles below, and voices, made her lean further out of the window. Madame and Henri were evidently sitting there! How clearly their voices were borne upwards in the still air—little they guessed how plainly! Mollie would have moved away, feeling that she ought not to listen had she not caught a few words; then she leaned forward with all her might.

"Kate's money cannot be touched. I have got all I can—every farthing. I literally do not know where to turn for a penny." And madame's voice sounded harsh and weary. "You must marry the girl; her fortune will last you for a time. I can do nothing more yet."

"Bah! Marry the girl!" He mimicked her angrily. "It is easy to say, but she will not have me. Truly, me mere, I have a respect for her more than I have felt for any woman before. When I look into those beautiful eyes of hers, so young, so frank, I want her as I have wanted no one else. Were she my wife I could trust her absolutely; I would even try to be a good husband."

"You love her!" madame said jealously.

"There, now, you will upbraid me for that!" he sneered. "But she will never have me, she adores that Anstruther; they love in English fashion. You may give up all hopes of bending la belle Mol-lee to our will unless you can get her away from Reverton. Come to Paris."

"I cannot. You know by your uncle's will I am obliged to live at Chalfont with Kate. Oh, if I could only get away from the place—get away!" And her voice rose with strange trembling intensity that was almost a wail.

"There, do not begin that!" he muttered, with callous impatience. "To continue from where we started, I must have money! You have large sums for both girls."

"You have had most of it," she retorted. "As also that large sum through your uncle's check."

"Hush! we need not speak of that. You have been ever the best of mothers, as also the handsomest."

"Ah, Henri, my son, you are my all!" she said, in a softened voice. "All I want is your love, and now you would care more for this girl. Now, listen, you must marry her, for in that way I can assure your fortune. True, her fortune is not so large as Kate's, but did anything happen to the child she would have all. Kate is very delicate. Any one can see that. And it would surprise no one if, after your marriage, she did not live long."

There was a moment's silence. The listener above started and clenched her hands. A match was struck. Henri was evidently lighting a fresh cigar. Then his high voice said lightly:

"Ah, ma belle mere, you are clever! That is certainly to be considered. I had thought of it also!"

They had moved into the drawing-room, and Mollie, white with wrath and dismay, crept quietly to the bed, and stood looking at the sleeping child. Poor little girl! Her whole life she had been made the center for the evil passions of others, and now a fresh danger threatened her. "Touch Kate!" thought Mollie, with beating heart, as she gently brushed the fair curls from the small thin face.

Touch her little sister! Not while she, Mollie, could protect her. And she would rouse all Reverton; she would fight them by every means in her power, before this nervous, excitable child should suffer further. Then she remembered that she herself was Kate's great safeguard, so long as she did not marry Henri. And she would die rather; for the child was madame's largest source of income, and would be cared for accordingly.

But as she sat in the garden the following afternoon she felt sick at heart. How could these people be so wicked.

Lying back in an American chair, looking up into the great trees, she reflected sadly upon the terrible abuse of money.

People would do anything for it—scheme, lie, and cheat; and what did it come to in the end? for "They brought nothing into the world, neither can they carry anything out."

She and Kate were very fond of this part of the garden. They spent all the hot afternoons there, and madame and Henri were out today, so it was very peaceful.

Suddenly a bird in the bushes sang a few notes, then a very clear whistle followed; but it came from no bird's throat—it was a tune she knew well, but never expected to hear in the garden at Chalfont, and she sat up eagerly and looked round.

There was Reggie, who ought to have been a hundred miles away, standing a few yards off, clad in riding clothes, whip in hand, and a smile on his good-looking young face.

"Well, what are you doing here?" she cried in amazement, with a decided access of color. "Why, your people are away!"

"Oh, yes; but I have just run down about the horses, you see," returned he glibly, coming quite close. "No; bother the horses. That is not it at all. So you remember the old tune, Mollie?"

"It would be funny if I did not. You never whistle anything else."

"But I never sang the words for you, did I? They go like this"—and in a clear mellow voice, Mr. Anstruther softly trolled them out:

"'Won't you tell me, Mollie darling,
That you love none else but me?
For I love you, Mollie darling—
You are all the world to me.'

MORSELS of WIT & HUMOR

From the Washington Post: "Mammy Mary," who for three generations had been a nurse in the family of General John B. Gordon of Georgia, and who is still with the family, had the distinction of once proving that the mountain would come to Mohammed.

In the course of her career she had met many distinguished people, but her own importance as a nurse in a distinguished family prevented her from being overwhelmed by the honor.

When Mrs. Cleveland during the second term of her husband's presidency visited the Gordons at the governor's mansion at Atlanta she expressed the desire to see a genuine old negro mammy. The carriage was hitched up and Mammy Mary was sent for at Sutherland, the Gordon country place, which she preferred to the noise and excitement of official life at Atlanta.

When the coachman drew up he found her smoking her evening pipe. Not a step would she budge. "She done say," said the unsuccessful envoy in solemn disgust, "dat she don't want to see no more presidents; she done see 'nough presidents." Mrs. Cleveland laughed heartily when she heard it. The next morning she drove out to see Mammy Mary herself.

"I am surprised, Mammy Mary," said Mrs. Gordon before introducing her distinguished visitor, "that you sent such a message. You have never been impolite before."

"An' dat niggah done tell what I say? Well, he nevah did have no sense an' no mannahs! Co'se I 'spected he'd say I'se sorry I'se indisposed!"

Pointed Question.

Father—It is something people get blown up with.

Little Girl—Is that what makes you scold mamma so when she puts it on her face?—Detroit Free Press.

Deserve Them.

"The Chinese believe in eight purgatories."

"Well, I'm glad to hear it; but they deserve sixteen."—Exchange.

CAUTIOUS.

The Servant—"The missus told me to say she wasn't at home."

The Caller—"Very well. Just go back and tell her I said I didn't call."

A Narrow Escape.

From the New York Times: "We were traveling from El Paso to the coast," said the advance man of a theatrical combination, "and the porter had tucked us snugly in our births when we were awakened to the consciousness that our train was 'held up.' The robbers marched us out of the car and made us deliver. Fortunately not one of us had more than a few dollars in cash. But the man who held up the car porter gave a yelp of delight:

"'See what I've found! Put 'em back; start the train!'

"In the careless porter's vest pocket they had discovered a roll of bills as big as the pocket would hold. It looked as if there must have been several hundred dollars. We all knew of the profitable rapaciousness of the Pullman car porter, but never dreamed that his accumulations were so large. Yet the friendly human spark of forgiveness and sympathy was in our hearts for the poor fellow losing so much at one fell swoop. We were gathered in the smoking compartment and had a consolation purse under advisement for the darky when he came along himself.

"'Mah Lawd! Dat was de luckiest 'sperience I done ever had,' he said, chuckling all over. 'Lucky!' We were astonished. A poor servant robbed of hundreds chuckling with glee. ''Deed, yes, gem'men. Dey never looked but jis in only one of my pockets.'"

Getting His Money's Worth.

Stranger (who has just visited a museum, to the custodian)—Here's two marks—you may give me back one mark.

Custodian (putting the coin in his pocket)—Sorry, but I haven't any change. Tell you what I'll do, though—I'll show you through the museum again.—Fliegende Blaetter.

BAKED.

Accused—"I only trun mud at him, yer honor."

Judge—"Is that so, plaintiff?"

Victim—"Yes, yer honor."

Judge—"Then, why this complaint?"

Victim—"'Cause de mud was in brick form, yer honor."

Good Company for the Dog.

In the north of England, where rabbit coursing is a very popular sport, swift, well-trained dogs often win large sums of money and local fame for their owners.

An old Yorkshire collier, well known for his success in the coursing field, surprised his mates a year or two ago by marrying a decidedly ugly woman. In addition to this he was generally considered a confirmed woman-hater.

"Why has ta gane an' got spliced, lad, at thy age?" one of his cronies asked.

"It's not much of a tale," the old man replied, carelessly. "I agree wit' ye 'at Bessie yon' is no beauty, but that dog o' mine, e' wos simply pinin' for some un to look after 'im while I be away at t' pit. I cud na bear to leave 'm t' 'ouse by hissen, so I married Bessie. She ain't 'andsome, but she mighty good company for the dog."—Chambers' Journal.

An Exclusive Pastime.

Wiggle—"The reason why golf is growing in favor and the bicycle receding is that golf is an exclusive pastime. The players have to be well enough off to own or hire the land they play on."

Waggle—"But, then, why should bicycling go out of fashion? Don't the wheelmen own all the streets?"—Boston Transcript.

The Day of Large Enterprises.

"Maybe he is inclined to put on airs because he has a barrel of money," said one politician.

"We'll soon teach him something about modern politics," replied the other in a resolute tone. "We'll let him realize that nowadays a man who gets into a campaign with anything smaller than a hogshead is exceedingly small potatoes."—Washington Star.

How He Got It.

Young lawyer (in surprise)—But I never knew you had a rich uncle.

How to Begin.

"The way of the transgressor is hard," at least it looks that way when a fellow gets boozed up and is taken charge of by the town marshall. Our city quay was favored with a selection in the way of a "drunk and disorderly" on Tuesday night.

R. M. Day took a whole acre of our newspaper space last week to tell about the sale he will have on Saturday Nov. 17th. and the only thing we regret about it is the fact that the terms of the sale should read, "$5 and under, cash" etc., instead of "$10 and under, cash." It's a mistake of $5.00 and should have been corrected.

The special meetings held in the English M. E, church last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings were fairly well attended, and some good ideas about the Twentieth Century Forward movement were passed out for public consideration, by Revereuds Albertson and Merten of Garner and Case of Swaledale, Rev. Albertson has an admirable way of delivering a discourse and it seems a source of pleasure to listen to him.

The Kanawha paper, the Garner papers, the Britt papers and the Wesley paper are having a great time of late, trying to puff one another up and make one of them the best paper in the county. None of them will conced the right to another to claim the title "best." But where in the world does the Klemme TIMES come in? It is not in it —the scr Is content to stay out and saw wood while the rest are doing their best to catch up. Come on fellows, we'll lead you a 2:20 pace! Go!

One of Klemme's oldest citizens, A. B. Shafer returned home from Minneapolis Friday where he nas been for some time past perfecting a corporation to be known as the Minneapolis Mining and Development Company. Mr. Shafer went some few months ago on a prospecting tour through Missouri, and as luck would have it he struck it rich, finding a place where nature gave forth her wea h by letting it ooze from the ; round in the shape of oil, not only did he find a rich flow of oil, but minerals such as lead, copper and zinc were in the immediate vicinity and Mr. Shafer had the foresight and intellect to see a small fortune in these. Keeping all things to himself he returned home and proceeded to Minneapolis to interest some of the Mining and Milling Companys. From there he went to Missouri and secured a twenty year lease on several hundred acres of land which are in direct vicinity of his rich find. The Minneapolis Tribune of Sept 27th gives an article of legal form showing an organization perfected with our citizen, A. B. Shafer as President, M. Shafer expects to leave in a few days for this lucrative district to sink a shaft for oil and mineral mining. More information in regard to the Minneapolis Mining and development Co. will be given later:

The Belmond Roller Flour Mill is now completed and ready for all the business offered. This is one of the best equiped flour mills in the state every thing first class and up to date, Money has not been spared to make it the best mill in Central Iowa. ST. VITUS' DANCE

Three great and complete cures effected by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

Mrs. J. A. Ferre, who resides near 905 Main Street, Hartford, Conn., says:

"My daughter Lulu became very ill with St. Vitus dance over a year ago. She became so bad that she lost the use of her right arm and side, and we thought at one time she would lose her speech. Her tongue was almost paralyzed. She was so bad she could not feed herself, and at night she would get so nervous I had to sit and hold her. I tried several doctors but they did not do her any good. I did not find anything that would help her until I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. She is now, by the use of this medicine, entirely cured."

C. H. Bailey, Esq., of Waterbury, Vt., writes:

"I am more than glad to write about my little daughter. Until a short time ago she had always been a very delicate child and subject to sick spells lasting weeks at a time. She was very nervous, and our family doctor said we would never raise her, she was so delicate and feeble. We tried many remedies without the least good. We felt much anxiety about her, especially as no doctors could benefit her, and had great fear for her future. Learning of the wonders being done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to give it to her. She soon commenced to improve under its use, and rapidly gained in every respect. She eats and sleeps well and her nerves are strong. The medicine has done wonders for her and it is the best we ever knew. I recommend Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, to everybody."

Mrs. J. Learmonth, of 776 Broadway, South Boston, Mass., says:

"At ten years of age my daughter became affected with a nervous condition which soon developed into St. Vitus' dance. It was pronounced by the attending physician to be a very severe attack. The mouth would be drawn spasmodically far to one side, the hands and arms were restless and constantly twitching. Her limbs also were weak; her ankles bent under her so that it was almost impossible to walk. She was so nervous that she would scream almost like a maniac and then have fits of crying. After two months' treatment without a cure I concluded to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. Three bottles entirely cured her. She is now thirteen years old, and has been well ever since, and to-day is a picture of health."

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, November 10, 1900.

F. M. White, a brakeman in the employ of the Great Western, has commenced suit against the road for $15,000 damages on account of the loss of two fingers while engaged at his work in Marshalltown in August. The case is of particular interest, as it calls into question a claim for damages sustained through neglect of the company in not having all of its cars fitted with pneumatic brakes, as required by the law. Suit is based on a new proposition, and will be of peculiar interest to the railroads of the country. White alleges because of the fact that one of the cars on a freight train was not fitted with the automatic couplers he was compelled to go between the cars to couple them, and that in so doing he had his finger and thumb smashed.

The state board of control will begin work immediately upon the formulation of rules and regulations governing county institutions in which insane persons are maintained. The last legislature passed a measure giving the board the power to make rules and regulations, and to enforce them, their violation being sufficient to give the board power to remove the patients in the county institutions to the state hospitals; provided, however, that the matter could be taken to the courts by interested persons and there adjudicated. A systematic examination of the county asylums has been made by the members of the board. This work has just been completed. The information obtained will be classified and the work of making the rules undertaken this week. The work may consume considerable time. The board anticipates no particular difficulty in inducing the county managements to conform to their recommendations. It is learned, incidentally, that the principal complaint against the county institutions as they are managed now, is the paucity of attendants. More attendants will cost more in salaries. A move in this direction will work both ways. The counties, largely, took patients from the state hospitals to save money; the hiring of new attendants will increase the expenditure on account of the county insane; but it will afford more salaried places.

By the decision of the voters of the state of Iowa, at the election yesterday, the state constitution is amended to the extent that elections in Iowa shall be held every two years instead of every year. By this decision, the district courts of the state are affected. In the year 1901 there will be no election, and consequently, according to the provisions of the code, there will be no talesmen for jury duty selected. Auditor Hargrave of Marshall county first raised this important point. Each year 800 names are selected from among the voters and kept in the tin receptacle in the office of the clerk of the courts, and from these names the jurors are drawn prior to each term of court. It is the duty of the auditor to apportion these 800 names among the various voting precincts, and the judges of election are required to send in the number apportioned to their precinct. There will be no election in 1901 and consequently no election board to make a selection of these names. As no provision is made for either grand or petit jurors beyond the specified time, the county courts would be without jurymen until the next general election, in 1902. The point raised will soon come before the attorney general for a decision, and if he sustains the opinion held by the above named auditor, the question will come up before the state legislature, which does not meet until January, 1902, about the first or second week in the month. In order to make provision for the juries, it may be necessary to call the legislature in special session, so that the jurymen may be selected by the first of January, 1902, as the law provided.

Harry West, owner of the packing house properties, has received letters from the eastern gentlemen who will be associated with him in the formation of a new company to operate the plants, saying they will be in Des Moines in the next ten days. It is expected that soon after their arrival arrangements will be completed for the opening of the house and keeping it in operation continuously. Mr. West said it would not take a week from the completion of the details preliminary to opening the house. He says that it has been kept in first class repair, and that so far as the machinery is concerned it could be put in operation at its full capacity in twenty-four hours, if the working force was ready and there were hogs on hand to make a run. He says it will take some days to get a crew together and to commence to get hogs coming to Des Moines. He expects the house to be in full operation not later than December 1.

Gage Will Resign.

New York, Nov., 12.—The Commercial Advertiser says: "It is announced at the national republican headquarters that Secretary Gage will resign from the cabinet. Comptroller of the Curreney Dawes will be asked to succeed him. The announcement is positive from an authoritative source, and the change will be made before March 1st."

FIGHT CONSUMPTION.

CITY MAKES CONSUMPTIVES, COUNTRY CURES THEM.

The Disease Is Being Arrested or Cured at the Sanitariums—Outdoor Life and Work a Cure—Reports from State Institutions.

Not a little that is interesting about consumption has appeared in the newspapers of late, the discussion of the subject having been actuated by the activity of health authorities in different parts of the country. Both Boston, Mass., and Trenton, N. J., have tried to isolate consumptives under certain quarantine regulations, the idea being whenever a case of consumption is reported to the board, to examine the patient and his surroundings, and, if circumstances warrant it, to remove the patient to a public institution. The Buffalo Times says of this:

"The importance of forcing scientific treatment of consumptives when left in their homes, which is probably the real meaning of the new orders issued in Boston, is evident form the reports from various institutions where such treatment is applied. In the first annual report of the Massachusetts State Hospital for Consumptives, which was opened in October, 1898, it is shown that of 212 cases of all degrees that were treated, 30.97 per cent were discharged after an average stay of four months, with the disease arrested, which some authorities take to mean cured; 46.10 per cent were discharged as improved, and 21.23 per cent were recorded as not improved. Of those who were discharged as arrested, a very large percentage went to the institution when in the early stages of the disease. The records of another sanitarium show that of 1,200 patients treated during the last fifteen years, 23 per cent were discharged as cured, 56 per cent were discharged with the disease arrested, and 19 per cent were discharged with the disease stationary. Only a few days ago a similar glowing report came from Dr. Appell, the physician in charge of the government sanitarium at Fort Bayard, N. M., for the benefit of soldiers suffering from consumption, Dr. Appell says that twelve cases of incipient consumption have been completely cured in the last year and that a forthcoming report which he will make to the government will contain statistics which will startle the medical world. The treatment at this institution consists simply of outdoor life and work. Such a showing promises much for the success of the sanitarium which is to be erected in the Adirondacks."

Reverting to the same topic the Brooklyn Eagle also calls attention to the great benefit to consumptives of the clear dry air of Arizona, which, it believes, will become a vast sanitarium for this disease:

"It has certain advantages over California, in that it is less populous, and the disease is therefore less likely to be carried to others who are now in health; it is warmer and there is less possibility of chill from dew and rain; the average altitude is high, and though we are apt to think of it as a desert region, it contains large tracts of evergreen forest, the balsamy odors of which are especially grateful to sufferers with lung troubles and doubtless have a healing influence as well. The city makes the consumptives, and the country heals them. The country also makes them when there is lack of intelligence, as there is in all those homes in which the windows are closed that the sun and air may not enter and in those places where wells are so dug as to receive the drainage of closets and barnyards. At the sea level the air is heavy, and the lungs are not filled, but in a high plateau or mountain country the air, being thinner, calls for a greater pulmonary activity on the part of those who breathe it. In order to secure the same amount of oxygen as at ocean level, twice the seeming quantity of air has to be inhaled."

House Will Lose Humorist.

Congressman John Allen of Mississippi was at Chamberlin's yesterday, looking in fine health and contemplating with serene satisfaction his early retirement from the grinding cares of statesmanship. After March 4, 1901, the house will lose its chief humorist, and for the rest of his days Mr. Allen will live the life of a gentleman farmer on his cotton plantation near his native town of Tupelo.—Washington Post.

IOWA'S BIG MAJORITY.

McKinley and Roosevelt Have Plurality of Nearly 100,000.

Des Moines, Nov. 8.—On a total vote of the two great parties about 10,000 smaller than they cast in 1896, the republican plurality is increased this year about 35,000. Complete returns from all the counties in the state, some of them partially estimated, however, show that the total vote cast for the democratic and republican tickets was 503,089. Of these votes the republican national ticket received 301,127. The republican plurality on this basis would be 100,835. The official returns will vary somewhat from these figures, but they will leave the republican plurality in the vicinity of 100,000.

Returns on the vote of the minor parties are far from complete. The prohibitionists have made gains and have nearly 10,000 votes.

Two propositions were submitted to voters. One was: "Shall a convention be held to revise the constitution?" This proposition was overwhelmingly defeated. The other was: "Shall the constitution be amended to provide for biennial elections?" Only a few returns have been made of the vote cast on this proposition, usually known as the Titus amendment, but those which have been received indicate that the amendment was adopted.

The congressional contests have resulted as follows:

In the First district Hedge wins over O'Connell by 8,786 votes.

Rumple's plurality over Vollmer in the Second is 2,316.

Henderson's plurality over Birdsall in the Third, is 11,807.

Haugen wins over Foley in the Fourth by 12,475.

Cousins in the Fifth, has a plurality of 10,437 over Kerr.

In the Sixth Lacey wins over Steck by 3,349.

The Seventh goes for Hull by a plurality of 12,477 over Crozier.

Henburn wins over McGuinn in the Eighth by 4,919.

The Ninth goes for Smith against Wadsworth by 7,502.

O'Connor is elected in the Tenth by 14,679 votes over Dale.

In the Eleventh Thomas' plurality over Mulvaney is 12,669.

THIRTY-FOUR MET DEATH.

Steamer Monticello Wrecked in the Bay of Fundy.

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 10.—The worst marine disaster in the long list of marine disasters was the wreck on the shoals at the entrance to the Bay of Fundy, when the side steam-wheeler City of Monticello, bound for St. Johns via Yarmouth, was overwhelmed by the mountainous seas only four miles from her destination and engulfed with thirtyfour of her passengers and crew. A heavy gale was raging at the time, and there was a tremendous sea. The place where the City of Monticello struck is at the mouth of the Bay of Fundy, where the waters of the bay join those of the Atlantic. There are many reefs and dangerous shoals at this spot, and currents are many and changeable, it being one of the most dangerous places on the coast. The gale kicked up a tremendous sea, and at the time the vessel struck the waves were beating against the rocks and sending sprays for hundreds of feet over the land. The Monticello was on her way from St. John's to Yarmouth with a full freight and a fairly large passenger list. Just before she foundered an attempt was made to reach the land in a small boat in charge of the quartermaster, and it contained Third Officer Flemming, a stewardess named Smith and three passengers. The boat was smashed to atoms by a huge comber, the occupants being hurled high on the beach at Pembroke uninjured. It is believed they are the only survivors.

Big Fire in Mississippi.

Biloxi, Miss., Nov. 11.—For the third time in its history, Biloxi, the "Saratoga of the South," has been severly scourged by fire. A blaze which broke out in a saloon swept away row after row of beautiful residences, and for a time endangered the entire business and residence portion of the city. The fire was finally checked by tearing down the houses in its path, but before it was under control property worth from $350,000 to $500,000 had been reduced to twisted junk and ashes.

Losses in the Black Sea.

St. Petersburg, Nov. 10.—The Novoe Vremya says two steamers and twenty odd sailing vessels were wrecked in the Black sea during the recent storms, several foundering with their entire crews.

Colonel T. W. Higginson, while a member of the Massachusetts legislature, was one day arguing against a bill for the prohibition of oleomargarine. He insisted that good oleomargarine was better than bad butter, and fortified his argument by a story of a gentleman who had introduced the substitute without explanation at a luncheon, and who, on asking his guests to compare it with the best butter, also on the table, found them all selecting the oleomargarine. Suddenly his adversary arose and, with the profoundest seriousness, asked: "Will the gentleman kindly inform us at what precise stage of the luncheon party this test was applied?"

When Nasr-ed-Din, the father of the present shah, made his memorable tour of the principal European capitals some years ago, he visited King Leopold of Belgium at the Chateau de Laeken. When he saw the queen surrounded by her ladies in waiting, the old shah said to the king: "Your harem, sire?" The question took the king so much by surprise that he did not for a moment reply, and the shah, taking his silence for consent, looked critically along the line and added, mildly but decidedly: "You will have to renew it."

HELPED THE CHIEF.

How a Loyal Engineer Did His Brother Great Service.

Meadville, Pa., Nov. 12.—(Special)—The Loyalty of the Members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers is proverbial. A circumstance occurred in this city some days ago, which emphasizes this feeling.

Frank J. Zeller, is Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers No. 143. He is extremely popular among his fellow railway men, and one of the best known Engineers running out of Meadville. When the announcement was made a short time ago that Frank was pretty sick, it caused a great deal of regret among the boys. Soon he was missed from his engine, having had to "lay off" on account of his back. A brother of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who had been ill with similar symptoms, some time before, and who had been pulled through, called to see Mr. Zeller, and in a brotherly way, took with him a box of Dodd's Kidney Pills, the Remedy which had cured him. He advised Mr. Zeller to try them, with the result that after seven boxes had been used, he was entirely well, and able to work.

In an interview Mr. Zeller states: "I had suffered for four years with this affliction, being often kept awake at night with pains, and at times unable to work. I tried several of the advertised remedies, and found that they did me no earthly good. Finally, a member of our Order, who had been cured of Kidney Disease by Dodd's Kidney Pills brought me a box, and asked me to try them. I had little faith in them, but as a drowning man grasps at a straw to help him, so I took the Pills. I used seven boxes, and am today as well and strong a man as there is in Pennsylvania."

Naturally, Mr. Zeller feels very grateful, and his complete recovery has delighted his many friends, and none more than the good Brother, who feels that he was instrumental in saving the life of the Chief.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

How Mothers may Help their Daughters into Womanhood

Every mother possesses information of vital value to her young daughter. That daughter is a precious legacy, and the responsibility for her future is largely in the hands of the mother. The mysterious change that develops the thoughtless girl into the thoughtful woman should find the mother on the watch day and night. As she cares for the physical well-being of her daughter, so will the woman be, and her children also.

When the young girl's thoughts become sluggish, when she experiences headaches, dizziness, faintness, and exhibits an abnormal disposition to sleep, pains in the back and lower limbs, eyes dim, desire for solitude, and a dislike for the society of other girls, when she is a mystery to herself and friends, then the mother should go to her aid promptly. At such a time the greatest aid to nature is Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It prepares the young system for the coming change, and is the surest reliance in this hour of trial.

The following letters from Miss Good are practical proof of Mrs. Pinkham's efficient advice to young women.

Miss Good asks Mrs. Pinkham for Help.

June 12th, 1899.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been very much bothered for some time with my monthly periods being irregular. I will tell you all about it, and put myself in your care, for I have heard so much of you. Each month menstruation would become less and less, until it entirely stopped for six months, and now it has stopped again. I have become very nervous and of a very bad color. I am a young girl and have always had to work very hard. I would be very much pleased if you would tell me what to do."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

The Happy Result.

February 10th, 1900.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound enough. It is just simply wonderful the change your medicine has made in me. I feel like another person. My work is now a pleasure to me, while before using your medicine it was a burden. To-day I am a healthy and happy girl. I think if more women would use your Vegetable Compound there would be less suffering in the world. I cannot express the relief I have experienced by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—MISS PEARL GOOD, Cor. 29th Avenue and Yeslar Way, Seattle, Wash.

The Northern Lumber Co, has been taking an inventory of "stocks on hand" this week.

Steve Hamilton Jr. went to Iowa Falls Monday to take up College work. Wm. Barz who has been home the past week also went down to resume work as a student.

Mr. George Wendell of Belmond and John Wendell of Allamakee Co. who have been visiting Aug. Martin and family the past week left Monday for Hayfield to spend a few days visiting friends and relatives.

E. P. Schaefer, the Klemme music dealer, was in Meservey and vicinity yesterday. The Messenger acknowledges a pleasant call, Mr. Sdhaefer sells the Kimball organs and pianos which are among the best on the market.—Meservey Messenger.

Jake Kauffman while handling barbed wire one day last week accidentally cut his thumb which is now very sore. Jake was picking corn after the cut happened and undoubtedly some of the corn smut got into the wound, inflamation set in and he is now in danger of having his thumb amputated. He carries his hand in a sling and is in constant pain.

Mr. John Hartbeck, living about 5 miles west of Klemme, died on Friday, November 8th. As we understand it, he was chasing a pig and stumbled, falling on a corn cob which was standing erect or on end having been frozen into the ground. thereby displacing some of his internal organs. Death followed soon afterward. Mr. Hartbeck leaves a wife and three children to mourn his sudden departure.

The people of Iowa have long watched the weather predictions of Rev. Irl. R. Hicks of St. Louis with a great deal of interest. On the 10th, 11th, and 12th, falling barometer and reaction of storm conditions. On 12th a decided change to warmer will develop in the west and snow and rain storms will move eastward to 19th. Another decided dash of early winter will follow and last until 21st. New moon this month falls on the 22nd, the central day of the reactionary storm period. Moon is at its extreme south point on the 23d, hence northerly gales and cold will follow storms at this time. The last storm period for November from the 25th to the 30th. Storms of rain, wind and snow will pass eastward over the country on the 27th to 30th and a cold wave in sight in the northwest as the month goes out.

Holy Smoke! The way Bro. Forrest goes after his subscribers—or rather Bracket's subscribers—would suffice for the actions of a South African Boer. Jim seems to be a chronic kicker; was that way when a boy, and it looks as if he never will out grow it. It's a bad habit.

"Original matter and not pirated locals from other papers is what counts in making up a NEWS paper.—Hancock Signal."

That's exactly it. Man's natural inclinations are to steal, mimic and pawn off originality! Re-writing locals is the easiest thing on earth for an editor to do. In fact, it is so easy that it becomes disgusting to most of our up-to-date editors.

EXPLANATION WANTED?

Fox, the ditchman of the north end has jumped his job as it was expected he would. He finished only one mile of the ditch, but did a little work on other dry spots. This leaves the county and the parties who paid a big tax towards the ditch in and awkward position. It is now to be seen if Mr. Fox's $1,000 certified check is any good.—Thompson Courier.

The Britt News gives this kind of answer which it presumes will suffice for the present:

"You need not worry about the check Mr. Courier. It will be paid upon presentation. Perry is a little unreliable in politics, Lake bed and ditch matters but his check is good at any bank in Hancock."

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare, a leading druggest, of Beleville, O.' writes. "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach, liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickley, run down man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by J. L. Harr druggist.

Some of our eight and ten year old boys are learning to talk Greek, Latin Scandinavian altogether too early in life It seems that boys of today are far ahead of their time in this respect, as is shown by their everyday conversation, and no respect is shown the Sabbath day either. They can, if anything, handle their Latin more fluently on Sunday than at any other time. They, the little fellows, will congregate on some corner, in some body's wood-shed, in a barn or while at play most anywhere and sling their Latin Greek and Pig Language fast enough to do credit to a Texas Bronco Buster. They talk to old men as though they were equal to them if not just a little better. Well, they certainly are, the to many of our dustiest men and bring the blushes of shame and sympathy to many a cheek by the language they use on the street. Sassy? My, if you say just one word to them asking them to be polite, you are insulting them and the way your name is blasphemed is a caution. They not only use slangy expressions but get right to genuine cussing and swearing. They do not give it to us mildly, but tear it off in big chunks. Really, it is a shame how these little boys act and do. They will suffer for it someday but you cannot get them to believe it now.

Astonuding Discovery.

From Coopersville, Mich., comes word of a wonderful discovery of a pleasant tasting liquid that when used before retiring by any one troublud with bad cough always ensures a good night's rest. "It will soon cure the cough too." writes Mrs. S. Himelburger, "for three generations of our family have used Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption and never it's equal for Coughs and colds." It's an unrivaled lifesaver when used for desperate lung diseases. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1.00 at J. L. Harr.
Trial bottles free.

We take just a little pride in saying that the Titus amendment to the constitution provididing for bi-ennuel elections and calling a special convention of the State legislature to revise the constitution was defeated in this townsip. Our sincere belief is that had it been "snowed under" thru out the state the people in general would in a very short time find that they did the proper thing by "killing" it, wheras now they will find the business a factor working to their sorrow. As it is there will be no election in Iowa next year. Might is not always right; neither is majority and this is the "exception."

The hotels and eating houses at Cherokee have petitioned the city council to pass an ordinance, prohibiting the churches and other like societies from serving meals on holidays and other big days, on the ground that it seriously interferes with their business.—Ex.

We move and second the motion to remove Garner, Goodell and Kanawha from the face of the earth, They are a hindrence and detriment to Klemme and greatly interfere with the welfare of our business men! As can be seen the above article is just a little bit to proposterous, incongruous and shallow to be common sense and logical. That is down in Cherokee. If that petition goes through affirmatively look out for black ducks.

Carl Bush and Thedore Hen entered the Grammer room Monday.

Mrs Chas. Gruetzmacher visited the Primary room Tuesday afternoon.

Harry Waters, Emil Barz and Pearl Swartz are the new pupils in the Primary room.

The A class in the Primary room is very much pleased with it's new Primary Physiology.

The Grammer and Intermediate rooms will write monthly examinations Thursday and Friday.

The symmetroscope and microscope arrived last week and it is found to be a great enjoyment to the lower rooms.

Mr. J. Phelps of Kussuth, Co. a brother of Rev. Phelps, spent last Friday visiting the different rooms of the school.

The school intends to celebrate Thanksgiving time by having general exercises on the Friday afternoon following. We invite the parents, gaurdians and friends to come if they can.

Recent improvements in telephoto cameras are said to have obviated the old difficulty which required long exposures, and have rendered it possible to take pictures with such cameras as quickly as with those of ordinary construction. The improvement has been effected by placing a tube, containing a positive lens at one end and a negative at the other, in front of the ordinary lens of the camera.

It is said that the system adopted will be that of the single elevated rail, the cars being suspended from the rail. According to the results of studies by Prof. A. E. Verrill the beautiful Bermuda Islands are merely the remnant of an island, very much larger than the present entire group, but which has sunk in the ocean. The original island had an area of 300 or 400 square miles, whereas the Bermudas today are only about twenty square miles in area. Within a comparatively recent period, says Prof. Verrill, the Bermudas have subsided at least 80 or 100 feet. Their base is the summit of an ancient volcano, while their surface is composed of sheil sand drifted into hills by the wind and consolidated by infiltration.

He was once captured in Kentucky, but escaped by cutting a hole in the roof of his prison. Captain Emmerson was a warm friend to the James boys. He never recovered from the grief caused by the fall of the Confederacy.

The Census Bureau has made public the returns of the population in Alabama. The population of the state in 1900 is 1,828,697, as against 1,513,017 in 1890, representing an increase since 1890 of 315,680, or 20.8 per cent. This rate of increase is slightly greater than that for the decade from 1880 to 1890 when it was 19.8 per cent. The population in 1900 is more than fourteen times as large as that given for 1820, the first census taken after its organization as a state, in 1819. The total land surface of Alabama is approximately 51,540 square miles, the average number of persons to the square mile at the censuses of 1890 and 1900 being 29.3 in 1890 and 35.4 in 1900.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

THE ATTORNEYS FAIL TO AGREE.

Cheshire and Remley Dissent as to the Duty of Sheriff in Criminal Cases.

Des Moines, Nov. 19.—Attorney General Remley and Assistant County Attorney Cheshire do not agree as to what fees the sheriffs are entitled to collect and apply on their salary accounts. Recently Mr. Cheshire gave it as his opinion that the sheriff must do the work in state and county cases, which includes all the criminal business, for nothing and that in this county Sheriff Mattern must make his salary of $2,500 a year out of collection of fees in civil cases. Sheriff Mattern took issue with Mr. Cheshire, insisted that he could not make his salary out of the civil fees and appealed to the attorney general for an opinion. The attorney general's opinion is to the effect that the sheriff shall collect the criminal fees the same as civil fees and that he shall deduct his salary from the whole amount of the collections and turn the balance over to the county clerk.

Mr. Cheshire is not willing to accept the opinion of the attorney general as final and acting on his advice the board of supervisors still refuses to pass on the sheriff's bill for criminal fees. As a result the probability of a settlement of the differences out of court is no nearer than before the attorney general rendered his opinion.

Furthermore Mr. Cheshire has given it as his opinion that under the law the sheriff is not entitled to the collection of a fee for feeding or caring for prisoners in the county jail and that he must do this out of his salary. The sheriff says that if this is true it would take all his salary each year to pay for the keep of the prisoners. It is quite likely that a suit will be brought at the January term of court by Sheriff Mattern to determine all these questions.

FIRE AT HOPKINTON.

Seven Buildings With Their Contents Destroyed.

Dubuque, Nov. 19.—Hopkinton was visited by a destructive fire. The loss is estimated at $30,000, with insurance on buildings $15,000. Halls over two of the buildings were occupied by secret societies. A partial list of the losses and insurance follows: Reed & Moulton, groceries, loss $3,000, insurance $2,500; Alex Kirkwood, undertaker, loss $3,000, insurance $2,000; F. M. Wheeler, restaurant and bakery, loss $700, insurance $250; Mrs. Anna Riley, millinery, loss $500, insurance $300; Hucker Bros., hardware, loss $2,500, insurance $1,500; C. C. Morgan, groceries, queensware and crockery, loss $3,500, insurance $1,500; F. B. Thorpe, groceries and dry goods, loss $3,000, insurance $1,500.

SALOONS MAY BE CLOSED.

Woodbury County Prohibitionists Score a Victory.

Sioux City, Nov. 17.—Woodbury county prohibitionists have scored a victory in the first round of their fight against the saloon consent petition for that part of the county outside of this city. E. J. Stason, the referee to whom the contest was submitted several weeks ago, has cut out 1,500 of the 2,500 names on the petition, knocking it out completely. Referee Stason found that the 1,500 names he cut out were not accompanied by proper affidavits as to their genuineness. The prohibitionists have asked the court to declare judgment against the saloons. If this is done they will have to remain closed until January 1, 1901, when the board of supervisors will be asked to pass on a second petition which is now being circulated A convention of anti-saloon people has been called to meet in Sioux City November 26, to take up plans for the stricter enforcement of the Martin law. The meeting will be held under the auspices of the Sioux City Anti-Saloon league, which is making itself very active.

Victory for Saloons.

Sioux City, Nov. 16.—The saloon men in Sioux City have just won out in a contest with the prohibitionists of that county. The prohibitionists dispute the sufficiency of the petition of consent under which the saloon men are doing business, and brought injunction suits against sixteen liquor dealers to restrain them from doing business. The saloon men held that whether or not the petition of consent was good it had been approved by the board of supervisors, which made it of force until an appeal from the action of the board had been taken an upheld. Judge Hutchinson held this to be the proper view and refused to grant the injunctions. In Wodbury county the prohibitionists have gone about the matter in a different way, attacking the petition of consent rather than the saloon men.

STARTLING ERROR FOUND

Titus Amendment Extends Terms of Wrong Officers.

Des Moines, Nov. 14.—A literal construction of the language of the biennial election amendment to the constitution of Iowa which seems to have been adopted by the people at the election November 6, will continue in office for another year every official whose successor was elected at that election. It will affect about 2,000 township, county and state officials. It will at least cut off one-half of the tenure of office of all these 2,000, for they cannot take their seat until 1902, if then. And these are but a few of the amazing results of an astounding defect in the amendment.

According to its language Secretary of State Dobson, Treasurer of State Herriott and Attorney General Remley are entitled to another year tenure of office; and it is doubtful if Secretary of State-Elect Martin, Treasurer of State-Elect Gilbertson and Attorney-General-Elect Mullan will be entitled to their offices without another election. And this statement applies not only to the three state officers mentioned, but to the 2,000 township and county officials whose successors the people voted for at the recent election.

The biennial election amendment provides as follows:

"The terms of office of the judges of the supreme court which would otherwise expire in odd numbered years and all other elective state, county and township officers whose terms of office would otherwise expire in the year 1901, and members of the general assembly whose successors would otherwise be chosen in the year 1903, are hereby extended one year and until their successors are elected and qualified."

This means that all state, county and township officers whose term expire in 1901 hall serve for an additional year. Every officer, almost, for whose successor the people voted at the recent election, goes out of office the first Monday in January and his successor goes in on that day, under the law as it stands. The first Monday in January of the coming year is January 7. Therefore, every officer now incumbent, will, under the biennial election amendment, remain in office for another year, while the men who were elected on November 6 to succeed them, must wait for a year before taking their offices.

Returns from eighty-five counties on the constitutional convention question give a total of 150,150 in favor of the convention and 146,760 against. Returns from eighty-eight counties on the Titus amendment for biennial elections give a total of 161,760 in favor of it and 134,747 against. This indicates that the last proposition has carried by considerable majority and that the convention will be carried by a small margin.

Des Moines, Nov. 15.—Attorney General Remley has issued a lengthy opinion an the effect of the Titus biennial elections amendment, holding, in brief, that the manifest intention of the legislature must govern and that the terms of office of those officers elected in 1898 are not in any manner affected by the constitutional amendment. Furthermore, he holds that it is the terms of office of all those officers who were elected at the general election in November, 1899, that are extended for one year. On both legal and ethical grounds, Attorney General Remley maintains the officers whose terms expire the first Monday in January, 1901, must step down and out at this time. He characterizes it as morally wrong for any man who has filled the full term of his office to attempt to defeat the will of the people, merely by force of what is at best a technical error. Attorney General Remley's opinion is addressed to J. J. Crossley of Winterset, Madison county, where the question was first formally raised as to an error in the amendment.

THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

By the Governor—A Proclamation.

The most remarkable century in the flight of time closes with the most happy and prosperous year in the history of our nation and our state. Very abundant has been the yield from our lands, great has been the product of our mines, the output of our factories, and the increase of our herds. Our people have advanced in all that pertains to material prosperity, and have become wiser and better as the years have come and gone; and now, at the close of Anno Domini nineteen hundred, standing at this elevation, with increased hope and yet loftier aspiration, it is but reasonable that a great and appreciative people tarry for a day to give thanks to the Great Giver of all that is good and the Preserver of all that is best.

I therefore recommend that on Thursday, November 29, the people of the commonwealth of Iowa assemble as far as shall be convenient, in their places of worship, and there, and in their homes, render grateful praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for blessings past and present, and make devout supplication for a continuation of that providential guidance which has made us already great and on which we must rely for yet grander achievement.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the state of Iowa, this twelfth day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred, of the independence of the United States the one hundred and twenty-fifth, and of the state of Iowa the fifty-fourth.

NEWS IN GENERAL

NEGRO BURNED BY A MOB.

Horrible Fate of the Murderer of Louise Frost.

Limon, Colo., Nov. 17.—Chained to a railroad rail set firmly in the ground, on the exact spot where his fiendish crime was committed, Preston Porter, Jr., or, as he was familiarly known, John Porter, who brutally murdered Louise Frost, last evening paid a terrible penalty for his atrocious deed.

It was 6:23 o'clock when the father of the murdered girl touched the match to the fuel piled around the negro, and twenty minutes later a last convulsive shudder told that life was extinct. What agony the doomed brute suffered while the flames shriveled up his flesh could only be guessed from the terrible contortion of his face and the cries he gave from time to time. The executioners, who numbered about 300 citizens of Lincoln county, had not the least semblance of the ordinary mob. Their every act was cool and deliberate, and during all the preparations, as well as throughout the sufferings of the negro, hardly an unnecessary word was uttered. Grimly they stood in a circle about the fire until the body was quite consumed and then took their way back to Limon from whence they departed for their homes shortly afterward.

Limon, Colo., Nov. 19.—No inquest, it is said, will be held over the remains of Preston Porter, Jr., the self-confessed murderer of Louise Frost, who was burned at the stake by a mob of men at Lake Station. In fact, the coroner can find no remains upon which to hold an inquest. A few men remained late at the spot on the prairie where the murder was committed and avenged, and renewed the fire again and again, until every vestige of the negro was gone. The iron rail to which the victim was bound will be left standing as a warning to all inclined to deeds similar to that for which young Porter's life was taken.

THEY VIOLATE PLEDGES.

England, Germany and Russia Causing Trouble in China.

Washington, Nov. 18.—Germany, Russia and Great Britain have broken faith with the United States and the international alliance which pledges itself to restore order and authority in China. The czar and the kaiser especially have violated the conditions exacted by this government in the joint circular of July 3, while her majesty has been a passive if not tolerant third party to the cruel aggressions and blood-thirsty expeditions which have been carried on under Count von Waldersee's command. Owing to the dragooning of innocent natives, including women and children, by German and Russian troops in China, the eastern question once more forges forward as a subject of anxiety and threatening internal relation.

Russia has broken faith with this government by failing to withdraw its troops, and there is evidence that Germany and Russia are endeavoring to provoke another uprising among the Chinamen, and in that manner precipitate dismemberment.

While Russia and the German emporer in public documents and international correspondence profess the utmost zeal in bringing Chinese affairs to a peaceful culmination, their armies are killing natives and committing outrages against the Chinese besides which the Peking siege and horrors pale into insignificance. Resentment here against the German methods is at a high pitch, and unless there is a letup this government will take upon itself to utter a protest against these outrages, which are barbarous and not in accord with the proceedings of civilized powers.

PRINCE TUAN ARRESTED.

Yu Haien Also Arrested and Likely to be Executed.

London, Nov. 19.—Under date of Nov. 16 a dispatch to a news agency says Great Britain has protested against the transfer of Yu Chang to the governorship of Wu Chang. Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching, according to this dispatch, have memorialized the throne, and Yu Chang will probably not be allowed to take up the new post.

A dispatch from Shanghai says that Prince Tuan is under arrest at Nig Haia province. Yu Haien, governor of Shan Si has also been arrested at Piman Sheng. The director of telegraphs and railroads has memorialized the throne, denouncing Yu Haien, and an edict is expected condemning Yu Haien to death.

At a council of ministers in Paris M. Delcasse, French minister of foreign affairs, announced that the ministers at Peking had transmitted to their respective governments a number of articles of a joint note, and they contemplated adding six points to those already reached as a basis for peace negotiations.

COUNT KILLS HIS WIFE.

Shooting Affair Causes a Star in Society at Paris.

Paris, Nov. 19.—Count de Cornulier surprised his wife, the Countess de Cornulier, visiting the apartments of a gentlemen on the Rue de Provonco. The count met the countess on the stairway and fired three shots at her. She died on her way to a hospital.

The count was arrested. The family is a prominent one. The countess' brother is an army colonel and the count is well known in the highest Parisian society. He is 43 years of age. His wife was 31 years of age. She was formerly Mlle. Genevieve Dineau de Viennay. A suit for separation was pending between the count and the countess.

Boer Force Was Badly Cut Up.

Bloemfontein, Nov. 19.—The Boers heavily attacked the railroad at Edenburg Nov. 15 (Thursday). It is reported that the Boers were completely cut up. One report has it that seventy-five of the party were killed or wounded.

LARGE OUTLAY ON NAVY.

Report of Admiral Bradford Records Big Expenditures.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The report of Admiral Bradford, chief of the naval bureau of equipment, records unprecedently large expenditures by cruising ships during the last fiscal year and the disbursement of large amounts for freight involved in the transportation of stores.

Admiral Bradford sets forth the desirability of a naval station at Guam, emphasizing the importance of the island as a naval base. He also recounts rapid improvement in equipment work at the Cavite naval station and the cold storage house at Pago-Pago on the island of Tutuila, Samoa. A new floating dry dock for the naval station at Algiers, La., is to be completed by May, 1901.

The amount of coal being consumed by the navy is increasing year by year and its cost last year averaged nearly $2 a ton more than during the fiscal year of 1898. Admiral Bradford again renews his recommendations for new naval coaling depots. The bureau recommends the installation of the Marconi system of wireless telegraphy on board several ships of the navy provided it can be done at a reasonable cost.

The report says that the survey made by the United States steamer, Nero, for a trans-Pacific submarine telegraph cable between Honolulu and the Philippines was most successfully accomplished and that a satisfactory route for an all American cable to connect the Pacific with the outlying colonial possessions of the United States in the Pacific, and with China and Japan, has been discovered, thoroughly explored, surveyed and mapped. The bureau is now ready to lay the cable at any time.

ESTIMATES ON CORN CROP.

Iowa and Indiana Have the Largest Yield Per Acre.

Washington, Nov. 16.—The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of corn for 1900, as published in the forthcoming monthly report of the government statistician for the agricultural department is 25.5 bushels, as compared with no average yield of 25.31 bushels in the year 1899, and a ten year average of 24.1 bushels.

The indicated yield of the crop in Ohio is 17 bushels; Indian and Iowa, 38; Illinois, 37; Missouri, 28; Kansas, 19; Nebraska, 26. The average quality is 85.5 per cent, as compared with 87.2 per cent last year. It is estimated that 4.4 per cent of the corn crop of 1899 was still in the hands of the farmers on November 1, 1900, as compared with 5.9 per cent of the corn crop of 1898 in the farmers' hands on November 1, 1899.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield of the crop of wheat is 15 bushels, against an average yield of 16.56 bushels in the year 1899, and a yearly average of 16.8 bushels.

The average as to quality is 90.2 per cent, against 88.4 per cent in November last.

The preliminary estimate of the average yield per acre of potatoes is 80.8 bushels, against an average yield of 88.63 bushels in 1899, and a ten-year average of 76.6 bushels. The average as to quality is 77.1 per cent, against 91.4 per cent in November last.

The preliminary estimate of the average in the crop of hay is 1.28 tons against an average yield of 1.35 tons in the year 1899, and a ten year average of 1.28 tons.

The average as to quality is 89.7 per cent, against 93.8 per cent in November last.

An estimate of the wheat crop will be issued not later than December 10.

HURLED AX AT KAISER.

Insane Woman Makes an Attempt at Assassination.

Breslau, Nov. 17.—Emepror William was the object of a murderous attempt yesterday which, however, failed. As he was driving in an open carriage to the Cuirassier barracks, accompanied by the hereditary prince of Saxe-Meiningen, a woman in the crowd hurled an ax at the carriage. The rapidity with which the vehicle was passing saved the occupants. The ax or hatchet, fell just behind the carriage. The woman's name is Selma Schnopke. She occupied a place in the front rank of the spectators, on the side furthest from the emperor. The hatchet, it now appears, struck the carriage. The crowd of people who witnessed the outrage threw themselves on his majesty's assailant, but the prompt intervention of the police saved the woman from injury. The missile was a short hand chopper. The woman, it is believed, is insane.

WILL RETURN TO PEKING.

Emperor Kwang Su and Empress Dowager So Decide.

Tien Tsin, Nov. 15.—It is reported that an imperial edict has been issued announcing that Emperor Kwang Su and the empress dowager will return to Peking. A Russian column which left here November 4 returned November 9, having engaged the Chinese.

At Hsi Tsang the Russians fought 2,000 Chinese troops, dispersing them and killing 200. The Russians had no casualties.

The population of the city of Tien Tsin now reaches 600,000 Chinese, and the allies are strengthening the garrison against possible surprise. It is supposed that two-thirds of the inhabitants are Boxers.

TALMAGE'S SERMON.

SOME LESSONS IN CHRISTIAN WARFARE.

Encouraging Words for Those Engaged in the Battles of Life — God's Soldiers Never Turn Backward — Divine Promises.

(Copyright, 1900, Louis Klopsch, N. Y.)

In this discourse Dr. Talmage follows Joshua on his triumphal march and speaks encouraging words to all who are engaged in the battle of this life; text, Joshua i, 5, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

Moses was dead. A beautiful tradition says the Lord kissed him and in that act drew forth the soul of the dying lawgiver. He had been buried, only one person at the funeral, the same one who kissed him. But God never takes a man away from any place of usefulness until he has some one ready to replace him. The Lord does not go looking around amid a great variety of candidates to find some one especially fitted for the vacated position. He makes a man for that place. Moses has passed off the stage, and Joshua, the hero, puts his foot on the platform of history so solidly that all the ages echo with the tread. He was a magnificent fighter, but he always fought on the right side, and he never fought unless God told him to fight. He got his military equipment from God, who gave him the promise at the start, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life." God fulfilled this promise, although Joshua's first battle was with the spring freshet, the next with a stone wall, the next leading on a regiment of whipped cowards and the next battling against darkness, wheeling the sun and the moon into his battalion, and the last against the king of terrors, death—five great victories.

No Going Backward.

As the hand of the Lord God is taken away from the thus uplifted waters—waters perhaps unlifted half a mile—they rush down, and some of the unbelieving Israelites say: "Alas, alas, what a misfortune! Why could not those waters have staid parted? Because perhaps we may want to go back. O Lord, we are engaged in a risky business. Those Canaanites may eat us up. How if we want to go back? Would it not have been a more complete miracle if the Lord had parted the waters to let us come through and kept them parted to let us go back if we are defeated?" My friends, God makes no provision for a Christian retreat. He clears the path all the way to Canaan. To go back is to die. The same gatekeepers that swung back the amethystine and crystalline gate of the Jordan to let Israel pass through now swung shut the amethystine and crystaline gate of the Jordan to keep the Israelites from going back. Victory ahead, but water 30 feet deep behind, surging to death and darkness and woe. But you say, "Why did not these Canaanites, when they had such a splendid chance, standing on the top of the bank 30 or 40 feet high, completely demolish those poor Israelites down in the river?" I will tell you why. God had made a promise, and he was going to keep it. "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

But this is no place for the host to stop. Joshua gives the command, "Forward, march!" In the distance there is a long grove of trees, and at the end of the grove is a city. It is a city with arbors, a city with walls seeming to reach to the heavens, to buttress the very sky. It is the great metropolis that commands the mountain pass. It is Jericho. That city was afterward captured by Pompey and once by Herod the Great and once again by the Mohammedans, but this campaign the Lord plans. There shall be no swords, no shields, no battering ram. There shall be only one weapon of war and that a ram's horn. The horn of the slain ram was sometimes taken, and holes were punctured in it, and then the musician would put the instrument to his lips, and he would run his fingers over this rude musical instrument and make a great deal of sweet harmony for the people. That was the only kind of weapon. Seven priests were to take these rude, rustic musical instruments, and they were to go around the city every day for six days—one a day for six days—and then one the seventh day they were to go around blowing these rude musical instruments seven times, and then at the close of the seventh blowing of the ram's horns on the seventh day the peroration of the whole scene was to be a shout, at which those great walls should tumble from capstone to base.

Victory Follows Defeat.

The seven priests with the rude musical instruments pass all around the city walls on the first day and score a failure. No so much as a piece of plaster broke loose from the wall, not so much as a piece of mortar lost from its place. "There," say the unbelieving Israelites, "did I not tell you so? Why, those ministers are fools. The idea of going around the city with those musical instruments and expecting in that way to destroy it. Joshua has been spoiled. He thinks because he has overthrown and conquered the spring freshet he can overthrow the stone wall. Why, it is not philosophic. Do you not see there is no relation between the blowing of these musical instruments and the knocking down of the wall? It is not philosophic." And I suppose there were many wiseacres who stood with their brows knitted and with the forefinger of the right hand to the forefinger of the left hand arguing it all out and showing that it was not possible that such a cause could produce such an effect. And I suppose that night in the encampment there was plenty of caricature, and if Joshua had been nominated for any high military position he would not have received many votes. Joshua's stock was down. The second day the priests blowing the musical instruments go around the city and again a failure. The third day and a failure, the fourth day and a failure, fifth day and a failure, sixth day and a failure. The seventh day comes, the climacteric day. Joshua is up early in the morning and examines the troops, walks all about, looks at the city wall. The priests start to make the circuit of the city. They go all around one, all around twice, three times, four times, five times, six times, seven times, and a failure. There is only one more thing to do, and that is to utter a great shout. I see the Israelitish army straightening themselves up, filling their lungs for a vociferation such as never was heard before and never heard after. Joshua feels that the hour has come, and he cries out to his host, "Shout, for the Lord hath given you the city." All together the troops shout: "Down, Jericho! Down Jericho!" And the long line of solid masonry begins to quiver and to move and to rock. Stand from under! She falls! Crash go the walls and temples, the towers, the palaces, the air blackened with the dust. The huzza of the victorious Israelites and the groan of the conquered Canaanites commingle, and Joshua, standing there in the debris of the walls, hears a voice saying, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

The Savior's Deliverance.

Only one house spared. Who lives there? Some great king? No. Some woman distinguished for great kindly deeds? No. She had been conspicuous for her crimes. It is the house of Rahab. Why was her house spared? Because she had been a great sinner? No, but because she repented, demonstrating to all the ages that there is mercy for the chief of sinners. The red cord of divine injunction reaching from her window to the ground, so that when the people saw the red cord they knew it was the divine indication that they should not disturb the premises, making us think of the divine cord of a Savior's deliverance, the red cord of a Savior's kindness, the red cord of a Savior's mercy, the red cord of our rescue. Mercy for the chief of sinners. Put your trust in that God, and no damage shall befall you. When our world shall be more terribly surrounded than was Jericho, even by the trumpets of the judgment day and the hills and the mountains, the metal bones and ribs of nature shall break, they who have had Rahab's faith shall have Rahab's deliverance.

When wrapped in fire the realms of ether glow
And heaven's last thunder shakes the earth below
Thou, undismayed, shalt o'er the ruins smile
And light thy torch at nature's funeral pile.

But Joshua's troops may not halt here. The command is, "Forward, march!" There is the city of Ai. It must be taken. How shall it be taken? A scouting party comes back and says: Joshua, we can do that without you. It is going to be a very easy job. You must stay here while we go and capture it." They march with a small regiment in front of that city. The men of Ai look at them and give one yell, and the Israelites run like reindeer. The northern troops at Bull Run did not make such rapid time as these Israelites with the Canaanites after them. They never cut such a sorry figure as when they were on the retreat. You who go out in the battles of God with only half a force instead of your taking the men of Ai the men of Ai will take you. Look at the church of God on the retreat. The Bornesian cannibals ate up Munson, the missionary. "Fall back!" said a great many Christian people. "Fall back, O church of God! Borneo will never be taken. Do you not see the Bornesian cannibals have eaten up Munson, the missionary?" Tyndall delivers his lecture at the University of Glasgow, and a great many good people say: "Fall back, O church of God! Do you not see that Christian philosophy is going to be overcome by worldly philosophy? Fall back?" Geology plunges its crowbar into the mountains, and there are a great many people who say: "Scientific investigation is going to over throw the Mosaic account of the creation. Fall back!"

God's Soldiers Must Advance.

But friends of God never have had any right to fall back. Joshua falls on his face in chagrin. It is the only time you ever see the back of his head. He falls on his face and begins to whine, and he says, "O Lord God, wherefore hast thou at all brought this people over Jordan to deliver us into the hands of the Amorites, to destroy us? Would to God we had been content and dwelt on the other side of Jordan. For the Canaanites and all the inhabitants of the land shall hear of it and shall environ us round and cut off our name from the earth." I am very glad Joshua said that. Before it seemed as if he were a supernatural being and therefore could not be an example to us, but I find he is a man, he is only a man. Just as sometimes you find a man under severe opposition or in a bad state of physical health, or worn out with overwork, lying down and sighing about being defeated. I am encouraged when I hear this cry of Joshua as he lies in the dust. God comes and rouses him. How does he rouse him? By complimentary apostrophe? No. He says, "Get thee up. Wherefore liest thou upon thy face?" Joshua rises, and, I warrant you, with a mortified look. But his old courage comes back. The fact was that was not his battle. If he had been in it he would have gone on to victory. He gathers his troops around him and says: "Now, let us go up and capture the city of Ai. Let us go up right away." They march on. He puts the majority of the troops behind a ledge of rocks in the night, and then he sends comparatively small regiments up in front of the city. The men of Ai come out with a shout. The small regiments of Israelites in stratagem fall back, and fall back, and when all the men of Ai have left the city and are in pursuit of these scattered, or seemingly scattered, regiments, Joshua stands on a rock—I see his locks flying in the wind as he points his spear toward the doomed city, and that is the signal. The men rush out from behind the rocks and take the city, and it is put to the torch, and then these Israelites in the city march down, and the flying Israelites return, and between these two waves of Israelitish prowess the men of Ai are destroyed, and the Israelites gain the victory; and while I see the curling smoke of that destroyed city on the sky, and while I hear the huzza of the Israelites and the groan of the Canaanites, Joshua hears something louder than it all, ringing and echoing through his soul, "There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life."

No Place to Stop.

But this is no place for the host of Joshua to stop. "Forward, march!" cries Joshua to the troops. There is the city of Gibeon. It has put itself under the protection of Joshua. They send word: "There are five kings after us. They are going to destroy us. Send troops quick. Send us help right away." Joshua has a three day's march, more than double quick. On the morning of the third day he is before the enemy. There are two long lines of battle. The battle opens with great slaughter, but the Canaanites soon discover something. They say: "That is Joshua. That is the man who conquered the spring freshet and knocked down the stone walls of Jericho and destroyed the city of Ai. There is no use fighting." They sound a retreat, and as they begin to retreat Joshua and his host spring upon them like a panther, pursuing them over the rocks, while the catapults of the sky pour a volley of hailstones into the valley, and all the artillery of the heavens, with bullets of iron, pound the Canaanites against the ledges of Bethhoron. "Oh," says Joshua, "this is surely a victory!" "But do you not see the sun is going down? Those Amorites are going to get away after all, and then they will come up some other time and bother us, and perhaps destroy us. See, the sun is going down. Oh, for a longer day than has ever been seen in this climate!"

Look out when a good man makes the Lord his ally. Joshua raises his face, radiant with prayer, and looks at the descending sun over Gibeon and at the faint crescent of the moon, for you know the queen of the night sometimes will linger around the palaces of the day. Pointing one hand at the descending sun and the other at the faint crescent of the moon, in the name of that God who shaped the worlds and moves the worlds he cries: "Sun, stand thou still upon Gibeon, and thou, moon, in the valley of Ajalon!" They halted. Whether it was by refraction of the sun's rays or by the stopping of the whole planetary system I do not know and do not care. I leave it to the Christian Scientists and the infidel scientists to settle that question, while I tell you I have seen the same thing. "What?" say you. "Not the sun standing still?" Yes. The same miracle is performed nowadays. The wicked do not live out half their day, and their sun sets at noon.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL

LESSON VIII, NOV. 25— TITUS 15: 1-15.

Sober Living the Topic for World's Temperance Sunday—"We Should Live Soberly, Righteously and Godly in This Present World."

1. But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine.

2. That the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience. "Sober." "Temperate, abstaining from wine, either entirely or at least its immoderate use."—Thayer's Lexicon. "Grave." "In all propriety of demeanor." "Temperate." Curbing one's desires and impulses, self-controlled, temperate. A man is full of passions and impulses, of faculties and powers. The one question with him is whether these are a mob or an army, and who is the general, the controlling power. All sin is the breaking away of some of those forces from the right control of conscience, and reason, and God as the source of both. It is the mob rule of the internal forces that ruins men. The drunkard is one whose appetites have broken away from due control. The perfect man is one who is perfectly self-controlled; all his powers are subject to his will, submissive to God, and guided by reason and conscience.

4. "Sound in faith." Sound means healthful, wholesome, sound in health, without disease.

5. "(Sound) in charity." Love, the sum of all virtues.

6. "(Sound) in patience." Which requries great self-control over the spirit, as temperance, does over the body. These —faith, love, patience—"are recognized essentials of Christian character, but be careful that you have the real wholesome graces, without anything spurious or diseased."

3. "(Reverent) in behavior." In demeanor, implying "a certain dignity and decorum." The phrase finds full appropriation in Miss Havergal's lines:

"Keep my life, that it may be Consecrated, Lord, to thee.
Keep my feet, that they may be Swift and 'beautiful' for thee.

"Keep my lips, that they may be Filled with messages from thee.
Keep myself, that I may be Ever, only, all, for thee."

8. "Not false accusers." Slanderers, retailing all the bad they may hear about others; often false accusers even when telling the truth, because they do not relate also the virtues which accompany or modify the fault told.

9. "Not given to much wine." R. V., not "enslaved" to much wine, for wine enslaves its devotees. "Teachers of (that which is) good." By both precept and example. Their age had given them experience, which they should use to help their younger friends.

12 V. 6. "Be sober minded." A verb from the same root as temperate, in v. 2. Exercise self-control (a) to curb one's passions, (b) to think soberly of one's self, not to be conceited.—Thayer.

7. "A pattern (example, type, model) of good words." "In doctrine (teaching) showing uncorruptness." Without deterioration from falsehood, or error, or lower motive, or waning zeal; which produce in doctrine the same deadly effect which decay produces in fruit. ("Sincerity" is not in the best manuscripts. The Greek is from the same root as uncorruptness, above.)

15 V. 8. "Sound speech." Healthful, without disease or corruption. Speaking the truth in love with good sense both as to matter and manner.

9. "Obedient (well-pleasing," R. V.). The gospel had given spiritual freedom to the slaves, and a new consciousness of manhood and rights. But their best use of it was not to insist on their rights, of their own accord, what the law might enforce against their will. The opposite of "answering again," resisting. Obedience to authority, to law, to parents, to God, is a Christian virtue.

100. "Not purloining." "All tricks of trade, embezzlement, and dishonesty are covered by this word."—A. E. Humphreys, M. A. "Showing all good fidelity." Faithfulness in all relations, in thought and speech. "Adorn the doctrine." Make it appear as beautiful and attractive as it really is, as we frame a picture, or make the outside of our homes as beautiful as the home spirit within.

1. V. 11. "The grace of God." "Grace is well defined as love imparting itself and producing its own image and likeness."—Cambridge Bible. Grace is the loving kindness of God toward his sinful creatures, expressing his "good will to men," and his desire and willingness to forgive and save.

12. "Teaching us." "Rather, training, putting us under discipline, in order," "that," etc.—Cambridge Bible.

13. "Looking for that blessed hope." This hope was "the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus," when he shall come in his kingdom. For his kingdom shall come and all the world shall be his.

14. "Who gave himself for us." Thus showing his great love to us and also how great was the redemption he brought to us. Nothing can so show the dreadful evil of sin, and the glorious blessedness of being redeemed from all inquity.

Belgian Army Officers' Salaries.

The following were the salaries paid the officers of the Belgian expedition to China: Commander in chief, $5,000; major, $3,000; captain-commandant, $2,400; captain, $2,000; lieutenant, $1,400; second lieutenant, $1,200. The offers for transporting the expedition varied from 600,000 francs ($115,800) to 1,000,000 francs ($193,000). Lieut-Col. Bartels was chosen commander in chief, with Capt. Joostens, brother of the Belgian minister in China, and Lieut. Lecointe as aids-de-camp.—Harry Tuck Sherman in Chicago Record.

Material Help Least Valuable.

Men are helpful through the intellect and the affections. Other help I find a false appearance. If you affect to give me bread and fire, I perceive that I pay for it in full price, and at last it leaves me as it found me, neither better nor worse; but all mental and moral force is a positive good.—Representative Men.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, November 19, 1900.

Attorney General Remley disagrees with the people of Iowa on the biennial elections proposition. He says if the biennial elections amendment carries and the constitutional convention fails, and latest returns indicate that is the way it will stand, some sorry complications will result. Biennial elections, the attorney general says, demand that the term of state officers should be made four years. Under the Titus amendment it will be possible for a complete change of officers to be made at the state house and chaos would result. The attorney general also thinks the constitution of Iowa needs fixing. It was made forty-three years ago and the state has outgrown it. The law on corporations, he says, is very bad, and in many respects a change is desirable. He holds a convention would not be dangerous, as delegates are elected by the people and what they do must be ratified by them. An attempt would be made by the woman suffragists and prohibitionists to have the constitution amended to their liking, but it would be a straight fight made in the same way it has always been made before the legislature.

An action has been brought in the district court, presumably in the interest of the Mutual Telephone company, to oust the Iowa Telephone company from the streets, alleys and public places of the city of Des Moines. It is charged that the Iowa Telephone company is now maintaining poles, wires, cables and conduits through streets without color of right, that it has no franchise, and that it is enjoying privileges to which it has no right and is unlawfully carrying on its business. The title of the case is the state of Iowa, ex rel., C. E. Campbell and F. M. Hubbell vs. the Iowa Telephone company. Attorney McLennan, in whose name actions of this knd are generally brought, refused to bring the suit and this placed the plaintiffs in a position they desired. They represented the conditions to the court and an order was made forthwith, authorizing the commencement of the suit by Messrs. Hubbell and Campbell, both of whom are stockholders in the Mutual Telephone company and vitally interested in its success. The company will resist on the ground that the city council has repeatedly recognized its existence since the franchise expired, and also on the ground of vested rights, having more than $100,000 invested in its plants.

Steps toward most important changes in the National Guard organizations of the different states will be taken December 13, at a meeting of the Inter-state National Guard association at Washington. Adjutant General Byers will attend this meeting from Iowa and the adjutants general of nearly all the other states will be present, these officers being ex-officio members of the Interstate association. At this time the adjutants general will confer with General Miles, with Adjutant General Corbin, with many leading officers of the regular army and the navy and with members of congress for the purpose of promoting national legislation that promises to work sweeping changes in the national guard of the country and convert it into nothing less than a reserve force for the regular army.

After a personal inspection of every county and private institution in the state in which insane are kept, the board of control has adopted rules by which hospitals shall be governed in the future. While the new rules cannot be called radical, the board, having made an exhaustive study of the situation, has attempted to make some needed reforms. There are 1,200 insane patients in county institutions and several hundred more in private hospitals. In not more than ten of the county institutions were the insane found to be well cared for. The rules will go into effect at once, but managing officers are given until January 1 and boards of supervisors until February to make the required changes. Under the new rules paupers and insane patients will not be permitted to mingle and male and female patients will have to be cared for separately. Female attendants will have to be employed to care for patients of that sex and only men shall care for male patients. Night attendants will be required, and one attendant will be demanded for each twenty insane persons. The new rules are very explicit regarding care of the patients and sanitary conditions of the buildings. The best physicians only can be employed, and physicians will not be allowed to furnish their own drugs. Not less than two fire escapes will be required on each building. The board also demands that records of the institutions be kept. The supervision of county and private insane hospitals was put in the hands of the board of control by the Twenty-eighth general assembly because of the deplorable conditions in which many of them were known to be.

The monthly report of the state board of control shows that there is a credit balance in the support fund of $107,154, which is but $1,000 less than in November, 1899. This is regarded as a very creditable showing, in view of the notable rise in prices in the year that has just passed. The report also shows that there has been an increase of thirty-six in the number of convicts at the state prisons, due, of course, to cold weather and the reconvening of courts. There are now 730 convicts, 461 at Anamosa and 649 at Fort Madison.

G. W. KLUCKHOHN, KLEMME.

A Noted Knight Templar Owes His Health to Peruna

Colonel T. P. Moody, a prominent Knight Templar, is well known in every city in the United States west of Buffalo, N. Y., as a Jeweler's Auctioneer. In the city of Chicago as a prominent lodge man, being a member of the K. T.'s and also of the Masons. The cut shows Colonel Moody in the costume of the Oriental Consistory Masons, 32d degree.

In a recent letter from 5900 Michigan avenue, Chicago, Ill., Mr. Moody says the following:

"For over twenty-five years I suffered from catarrh, and for over ten years I suffered from catarrh of the stomach terribly.

"I have taken all kinds of medicines and have been treated by all kinds of doctors, as thousands of my acquaintances are aware in different parts of the United States, where I have traveled, but the relief was only temporary, until a little over a year ago I started to take Peruna, and at the present time I am better than I have been for twenty years.

"The soreness has left my stomach entirely and I am free from indigestion and dyspepsia and will say to all who are troubled with catarrh or stomach trouble of any kind, don't put it off and suffer, but begin to take Peruna right away, and keep it up until you are cured, as you surely will be if you persevere."

"My wife, as many in the southwest can say, was troubled with a bad cough and bronchial trouble, and doctors all over the country gave her up to die, as they could do nothing more for her. She began taking Peruna with the result that she is better now than she has been in years, and her cough has almost left her entirely. The soreness has left her lungs and she is as well as she ever was in her life, with thanks, as she says, to Peruna. Yours very truly, T. P. Moody.

Colonel T. P. Moody, of Chicago, had Catarrh Twenty-five Years and Was Cured by Peruna.

Catarrh in its various forms is rapidly becoming a general curse. An undoubted remedy has been discovered by Dr. Hartman. This remedy has been thoroughly tested during the past forty years. Prominent men have come to know of its virtues, and are making public utterances on the subject. To save the country we must save the people. To save the people we must protect them from disease. The disease that is at once the most prevalent and stubborn of cure is catarrh.

If one were to make a list of the different names that have been applied to catarrh in different locations and organs, the result would be astonishing. We have often published a partial list of these names, and the surprise caused by the first publication of it to all people, both professional and non-professional, was amusing. And yet we have never enumerated all of the diseases which are classed as catarrh. It must be confessed, however, to see even this partial list drawn up in battle array is rather appalling. If the reader desires to see this list, together with a short exposition of each one, send for our free catarrh book. Address The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

MY HALF SISTER

By ELTON HARRIS

CHAPTER VIII.—(Continued.)

"Look here, Mollie, will you—won't you? I love you awfully. I have just run over on the chance of seeing you, because I could not stay away any longer. And I hate to think of you here with these people. Won't you look at me? Do!"

A most persuasive voice was Reggie's; but Mollie's eyes were fixed on the point of her shoe, and she put her hands behind her when he attempted to take them.

"Give me time to think," she whispered in a subdued tone. "I can hardly believe that you are here. How did you find me?"

"Saw the Dubois in town, but they did not see me. Rode straight on and met the little kiddie, who brought me here. Told her that I wanted to speak to you very particularly alone; and she flew off and promised to keep watch for the return of the enemy," said Reggie briefly.

"Dear little Kittie!"

"Won't you say, 'Dear Reggie,' too, Mollie?" he suggested, eyeing her wistfully. "I have come all the way from Ireland to ask you." Then, as she flashed a quick, half-smiling glance at him, he added. "'She who hesitates is lost;' 'Silence gives consent.' How usefully these ancient copybook saying come in in one's old age, don't they."

"They certainly seem to," allowed Mollie hesitatingly.

And as there seemed no opposition offered to the arm Reggie had stolen round her, it stayed there, while, two not being able to sit with any comfort in an American cane chair, they repaired to the rustic seat, and were as happy and forgetful of the world as mortal lovers could be for the next half hour, as they sat in the sunshine, in the springtime of youth, hope, and love.

"Oh, Reggie—Madam Dubois!" exclaimed the girl at length. "She will never, never consent; she means me to marry Henri."

"Then we will pay Henri's country the compliment of taking French leave, my dear child," he returned gaily.

But she shook her head.

"I shall be of age in 18 months," she said shyly.

"Eighteen centuries! Why, I hate to leave you here now!"

"And I could not leave my poor little Kittie," she exclaimed, raising her eyes to his deprecatingly. "By then I hope she will be better, stronger. Oh, Reggie, couldn't you bargain with them to give me Kittie? It would be so cruel to leave her; you cannot think how loving, how true to me the little pet is!" And she poured into his ear all that she had overheard that hot evening at the window.

Reggie's face grew very pale as he listened, and he gave a low whistle of dismay; but whatever he thought he was too wise to make his sweetheart more uncomfortable than she already was. But she had to promise that on no account would she even listen to Henri, against whom Reggie's sentiments were far from peaceful, and that if matters became worse she would take refuge at the White house, whither his mother returned in a week's time. And then Kate came running back to announce her aunt's return.

"Oh, Reggie!" ejaculated Mollie, rising, and turning very pink.

"Sit down, child," he said calmly, dragging her back to his side, and taking Kate on his knee. "Let them come."

Kate pushed back her curls and regarded him with a frown. She was very fond of Reggie, but— He understood the look, read the dawning jealousy of any one coming between Mollie and herself, in those sharp hazel eyes, which had already discovered the truth; and as this tall, merry young officer's heart was as tender as a girl's towards those he cared for, he hastened to dissipate it.

"You are going to be my sister, kidling," he said gently.

"I know," she answered, with trembling lips. "You will take her away."

"But she tells me she cannot be happy without you, so we shall have to manage for you to come, too," he continued. "Now if you think that will be jolly, and we shall be the best brother and sister going, never jealous of each other, signify the same in the usual manner by a kiss." And he was more touched than he liked to show when the little girl threw her arms round his neck in a transport of relief, happily unconscious of the obstacles that might come in their way.

It was this group that madame, followed by her son, came in sight of, and great was her wrath. Nor was it in any way mollified when Mr. Anstruther advanced politely, and, after the usual greetings, informed her that Miss L'Estrange had promised to be his wife, and he trusted that he should have her consent; he was sure of that of the trustees, who were old friends of his father's. Madame was very suave at first, though Mollie knew the effort it must have cost her. She understood the firmly-shut mouth, the half-opened eyes; but, suave or not, she managed to convey plainly her decision. She not only could not sanction the engagement, but Miss L'Estrange must be considered quite free.

"I don't wish to be free," said Mollie bodly, over his shoulder. "I have given Mr. Anstruther my word, and will not break it."

"My sweet child, you are young, you do not know your own mind. Mr. Anstruther has taken advantage of finding you alone in my absence—"

"I naturally wished to find Miss L'Estrange alone," answered Reggie, haughtily.

"Oh, yes!" sneered Heri, who had been standing biting his nails gloomily, in direful dismay. "It is well to pay court to the heiress, but she has protection. I—"

He paused uneasily, yet Reggie had only stooped to pick up the riding whip which he had dropped, and then looked at him. But it was enough—he said no more, while madame, going a shade paler as she watched the two young men, hastened to close the interview.

When Reggie left things were only what he had expected. Madame absolutely refused her consent, and declined to see him at Chalfont again, so far losing her temper as to utter innuendoes and insults, which she could say with impunity, as a woman, but which would certainly have brought Reggie's whip across the shoulders of her adored son.

Reggie, for his part, courteously repeated that the engagement was a fact, and would be known all over Reverton; he was sorry for her decision, but it would alter nothing, only cause a little delay. Then, after a few words with Mollie, he reluctantly tore himself away, and she heard the gate clang behind him and watched him down the road until she was blinded by her tears.

CHAPTER IX.

"Mollie, it is so bad again!"

"Is it, my pet? What can I do for you?" said a sleepy voice, as Mollie roused herself from the slumber into which she had fallen by the side of the bed. "Kittie, it is striking 12 by the hall clock; I had no idea it was so late! I will go down to the drawing room and get the cloves; we left them there, and they may ease the pain a little."

Kate sat up in bed, looking as miserable as a child with teeth ache can look, and Mollie slipped off for the cloves, closing the door softly behind her.

It was Easter eve once more; not balmy and soft like last time, but cold and frosty, with a cruel east wind howling round the house, like the night two years ago when Leonard Barlowe had so mysteriously met his death.

The months that had passed had been full of trouble and anxiety to Mollie L'Estrange, and she looked paler and thinner; but the gray eyes were as fearless and sweeter than ever, for the trials had been bravely borne, and if she could not quite love her enemies, she had at least endeavored to follow that splendid precept and return good for evil.

Henri had been away for some weeks now; at first much to her relief, but latterly she had almost wished him back, for his mother's sake. Ever since his departure she had seemed consumed with restlessness, growing daily more morose and gloomy, and breaking into fits of passion for the merest trifle, while she watched Mollie with suspicious eyes, never allowing her to see the Anstruthers, through whom alone she could hear from Reggie, for both knew that the ordinary post would not be safe.

Stealing quietly down the dark stairs, Mollie gained the drawingroom, and, possessing herself of the bottle of cloves, was returning, when as she got to the door she saw a faint light at the top of the stairs.

Who was abroad in the house this night of all others, when no servant would stir alone, when they vowed that the ghost of Mr. Barlowe walked in his haunts and a light had been seen in his study?

Drawing back against the heavy plush curtains in the hall, she watched with beating heart as it came glimmering nearer, not exactly frightened, but with a curious awe and dread, a feeling that something was going to happen. A moment later, and madame—a lamp in her hand, a strange, dazed glitter in her great black eyes—swept noiselessly past her and went straight to the study.

The girl's first thought was to steal up stairs again, her next to creep across the dark hall after madame, and look in at the half-open door, and so, unthinkingly, she witnessed a sight that froze the blood in her veins and that she never forgot. For had she followed her first impulse and gone upstairs, neither she nor Kate would have been alive when daylight dawned that Easter day. On such slight things as this do great events hang!

Madame put the lamp on a table close by, and then stole with cat-like step to the back of the chair before the writing table, where the detectives said that Mr. Barlowe must have been sitting asleep at the time of the attack. Suddenly she raised her arms, holding them as if she had some heavy weapon in them, and went through the motion twice of bringing it down with terrific force on the back of some one's head.

It was awful to see her face as she stood there, wild, fierce, watchful, her features working convulsively as she eyed the empty chair as if it were occupied, her dark hair streaming down the light dressing gown she wore, her breath coming in heavy gasps. After a minute she began muttering to herself, and leaned over as if to examine what was in the chair; then she went to the table and turned over the papers in a strange, troubled manner, her eye ever returning to that empty chair.

"It is only what you deserve—what you deserve!" she muttered in a harsh, strained voice, addressing the chair. "You are a hard, bad man. I begged to you for mercy for my child—my son, my beloved—and you only laughed. What if he did forge your name? It was not for much. You are rolling in wealth—your wretched wife's money—and we are poor, and Henri is young and extravagant. But you shall not punish him. I helped you in the past, but that goes for nothing with such as you. You have only yourself to blame that I have taken the law into my own hands. I would die a thousand times rather than that you should expose my boy. Now you cannot say a word, and I take the proofs of his guilt and burn them!"

She went through the motions—phantomwise, yet strangely real—of taking papers and thrusting them into the grate, apparently holding them down with the weapon she thought she held, doing it all in a strange, dull calm, which her twitching face belied. For some minutes she crouched over the empty grate moaning and wringing her hands; then, when she evidently thought the papers and weapons destroyed, she rose, appeared to drag what was on the chair to the window—which she threw wide open—and, before Mollie could move, she came swiftly out of the room, and, lamp in hand, went towards the kitchen.

To describe the feelings of the horror-stricken girl watching her would be impossible. As one act after another of this terrible drama was played out before her she felt powerless to move, almost to think. All her senses were bound up in the effort to keep her trembling knees from giving way under her, for well she knew that to make the least sound might cost her her life! No need to ask again who killed Leonard Barlowe. She had been how it was done; she had seen everything—knew it was by his own sister's hand that the blow was struck.

Yet frightened as she was Mollie's courage did not desert her. She determined to see what took this wretched woman, whom she felt persuaded was mad, to the kitchen; so, with chattering teeth, she gathered her skirts together, and crept silently through the dark passages after her.

The lamplight guided her to the butler's pantry, and there stood madame, holding her hands under a tap which she had not turned on, and muttering incessantly to herself. As she wrung the imaginary water off them and rubbed them on her skirt, it occurred to Mollie, with a cold chill of fear, that she was action by action following out just what she must have done that terrible night—that it was she whom the servants took for a ghost, who had frightened Kate by brushing past her in the dark. Suddenly madame's glance fell upon some knives lying on a table, and a gleam like fire flashed into her eyes, a gleam that had neither reason nor sanity in it, only cunning and fierce exultation.

"Why not kill them both?" she muttered, standing still with a meditative look. "They are no use to Henri; the girl will not marry him; the child had better follow her father. Yes, yes; that will be best!"

NEARLY A BREAK DOWN.

Mrs. Olberg, a Prominent Minnesota Lady, Tells a Remarkable Story.

Albert Lea, Minn., Nov. 19.—(Special)—There are few men and women in this state or indeed in the whole northwest, who have not heard, or do not know personally Mrs. Henriette C. Olberg of this city.

Mrs. Olberg was Judge of Linen and Linen Fabrics at the World's Fair, at Chicago, and Superintendent of Flax Exhibit at the International Exposition at Omaha, Nebraska, in 1898. Mrs. Olberg is Secretary of the National Flax, Hemp and Ramie Association, and Assistant Editor of the "Distaff."

Her official duties are naturally very onerous, and involve a great deal of traveling and living away from home. She says:

"During the World's Fair in Chicago, my official duties so taxed my strength, that I thought I would have to give them up. Through the continual change of food and irregular meal hours, and a poor quality of water, I lost my appetite, and became wakeful and nervous in the extreme. My Kidneys refused to perform their usual duties. One of my assistants advised me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and sent for a box. I am pleased to say that I derived immediate and permanent benefit. I used three boxes, and feel ten years younger.

"I have great confidence in the efficacy of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and am always glad to speak a good word in their favor.

"Dodd's Kidney Pills are weak women's best friend."

PRINCE TUAN PUNISHED

Degraded and Condemned to Life Imprisonment.

Washington, Nov. 17.—Minister Wu received from Director General Sheng a foreign cablegram, which he communicated to Secretary Hay yesterday:

"An imperial decree of November 13 deprives Prince Tuan and Prince Chwang of their rank and orders them imprisoned for life; Prince Yih and Secondary Prince Ying Lien imprisoned; Secondary Prince Lien to be deprived of his rank; Duke Lan and Ying Nien to be degraded in rank; Kang Yi, being dead, no penalty can be imposed upon him; Chao Shu Chiao is to be degraded, but retained in office; Yu Hsien to be led to the farthest boundary."

The Chinese officials mentioned in the decree are among the highest in China and comprise most, if not all, of those against whom the powers demanded vigorous punishment.

Prince Tuan stands at the head of the anti-foreign and Boxer movement. Previous edicts have degraded him and taken away his office and servants, but this judgment of life imprisonment is the most severe thus far given to any of the Chinese leaders responsible for the uprising.

From a Chinese standpoint, it is an extreme penalty to a prince of royal blood, but it remains to be seen whether the powers will regard it as adequate to Prince Tuan's terrible offense.

The others mentioned were Prince Tuan's active associates, and two of them were specially mentioned for punishment, along with Prince Tuan, in Secretary of State Hay's note of October 3, advising the Chinese government that this country would expect these officials to receive their just deserts, regardless of rank. Kang Yi is one of the high officials who died suddenly after the demands for punishment had been made by the powers, probably by suicide. Yu Hsien is another who was thought to have committed suicide, but the edict indicates that he is still alive.

As the ministers at Peking also have been considering the question of punishments, it will develope speedily when they lay their demands before the imperial Chinese envoys, whether the edict of the Chinese emperor gives punishments which are regarded as adequate to fit the enormity of the crimes.

ARMOR PLATE CONTRACT.

Agreement With the Carnegie and Bethlehem Companies.

Washington, Nov. 16.—Secretary John D. Long has announced the conclusion of the long controversy over the armor plate for naval vessels, and an agreement with the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies for Krupp armor at $420 a ton, with the possible addition of royalty fees, making the maximum price $455.52 a ton. The amount of armor involved is the largest ever placed at one time by the government, and is said to be equal to all the armor purchased by this government up to 1896. It covers the armor for seventeen ships now in the various stages of construction, including eight battleships, six armored cruisers and three protected cruisers. The following official statement has been given out concerning the agreement:

The navy department has come to an agreement with the Carnegie and Bethlehem companies for Krupp armor of the first class, amounting to 24,950 tons, for $420 a ton. The Krupp process involves the Harvey patent, the validity of which is now under consideration by the courts, and it is further agreed that the government will assume in addition any liability for the Krupp process, not exceeding £5, or $24.32, a ton for Krupp royalty, and not exceeding the United States license fee of $11.20 for Harvey royalty. The maximum price to the government is, therefore, $455.52 per ton, subject to diminution in case of any reduction in the foregoing royalties. The bid of these companies for this class of armor was $490, and the price originally asked $545.

CZAR EVENS THINGS UP.

His Present Illness Shows His Real Weight, Internationally.

London, Nov. 16.—The serious apprehension with which the announcement was made of the fact that the czar was suffering from typhoid fever filled Europe, emphasizes how much the peace of the world is believed to be dependent on him. But for the statement contained in the official bulletin that his malady was taking a thordoughly favorable course, the news of his illness would have created nothing less than consternation. It is generally felt at the present critical state of international affairs that even the temporary weakening of the influence of so favorable a factor in the maintenance of the world's peace, justifies grave anxiety, especially as the czar is regarded in Europe as a kind of counterpoise to Emperor William. Public anxiety will, therefore, remain strained until the none too robust monarch recovers. In political circles any other issue of his majesty's malady is regarded as nightmare. The London newspapers comment on the czar's illness with peculiar sympathy. The Times remarks it has always been believed in England that the czar "reciprocated national sentiment toward the cherished real regard and reverence for our beloved queen."

Governor Beckham will be inaugurated December 11.

Pen Picture for Women.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels bearing down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

FADED IN HER YOUTH

Pretty faces and graceful forms of young women! Why is it they are so soon replaced by plainness and lankness? It is because the young girl just entering into womanhood does not know how to take care of herself and has no one competent to instruct her. It is not necessary that there should be anything weakening or wearying about the obligations of a female organism. Parents of young girls should inform themselves and prevent their dear ones from making costly errors.

That young woman has a just cause of complaint, who is permitted to believe that great periodic suffering is to be expected, that severe, mysterious pains and aches are part of her natural experience as a woman. These things are making constant war on her health, her disposition and her beauty. It is a wanton sacrifice, absolutely unnecessary and cruel. It is more—it is criminal.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA

for the Blood and Nerves

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, is the right medicine for every young girl who is just entering the first stage of womanhood. It prepares the system in every way to act normally. It enriches the blood supply, and keeps the nerves calm and steady. Fortified with this great medicine, all the womanly duties may be undertaken and experienced without the slightest jeopardy to health. It preserves the gifts of nature and assists their development into glowing, healthful beauty.

MRS. MARY FRANCES LYTLE, of 2 Hunter Alley, Rochester, N. Y., says:

"I was very pale and delicate—had no color. I took Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and now I am well and strong, my face is plump, and cheeks red, and my complexion pure."

MRS. WILLIAM BARTELS, 239 East 87th St., New York City, says:

"Dr. Greene's Nervura made a wonderful improvement in my health, and that dark, sallow look left my face. My friends hardly know me. I have gained flesh and am like a different person."

The nervousness in women which invariably comes with pain is of itself certain to stop the development of beauty in face and figure. Excited nerves make sharp lines and hasty speech. The beautiful curves which make women so attractive are not possible when the female organism is out of order, as it surely is when discomfort and pain are always or even periodically present. It is only necessary to look in the faces of young women everywhere to see that this must be so. Else why are they so pale and thin?

GET FREE ADVICE FROM DR. GREENE

Real beauty is rare. It belongs to perfect health. It is possible to every woman who takes the matter in hand intelligently. Get advice from Dr. Greene, the great specialist in these matters. He will tell you why all this is so, and show you how to avoid the stumbling blocks that bar woman's way to happiness. You may consult Dr. Greene without cost by calling or writing to him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. Don't throw away your beauty. Write to Dr. Greene to-day.

FROM HUMBLE I[OWA]

THE NEW SPEAKER OF T[HE] HOUSE.

The Life Story of David Brenner Henderson, of Iowa—How Accident Made Him an American—His Early Life on the Farm.

(Dubuque Letter.)

Between congressional sessions, Col. David Brenner Henderson, now virtually speaker-elect of the house of representatives, lives at Dubuque. Here the colonel with Mrs. Henderson and a young unmarried daughter, stay at the city's chief hotel. It has been a genuine Mecca for pilgrims ever since the decision was made in caucus last summer that the colonel should have the important place vacated by the resignation of Thomas Brackett Reed.

Col. Henderson's reputation among his neighbors is very like his reputation in the house of representatives. He is spoken of as a well-nigh tireless worker, sympathetic and cordial, a friend to a friend and a foe to a foe. Among the people at large there is some suspicion that should he fail in any degree in his new position, it will be because he is less firm than his predecessor, but in Dubuque, where his every action has been closely watched for more than a century's third part, there is no such feeling. As speaker Col. Henderson will display the same open frankness and the same never failing bluff courtesy that have always characterized him, but should it be called for, he will be like a rock for steadfastness.

Col. Henderson has two work rooms in Dubuque. His office is in a big building which is almost wholly occupied by lawyers and railroad officials and insurance men, on the main street. His "den" is in the Henderson suite at the hotel. He generally spends the day from 9 in the morning to 5 at night at the office. Unless a social engagement prevents, he spends the evening in the den. At the office he has his congressional secretary to help him; when working in the den Mrs. Henderson who is devoted to her husband, and has made almost as close a study of public affairs as he, deligths to assist him.

Col. Henderson is almost an ideal campaigner. There is no lack of intellectuality in what may be termed his stump speeches, yet their most notable characteristics are heartiness, obvious personal belief in what he himself says, and enthusiasm. His habit of livening up the proceedings occasionally by asking the audience to join him in singing the "Star-Spangled Banner," "Marching Through Georgia' or some other patriotic song, has long been famous. On such occasions he leads the singing himself in a strong and really musical voice, while everybody joins in. Many a time the colonel's singing has been highly effective in rousing the audience, as well as himself, and doubtless he will continue to sing at his campaign meetings as long as he makes campaign speeches.

Personally Col. Henderson is a jolly good fellow. He is taller and heavier than the average. His shoulders are broad, his chest is deep, and he will be an impressive figure at the speaker's desk. He walks by the aid of a cane with a limp due to the loss of the left leg at the knee. He was shot at the battle of Corinth. His hand is a big one, and his grasp on greeting a friend is a real grip. His conversational voice is pleasant, and his talk shows wide and varied information.

Yet chance has played a most important part in the new speaker's life. Had not Thomas Henderson, his father, been more trustful over half a century ago than most men are, David Brenner Henderson might never have been an American citizen at all. The course of his whole career, since early childhood, was changed by one act of confidence on the elder Henderson's part.

For generations the Hendersons dwelt in Old Deer, a village attached to the Earl of Buchan's estate in Aberdeenshire, Scotland. As the colonel is now, so was his father before him, fond of singing, and possessed of a voice which made him a general favorite. The old Earl of Buchan, a bachelor, who received much company and lived high, was one of those who took pleasure in Henderson's voice, and often had him at the castle for the diversion of his guests. On one occasion when Henderson's efforts had been particularly pleasing, the earl told him he might occupy a good-sized strip of land at the head of Old Deer's main street, promising that the and should remain rent free to three generations of his descendants. Accordingly Henderson built a row of six small stone houses, investing virtually all his savings in their erection, and become a landlord and a man of substance among his neighbors. David Brenner Henderson, the youngest of

The people of Iowa have long watched the weather predictions of Rev. Irl. R. Hicks of St. Louis with a great deal of interest. On the 10th, 11th, and 12th, falling barometer and reaction of storm conditions. On 12th a decided change to warmer will develop in the west and snow and rain storms will move eastward to 19th. Another decided dash of early winter will follow and last until 21st. New moon this month falls on the 22nd, the central day of the reactionary storm period. Moon is at its extreme south point on the 23d, hence northerly gales and cold will follow storms at this time. The last storm period for November from the 25th to the 30th. Storms of rain, wind and snow will pass eastward over the country on the 27th to 30th and a cold wave in sight in the northwest as the month goes out.

Be Friendly.

Always speak to a stranger when you meet him on our streets. If there is anything advertises a town it is a friendly, cordial class of citizens and we can speak from experience that it is anything but pleasant to stop in a town where people pass one by with a vacant stare perhaps without even the stare, and we were always thoroughly miserable until we could catch the first train out of town. If people were more friendly to strangers there would be fewer drunks and suicides, for there is nothing that will make a man more inclined to such rash act than to sit around in a strange place and have nothing to do but kill time, think of his past meaness, and hate himself and all mankind.—Bradgate Bee.

Some of our exchanges are pokin considerable fun at the grammer and original manner of spelling of the editor of the Klemme TIMES. Charle does exhibit a remarkable freedon from the rules and usages that hedge about writes of correct English, but there is one thing that he ought t have credit for. He is getting out a newsier paper than any of his predecessors did, and better than many o his critics. The young editor of the TIMES has had a great deal to conten with, and he is doing remarkably well If he continues to improve as he has in the past, and remembers that modesty is a virtue and big head a defect. he will yet take a high place among country editors.—Wright County Democrat.

The deuce! Yeou don't say!

Spreads Like Wildfire.

When things are "the best" they become "the best selling." Abraham Hare. a leading druggest, of Beleville. O.' writes. "Electric Bitters are the best selling bitters I have handled in 20 years." You know why? Most diseases begin in disorders of stomach. liver, kidneys, bowels, blood and nerves. Electric Bitters tones up the stomach, regulates liver, kidneys and bowels, purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, hence cures multitudes of maladies. It builds up the entire system. Puts new life and vigor into any weak, sickley, run down man or woman. Price 50 cents. Sold by J. L. Harr druggist.

That was a very neat peace of sarcasm which Bro. Ell of the Klemme TIMES perpetrated on the sapient editor of the "clean (?) etc." when he copied a lot of little locals from the Herald, disributing them through his columns and in each case was very particular to give credit for the same. As the Herald is notorious for it's pirating (and we mean by pirating copy matter from contemporaries without giving proper credit) we think the rebuke in this instance well merited and very neatly made. --Hancock County Signal.

"Proper credit" is our motto, and the motto explains our actions toward the Herald. No harm done nor apologies to offer.

Our editor and the Crystal Lake Reflector man—James Forrest are conducting a school in grammar. Now if they would give us something easy —something that lies within the comprehension of ornianry mortals we would undoubtedly be immensely edified—Klemme department in Hancock Department.

T-h-a-n-k-s-! That shows us that Bro. Bracket cannot 'hold his peace." He wrote that item and is responsible for the same, however. we have noticed that he is in the habit of breaking out in a new place about every so often—weekly for instance — and we will forgive him this time. To tell the truth, Doctor, we utterly despise and abhor the idea of 'eternal contention' among neighbors!

What Next?

The advertising question has been presented to the coutry newspaper in a new light.

Publishers of papers in small towns may be roughly divided into two classes; those who refuse to accept advertising from out-of-town firms. and those who accept all paying business that is offered to them. Those of one class claim that a newspaper is published for the benefit of its home town and has no right to advertise the trade advantages of neighboring towns or cities, even if paid for doing so; the others hold that too often the business men in a small town do not give the home paper the support it deserves, and that the publisher is justified in selling his wares—advertising space—wherever he can find a buyer.

The problem has assumed a new phase recently, and one that appears to deprive the publisher of the right to accept or reject advertisements, at his pleasure.

The editor of the Rockwell City Advocate recieved an order for advertising at regular rates from a Des Moines mail order house, and turned the order down. He at once recieved a second letter, calling attention to a clause in the postal laws relating to the admission of papers to the mails as second class matter, which requires the admission of all unobjectionable advertising matter to the columns of a paper, at its regular rates. After a careful investigation of the matter the Advocate editor accepted the advertising.

The sober judgment of a humorist may sometimes be more impressive than the philosophy of an ethical teacher, as when Mark Twain remarks that "Honor is a harder master than the law. It cannot compromise for less than one hundred cents on the dollar, and its debts never outlaw."

Until a few days ago Brown county, Indiana, had neither railway, telegraph nor telephone facilities anywhere within its borders. It is still minus the two first mentioned necessities of modern life, but a telephone line has invaded Nashville, coming from Columbus, in an adjoining county.

Could there be a finer tribute to the American soldier than the following words of an English observer in China? He says that they "have distinguished themselves not only in the face of the enemy, but equally so against the temptations that exist in a city like Pekin under existing conditions."

The newest thing in the slot machine line is a machine that charges the storage batteries of automobiles. Whaleback steamers are now being successfully used on the Mississippi river. The boats are arranged with water tight compartments so that by pumping water into or out of either end, the craft can be trimmed as desired. One boat was run full on a sand bar to illustrate the working of the scheme, and by the use of her pumps and compartments got off in fifteen minutes.

The speed trial of the "Wisconsin" suggests that if international races between battle-ships were as readily arranged as those events in which yachts take part, the United States would win a good many prizes. Yet it is safe to assert that if they ever meet a foreign squadron in serious encounter, these splendid new ships of ours will not undertake to prove their superiority by running away.

The longest electric railway in the world is to be built in Montana. The proposed line is from Billings to Great Falls, some 200 miles, and the plan is to operate it entirely by electric power, which is to be supplied from generating stations on the Missouri and Yellowstone rivers. The road would have a considerable traffic in coal, ores and other heavy freights and would be the first line with such traffic to be worked by electricity.

The League against Seasickness is a new French organization which publishes a serious periodical, the Journal du Mal de Mer, largely composed of infallible prescriptions against seasickness. Everybody knows such recipes. People who do not go to sea find them very effective, and as a rule they are entertaining. But the French journal ought also to print some fiction with a less transparent plot and a more agreeable climax.

Thus far this season 1,000 deer have been taken to Bangor, Me., from the hunting regions north of the city. Nearly all of them were owned by hunters from other states, who have taken them home. The number of dead moose which have passed through Bangor is 56, or within six of last year's record for the corresponding period. The deer figures show a falling off of 251 from those of last season. This is accounted for by the dry weather of the first two weeks of the season, and by the fact that many deer perished in the deep snows of last winter. There is plenty of deer in the woods, however, and it is likely that the total kill for the season will be well up to that of 1899.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

AMENDMENT CONTEST ON.

The Sioux County Officers Will Test Titus Law.

Sioux City, Nov. 22.—The incumbent county officers of Sioux county have furnished very substantial evidence that the Titus amendment tangle is not to be unsnarled without trouble. Contest papers have been filed with the clerk of the district court at Orange City by P. D. Vanosterhaut, democrat, county attorney; Harry Melrose, republican, county clerk, and B. F. Jones, republican, county auditor. These men propose to hold their offices against the claims of Attorney-elect A. Tepaska, Clerk-elect Brewer and Auditor-elect Jonggewaard on the ground that the amendment must be accepted just as it—reads. As a test case this will be watched with intense interest through the state.

AFTER A DOG, SHOOTS HIMSELF.

Police Officer at Ottumwa Carelessly Handles a Gun.

Ottumwa, Nov. 23.—While attempting to shoot a dog Desk Sergeant J. L. Kent accidentally shot himself in the right leg. After being absent for some time a searching party was organized, and after a short hunt found Officer Kent lying insensible along the sidewalk, having fainted from the loss of blood. He was conveyed to the police station and physicians summoned, and after making a close examination the ball was located about six inches above the knee. Up to the present Kent has not regained consciousness and is now in a critical condition.

FELL AMONG THIEVES.

German Riding in a Box Car Held Up for $2.65 and Left Unconscious.

Oskaloosa, Nov. 24.—Two negroes held up a German giving his name as John Lendramer in a box-car on the Iowa Central tracks here. The car pulled in about 5:30 p. m. from the north, when the negroes assaulted a German who was riding in the same car with them, beating their way to Illinois. Two dollars and sixty-five cents and a silver watch were taken by the hold-ups and their victim was left senseless. The German regained consciousness later and reported his loss to the police, who arrested the negroes and recovered the stolen property.

Iowa's Famous Daily Dollar Daily Takes a Progressive Step.

Des Moines, Nov. 26.—The Des Monies Daily News has made arrangements for the full leased wire service of the Associated Press, vastly improving its market reports and other telegraphic news. The subscription price, however, remains $1 a year, 75 cents for six months, 50 cents for three months—the lowest price of any daily in the world.

Hedrick Badly Scorched.

Ottumwa, Nov. 24.—Hedrick was visited by a disastrous fire yesteday which wiped out store buildings and contents to the value of nearly $30,000. The insurance is estimated to have amounted to about one-third of this figure.

The fire originated from a gasoline stove explosion in the Charles Wilson restaurant. The flames spread very quickly, and it was three or four hours before the hand fire department which the city of Hedrick possesses could get them under control. Ottumwa was called upon for help, but on account of there being no engine kept here it was impossible to give assistance.

Tramp Convicted of Murder.

Marshalltown, Nov. 24.—John Gray who with Pat Dunn was indicted for the murder of Joseph Williams, a colored drayman, in the outskirts of this city last August, was found guilty of manslaughter by a jury in the district court. Gray and Dunn, both being strangers here, were among a gang of tramps who were drinking from a keg of beer when Williams came along. A dispute arose between the colored man and the tramps, during which one of the latter, Gray, as is alleged, pulled a revolver and fired three shots at Williams who at that time was running away. One shot proved fatal, Williams living only a few minutes.

Rapist Heavily Sentenced.

Waverly, Nov. 23.—Roscoe Sewell of Shell Rock, 19 years of age, was sentenced by Judge Clifford Smith to eight years in the penitentiary at Anamosa for the crime of rape. The trial has been of more than passing interest in this community, because of the victim of the crime being an inmate of the Orphans' Home of the Lutheran church, and only 15 years of age. Attorney McIntire of Shell Rock presented a petition of citizens of Shell Rock asking the leniency of the court as to length of sentence.

Big Damage Suit.

Des Moines, Nov. 25.—Mrytle Haywood has commenced suit against the Rock Island railroad for $25,000 damages on account of personal injuries alleged to have been sustained through the negligence of the employes of the company on November 24, 1898, at a place known as the Six Mile Place, between Burlington and Sperry.

Mangled Under the Cars.

Creston, Nov. 25.—Valentine Kiebasia, aged 40, was killed while attempting to board a freight train in the Burlington yards. His lower limbs were fearfully mangled. Kiebasia's relatives live in Austria.

MOB WANTED HIS LIFE.

Guardsmen Called to Albia to Protect a Negro.

Ottumwa, Nov. 24.—A detail of Company G, Iowa National Guards, was called to Albia yesterday to assist in preventing the lynching of Alva Booker, a negro charged with committing a rape on the person of Mrs. Sarah Hovel. The crime took place the night of October 30 and since that time the negro has been confined in the penitentiary at Fort Madison, having been taken there by Sheriff Donor, of Monroe county, for safe keeping. Yesterday he was taken to Albia for his preliminary hearing, having been kept in the Mt. Pleasant jail over night.

At the time the crime was commited an attempt was made at lynching, so infuriated were the Albia people on account of the heinousness of the negro's alleged acts.

By merest strategy the officers saved the fellow's life. While he has been at Ft. Madison the sentiment of revenge continued to increase in Albia, and notwithstanding rumors that the hearing would not take place, the revenge loving people of that place took steps to have the life of the negro, in case he should be taken there.

The presence of the Ottumwa bluecoats, with their bayonetted guns, had the effect of keeping the mob of Albians at a respectable distance. The soldiers surrounded the prisoner on his march from the Albia depot to the court house and they stood guard about the chair which he occupied during the few minutes of the court proceedings. The crowd was nervous and frequently there were cries of "Hang him!" "Lynch the nigger brute!" "String him up!" etc. The sheriff expostulated and his wards, with the presence of the soldiers, were effective in preventing a furious outbreak.

It took but a few minutes for the defendant's attorney to secure a change of venue to Wapello county. The negro was marched in a hollow square to the Albia depot, where he was placed on a train and brought here.

ULTIMATUM TO SALOONS.

They Must Obey the Law in Sioux City or be Closed.

Sioux City, Nov. 26.—An ultimatum has been issued to the saloons of Sioux City that after December 1 next they must comply with every provision of the Martin mulct law. This proclamation went forth from the Anti-saloon league which has taken upon itself the enforcement of the law in Woodbury county. Its officers say that if December 1 finds any saloon violating the law with reference to screens, decorations, opening and closing or in any other particular they will close it up by injunction. They set an example of what they expect to do in the closing of the Kennedy saloon—the largest in the city. They brought injunction proceedings against this place and won out. It is the only one in town that closes at 10 o'clock and otherwise obeys the law. Trouble may result from this attempted enforcement. Between the harassing of blackmailing lawyers and the league, the saloon-keepers are getting desperate.

DIOCESE IS TO BE DIVIDED.

New Catholic See to be Established at Sioux City.

Dubuque, Nov. 23.—It is authoritatively announced that Archbishop Keans has received a papal encyclical ordering a division of the Dubuque diocese, with a new see at Sioux City. The bishop's council and suffragin bishops will meet here next week to decide upon candidates. It is stated Bishop Meehan of Cheyenne and Father Heer of Dyersville are the leading candidates. The apportionment of the new see is not yet decided, but the present diocese will probably be equally divided, putting Fort Dodge, Sioux City's rival for the see, into the new diocese.

HOOT GETS TEN YEARS.

Sentenced for an Attempt to Dynamite His Wife.

Waterloo, Nov. 26.—Judge Blair Saturday sentenced Jerome W. Hoot, convicted of attempting to dynamite his wife, to ten years in the penitentiary. When sentenced Hoot addressed the court as follows:

"I have tried to live a life which will prove a benefit to my fellow men. In this case I wish to say I am innocent, but a dark cloud of circumstances have been gathered about me. I bear no resentment to the court, the prosecuting attorneys or the jury which convicted me. I believe all have done only what they thought to be their duty."

Attorneys Mullan and Picket will appeal the case to the supreme court

Engineer Accidentally Shot.

Clinton, Nov. 25.—Charles Combs, an engineer on the Q., went hunting northwest of this city alone. At noon his gun was in some manner accidentally discharged, the whole load entering his left arm just below the shoulder. He was brought to his home and his injuries were found to be so serious that it was deemed necessary to amputate his arm.

Water Standpipe Collapses.

Cedar Falls, Nov. 23.—The standpipe of the city water works, which has stood in the central part of the city for fifteen years, fell to the ground, a distance of 100 feet. The tank held 100,000 gallons and was full at the time of the collapse. The loss wil reach $10,000.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, November 26, 1900.

Smallpox is very prevalent in Iowa this winter. At least a dozen cases from various parts of the state have been reported to the state board of health, and there is every indication that there will be as much of an epidemic in this direction as last year. With one or two exceptions there is but one case in a community, and the disease has only manifested itself in a very light form. The last report received came in this morning from Hocking, Monroe county The family had recently moved in from the state of Washington, evidently bringing the disease germs with them Many of the cases smallpox was prevalent last winter, largely in the mining communities.

The plan of action in the Titus amendment matter seems to be very clearly outlined, and the plan which is now being discussed is the one which will afford the most speedy relief. It is the enjoining of the governor from issuing certificates of election of the different state officers elected at the last general election. This will bring the matter squarely before the supreme court at the December term, and an opinion can thus be had before the first of the year, and rendering any delay unnecessary. The other plan suggested was to have the supreme court rule on a motion as to whether General Remley or Senator Mullan should be recognized as the attorney general. No cause for action would be had in this case until after the 7th of January, however, hence the plan of enjoining is much more practicable.

Judge McPherson has dissolved the restraining order issued Nov. 9 against the Tri-City Labor congress. Judge McPherson declared he had issued the restraining order under a misapprehension of the facts. He held in dismissing the case that the court had no jurisdiction. This is the case known as the "government by injunction" case. It was the outgrowth of a strike of the clerks employed by plaintiffs, who are clothing merchants, because of their refusal to accede to the demands of the Retail Clerks' union. After the strike the trades' organizations paraded the streets of the three cities and displayed banners urging a boycott of the firm, attacked it through their union publication and delegated union men to distribute cards in front of he firm's place of business, calling attention to the boycott. The firm secured a restraining order from the United States court, prohibiting then from doing all these things.

City Assessor French has notified every cigarette dealer in the city that they must appear at the office of the county treasurer at once and pay the quarterly assessment mulct tax amounting to $75 each. This is done consequent to the United States supreme court decision a few days ago invalidating the original package law which went into effect three years ago. It is believed that dealers are not only liable for the quarterly assessment but can be held for the mulct tax dating from the time the original package law was sustained by the federal court at Cedar Rapids three years ago. Since that time Iowa has collected no tax from cigarette dealers who adhered to the original package, assessments being made against only those who did not do so.

Governor Shaw and Attorney General Remley both incline to the opinion that the general assembly can meet in regular session in 1902 and again in 1903. Able lawyers of the state are divided upon this question many holding that under the Titus amendment there would be no regular session until 1903 and a special session would have to be called in 1902 to provide for the state appropriations which expire at various times during that year. The Titus amendment does say that the general assemoly shall meet in regular session in 1903 and biennially thereafter. The constitution of the state provides, however, that the legislature convene bienniaily and that would bring the next regular session in 1902. The attorney-general, while he is not disposed to go on record on the question, yet expresses himself strongly of the opinion that the Titus amendment does not affect the regular session in 1902, but that it does amend the constitution in such a way as to provide for another regular session in 1903 and biennially thereafter. Governor Shaw says the question of the effect of the Titus amendment on the meeting of the general assembly was discussed at length by the lawyers who were members of the legislature and they were a unit in believing it provided for a meeting of the general assembly in 1902 and for another in 1903. There was some talk of making appropriations to provide for the state until 1903 and have no session in 1902, but it was finally decided to make the appropriaton to continue only until 1902 and not interfere with the regular meeting of the assembly in that year. The attorney general says that if when the time comes a difference of opinion still exists the governor can, in order to assure safety for all concerned, issue a proclamation for a special session in 1902 to provide for state appropriations.

When it comes to board, every man should expect to plank down.

The vicar of Wenbley, England, objects to the word "died" on tombstones. He says that it is a denial of the Christian belief in immortality, and insists on the substitution of such phrases as "entered into rest," "passed away," or "departed this life." One irreverent wag suggested "passed in his checks" as a substitute.

A very popular Israelite died in the Tenth ward of New York city last week, and a number of mourners followed his remains on foot to the Grand street ferry, intending to cross to Brooklyn and ride to the cemetery in the trolley cars. The gate keeper found seven thrifty gentlemen in the curtained hearse, serenely seated on the coffin, smoking cigarettes. They had adopted this means to save their ferrage.

A new needle, which must be a delight to housewives, has been invented in Germany. It has a prolongation behind the eye of smaller diameter than the bored part of the needle, with grooves in it to receive the thread. The object of it is to facilitate the passing of the needle through the holes in buttons, when sewing them on. The thread lies in the grooves, and hence the needle passes much more easily and rapidly.

A LIFE SAVED.

A Druggist's Timely and Straight-Forward Advice Saves the Life of a Prominent Citizen.

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 26.—(Special)—Among the Catholic Foresters in this city, none is better known or more universally esteemed, than Mr. S. P. Rush, Conductor (President) of Holy Name Court, Number 26.

His many friends, inside the Order and outside of its ranks, were, therefore, much startled to learn that his life was in danger, he having Bright's Disease, that most terrible and fatal disease.

Mr. Rush, however, made a grand struggle for his life, taking prescriptions, and pills and powders, until his stomach refused food. At last, his local druggist, guided by the numerous inquiries being made at his store for Dodd's Kidney Pills, advised Mr. Rush to buy and try some. This he did, and to his delight he was restored to health and strength.

Mr. Rush says that after commencing the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills, he felt much better, but it took two months to effect a cure.

"I took nothing else but Dodd's Kidney Pills during that time, so I know that I owe life and health to them."

What this wonderful remedy has done for Mr. Rush, it will certainly do for anyone. It is the only remedy that has never failed to cure Bright's Disease.

Mr. Rush is just now receiving the congratulations of his friends, but always finds time to say a good word for the Medicine that saved his life.

A woman with a bad temper is seldom the rage.

"Oh! Dear I'm so Tired."

The ordinary every-day life of most of our women is a ceaseless treadmill of work.

How much harder the daily tasks become when some derangement of the female organs makes every movement painful and keeps the nervous system all unstrung!

One day she is wretched and utterly miserable; in a day or two she is better and laughs at her fears, thinking there is nothing much the matter after all; but before night the deadly backache reappears, the limbs tremble, the lips twitch—it seems as though all the imps of Satan were clutching her vitals; she goes to pieces and is flat on her back.

No woman ought to arrive at this terrible state of misery, because these symptoms are a sure forerunner of womb troubles. She must remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is almost an infallible cure for all female ills, such as irregularity of periods, which cause weak stomach, sick headache, etc., displacements and inflammation of the womb, or any of the multitudes of illnesses which beset the female organism.

Mrs. Gooden wrote to Mrs. Pinkham when she was in great trouble. Her letter tells the result.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I am very grateful to you for your kindness and the interest you have taken in me, and truly believe that your medicines and advice are worth more to a woman than all the doctors in the world. My troubles began with inflammation and hemorrhages from the kidneys, then inflammation, congestion and falling of the womb, and inflammation of the ovaries. I underwent local treatment every day for some time; then, after nearly two months, the doctor gave me permission to go back to work. I went back, but in less than a week was compelled to give up and go to bed. On breaking down the second time, I decided to let doctors and medicines alone and try your remedies. Before the first bottle was gone I felt the effects of it. Three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and a package of Sanative Wash did me more good than all the doctors' treatments and medicine. I have gained twelve pounds during the last two months and am better in every way. Thanking you for your kind advice and attention, I remain. Yours gratefully,

"MRS. E. J. GOODEN, Ackley, Iowa."

MY HALF SISTER

By ELTON HARRIS

CHAPTER I.—(Continued.)

Mollie waited to hear no more; she was flying up stairs as fast as her trembling legs would carry her, her plan of action made on the way. There were only two servants sleeping in the house that night, their room was right at the other side; they were doubtless barricaded in it, and would scream and refuse to let Kate and herself into it until too late. She and the child would be helpless in madame's terribly strong hands did she once get hold of them, and the lock of her door was weak, so her plan seemed the only one, and there was not a moment to lose.

"Kittie, get up at once, dead, and dress as quickly as you can," she said, as she entered the room and shut and locked the door. Don't ask any questions now, and I will tell you all about it presently. Hurry!"

She spoke as quietly as she could; but the poor little girl was out of bed as soon as she had finished speaking and pulling on her clothes in silence with trembling hands. One look at Mollie had been enough. Mollie, meanwhile, dragged anything she could find against the door and opened the window quietly. Then she helped Kate into her things and, tying a shawl over her head, put her out on the sloping tiled roof of the veranda and crawled out after her.

"Now, listen, Kittie," she whispered impressively. "I am going to let myself down by one of the pillars, and when I say your name and hold out my arms you are to jump. Then we shall run as fast as we can to the White house."

"Yes, Mollie," murmured the child obediently, her eyes wide with terror.

Without waiting for hat or wrap, Mollie scrambled down, and a minute later they were speeding out on to the road.

"Some one was rattling the door handle," said Kate, as Mollie paused to open the gate.

Mollie's only answer was to take her hand again and run. It was for their lives, literally a race for their lives that they were running, she knew. Was that the clang of the gate behind them? She pulled Kate along faster, for she felt it was, and a mile was a terrible way to run.

"I must stop!" panted Kate. "Oh, Mollie; I can't run any more!"

As Mollie caught her up and hurried on with clenched teeth, she felt sure she heard footsteps on the hard road behind. Every moment she felt the poor distraught woman was gaining on them—that she could hear madame's wild voice; but she staggered on, praying as she had never prayed before for help, and that she might save Kate, her mother's baby!

But she had hardly any breath left by the time the White house gate appeared in sight; the steps were coming nearer, then wheels came rolling up—a high dog cart passed her, in which she could distinguish a well-known form.

"Reggie! Reggie!" she shrieked despairingly; and then she remembered nothing more until she found herself in the hall at the White house, Reggie's arms round her, Mrs. Anstruther's and Joyce's kind faces near, and Kate leaning against her knee, sobbing out an incoherent account of what had happened, as far as she knew.

CHAPTER X.

Madam Dubois was dangerously mad from that night, enacting over and over again the terrible deed she had committed, the combined remorse and terror of which she had gradually thrown her mind off its balance. It was found that she had broken into Mollie's room, and, discovering the window open and the room empty, had evidently pursued them down the road, for one of her shoes was found not far from the White house gates. Foiled in her attempt by the timely arrival of Reggie, she had returned and smashed everything in the room, burying the knife in Mollie's pillow.

Henri was telegraphed for, but declined to come, sending word that he was seriously ill with the shock. The general impression was that he feared to set foot in Reverton, as he had all along known more than he would allow; but nothing could be proved against him. Madame raved for him perpetually; but this one creature whom she worshipped, for whom she had stopped at no crime, coolly deserted her without the least compunction.

Never once did he write to ask about her, or did she see him again; but he quietly disappeared from knowledge, though many years afterward Mollie received begging letters at intervals from him. And it was Mollie who took compasion on her enemy, and returned good for evil by paying for her to be well cared for in an asylum, where she lingered for some years.

Being left without a guardian, her trustees were quite willing for her to accept Mrs. Anstruther's offer of a home until her marriage, an offer extended to Kate also; so everything at Chalfont was sold and the place let, and Mollie would have been happy indeed, but for her anxiety about her little half-sister.

Poor child! She had been failing all winter, though Mollie could not see it, and as the spring advanced she grew weaker and weaker, though she suffered no pain. They were all very good to her, these kind people, bearing with the fractious irritability that she could not control. Reggie came home as often as he could, and taught Mollie to ride; while all Reverton called, anxious to show that they were glad to be friends with Colonel L'Estrange's daughter. But the little girl was never neglected or forgotten. Many an hour would good-natured Reggie carry her about in the old garden and amuse her, and she was very fond of the tall, handsome young fellow, watching him with preternaturally large eyes; but there was no one like Mollie toward the end, her first love and her last, her "very own Mollie!"

"Is she not beautiful, Joyce?" she said one day, as she watched them set off for a ride, and they turned to nod cheerfully as the tiny, thin hand was waved from the window. "Reggie loves her very much, but not so much as I do. No one in this world can tell what Mollie has been to me."

And Joyce, softly stroking the flaxen curls of the owner of Chalfont, thought of that scene in the garden the preceding spring, when the over-dressed little heiress, sitting in the swing, had spoken so differently. Truly Mollie had worked wonders!

"Everything I have is yours, Mollie," the child said with passionate devotion, one cold, spring afternoon, as the girl sat rocking her gently to and fro before the fire. "My heart, my life, everything; but who would have Chalfont if I died?"

"I should, my Kittie."

"Oh, then that is all right." And Kate nestled closer into her arms with a smile of utter contentment. "We are very happy now, Mollie, are we not? Will you sing mother's lullaby again?"

Mrs. Anstruther's face was looking very grave as she watched the child; but with the courage that always came to Mollie in her need, she began softly to sing the old nursery tune they both loved. Once Kate stirred and gave a little sigh; but Mollie went on, though to ears that heard not, for with that sigh the little girl had fallen into that sleep that knows no waking, and gone home to the Heavenly Father whom Mollie had taught her to love.

"You must not grieve too much, Mollie darling," Reggie said later, when she had cut off a long, fair curl, and they had carried the child away and laid her by her mother's side in the church yard. "Had she lived there are many things that she must have known as she grew older, which would have hurt her. She is spared much suffering."

And Mollie, remembering her darling's quick, sensitive spirit, knew it was true. She was very happy as time passed; it was impossible not to be happy with Reggie, and though the trials of life came to both as the years rolled on, nothing ever came between those two. There are no lives without trouble; but theirs they bore together, and tried to bear well, and they passed, leaving them better and stronger.

But even when children of her own lay in her arms, there was always a very tender spot in Mollie's heart for the child who was gone. And as one spring followed another, and snowdrops, primroses and daffodils came in their season, the sharp, anxious little face would rise before her. But it was never the face of "my half-sister, Kate." Leonard Darlowe's daughter, the heiress of Chalfont. She had gone long ago; it was the wistful one of the little sister who slept the last long sleep by her mother's side, who had given her the whole beautiful love of her child's heart.

The End.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

LESSON IX., DEC. 2, MATT. XIX: 16-26.

The Rich Young Ruler—Children, How Hard It Is for Them That Trust in Riches to Enter Into the Kingdom of God—Mark, 10-4.

16. "And, behold, one came." As he was going from the house where he had blessed the children (Mark 10: 13-17). He came running (Mark), showing his earnestness. "No common reason will ever lead the Oriental to break his slow, sedate and dignified walk."—Ewing. "They that will have eternal life must run for it, because the devil, the law, sin, death, and hell follow them."—Bunyan. "And said unto him." As he kneeled before him (Mark). "Good Master (or teacher), what good thing shall I do." What act of sacrifice or heroism, what generous action, what penance or suffering He has the idea of purchasing, of deserving, of inheriting eternal life. "That I may have (Mark, 'inherit') eternal life." Have it as a permanent possession, in the home of his father.

20. "All these things have I kept." Observed, guarded so that they have not been violated, and this he had done from his "youth up." He had sincerely tried to live a good moral life. He had guided his actions by these laws in outward form, with good success. He did not recollect any failure, any special cases of disobedience. Yet he was not satisfied, and he asked, "What lack I yet?" Why am I not conscious that I possess eternal life?

21. "Jesus said unto him." Looking at him with a fixed and earnest gaze. And he loved him (Mark). He was so noble, so earnest and sincere in his seeking, so lovable, that the soul of Jesus was drawn out toward him. And all the more because he was not satisfied with any outward keeping of the law. "If thou wilt (wishest to) be perfect." Complete, wanting nothing. Jesus saw just what the young man lacked and applied the remedy. "Sell that thou hast." Not for himself, but to "give to the poor." To use his wealth for God and humanity. Jesus here touched the center of the young man's difficulty. He was willing to commit to God everything except his property. "And thou shalt have treasure in heaven." You will have the character which belongs to heaven, and God will reward you abundantly there for all your self-denials for his sake. "And come." Come to Jesus, to his character and person, join the company of the apostles who were to carry on the kingdom of God in the world. "And follow me." To follow Jesus then meant to be a personal attendant on his ministry; to go about with him from place to place, as well as to imitate and obey him.

22. "He went away sorrowful." Luke says he became exceedingly sorrowful; Mark, that his countenance fell, the same word as that rendered "lowering" when the Savior was talking about the sky (Matt. 16: 3). "The signs of a storm were on his face, the gloom of a heavy wrath and disappointment was in his heart." "For he had great possessions." He went away reluctantly, after a great struggle, but he went.

23. "A rich man shall hardly (with difficulty) enter into the kingdom of heaven." Mark explains it of those "who trust in riches," to which trust the rich are specially tempted.

24. "It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle." The camel being the largest animal with which the Jews were acquainted, its name became proverbial for denoting anything remarkably large; and "a camel's passing through a needle's eye came, by consequence, as appears from some rabbinical writings, to express a thing absolutely impossible."—George Campbell, Oriental Proverbs. "Just as soon will an elephant pass through the spout of a kettle."—Roberts.

25. "Who then can be saved?" For the great body of people wanted riches, whether they succeeded or not. If the most favored and prominent class could not enter the kingdom, who could? And the difficulty was all the greater because prosperity was one of the promised blessings of the Messiah's reign; and wealth was especially necessary for the kingdom as they had pictured it to their own minds.

26. "With men this is impossible." On worldly principles, by worldly motives, by the power of man it cannot be done. "With God all things are possible." He can remove these great difficulties. He can renew the heart. He can take away the love of riches. He can transform the hindrances into steps heavenward. He can put into a man's heart new motives, that will make him more diligent in business than the love of riches can, that will make him full of usefulness and helpfulness. His very riches can be made to help on God's kingdom.

He Knew His Father's Whistle.

The youngest son of the late Lord Russell sailed for South Africa early in the year as a lieutenant in the Royal Artillery. The occasion was marked by one of those intimate touches of family affection which excite universal sympathy. As the great troopship swung slowly from her moorings the lord chief justice, standing on the quay, failed to descry his son among the crowd of faces that lined the bulwarks. At last he gave a shrill whistle, using his fingers in a manner well known to schoolboys, and the evidently familiar call quickly brought young Russell to the side of the ship to wave farewell.

Secret Kept for Centuries.

Chinese porcelain was common in Europe for 400 years before a German potter succeeded in finding out the process of making it. This Chinese pottery is scattered all over the world, and everywhere valued, but nowhere was the distribution more curious than in western Canada. Early in the century a Chinese junk was cast away on the Pacific coast of America just south of Vancouver island, and its cargo of willow pattern plates fell into the hands of the Hudson Bay Company's officers. Still in the remotest trading posts of the fur traders a few specimens remain.

Iowa is the State of small cities. It has only six having a population of 25,000 and over. They are as follows: Des Moines, 62, 139; Dubuque, 36,297; Davenport, 35,254; Sioux City, 33,111; Cedar, Rapids, 26,656; Council Bluffs, 25,802. The population of all six is less than that of Milwaukee, which has 285,315, and but little more than that of Minneapolis, which has 202,718. However there is little if any real poverty in the cities of Iowa, which is more than can be said of that of any large city in the land. Iowa's 2.252,820 people are comparatively prosperous, contented and happy.—Goodell Globe.

It looks as though this editor is doomed to recive considerable persecution on account of his ill doings We cannot see why we do not write better than we do. —good enough to please some of our editorial brethern, for instance,—but we cannot do it. When one has studied, studied and studied and has learned only half enough to please some folks it is not his fault that they are dissatisfied. We have tried hard to pound some few things into this head of ours but it cannot be done; our brain power is limited, our skull is thick and our mind is naturally weak. However, before we forget, there is one thing we do know, yes two things, (two is the limit) the first is that some people are very, very hard to please and second—well—no one is to blame for our mistakes, we are responsible for them.

As a result of a heated political argument two residents of Muskegon, Mich., made a wager of $35 on the result of the election one day last week. One of the parties to the bet owed a coal bill of $21. The coal dealers heard of the wager, garnished the stakeholder and recovered the amount of their claim.

About all that a Chinese gentleman wants to practice the profession of medicine is to declare himself a doctor, and go to work curing or killing people, as the case may be, at the rate of about 2 cents per visit. A jury at Washington, Ga., has decided that $5 is a reasonable charge for shaving a dead man. A local barber presented a bill for the amount named after having done his share toward preparing a corpse for burial, and payment was refused by the undertaker. The barber thereupon took the case to court, with the result stated.

NEWS IN GENERAL

CAPTURED A STRONGHOLD.

Geronimo's Supposedly Impregnable Fortress Taken.

Manila, Nov. 26.—The fortress of the insurgent chief, Geronimo, at Pinauran, which the insurgents boasted was impregnable, was taken and destroyed Thursday afternoon by a picked force of the Forty-second and Twenty-seventh infantry and Troop G of the Fourth cavalry, under Colonel Thompson. Geronimo and most of the rebels escaped. The leader has long harassed the Twenty-seventh infantry, operating in the vicinity of San Mateo, Montalban and Novaliches. He was nnally located at Pinauran, thirty-five miles north of Manila. His position was considered the strongest in Luzon. It was a stone fortress, surmounting a steep hill surrounded by canyons. The Spanish forces lost heavily in attempting to take it.

Colonel Thompson mobilized a thousand men at Montalbon. The attack was made upon four sides—the main body, under Major Carry of the Forty-second, advancing from the south; Captain Atkinson, of the Twenty-seventh, from the east; Captain Castell, of the Twenty-seventh, from the west, and Captain Sloan, of the Twenty-seventh, from the north. The ascents were steep, and the men climbed them by grasping the shrubbery. It was impossible for the eastern column to reach the summit, but the others arrived, after three hours' climbing, under fire from the fortress and the hillside entrenchments. The enemy's force, numbering several hundred, fled before the attackers reached the top. The Americans destroyed a thousand insurgent uniforms, scores of buildings and large quantities of documents, and seized a barrel full of documents.

Private Hart of the Twenty-seventh and Private Koppner of the Forty-second and two native scouts were killed, and twelve of the attacking force were wounded. The insurgent casualties could not be ascertained.

PORTE'S "NO" IS POSITIVE.

Tewfik Pasha, Foreign Affairs Minister, Visited.

Constantinople Nov. 25.—United States Charge d' Affaires Griscom called upon Tewfik Pasha, minister of foreign affairs, to urge a settlement of the difficulty in relation to the granting of exequatur to Dr. Thomas H. Norton, who some time ago was appointed by President McKinley to establish a consulate at Harpoot. The Porte, however, is firm in its refusal to grant the request for exequatur.

New York, Nov. 24.—Oscar S. Strauss, minister to Turkey, declines to say anything about the Porte's action n refusing exequatur for the United States consul at Harpoot, declaring all comment should come from the state department. Another American who spent years in the diplomatic service says:

"The Turkish authorities look with jealousy upon the appointment of consuls to the interior points in the empire, especially when, as in the present instance, the United States wishes to send the consul to a point where it has not had a consul before. The reason, perhaps, why the Turkish authorities more specifically object to the appointment of a consul at Harpoot, is that it was at Harpoot where the American missionary property was destroyed during the Armenian troubles. On its loss our claims are based for indemnity.

"America has no commerce at Harpoot. Its interests there are only missionary, as in that city is located the Euphrates college, besides several mission schools, and it is the center of American missionary activity. But it can be reasonably claimed by our government, even if we have little or no commerce now there, that we may want to cultivate it, especially as a number of our citizens are resident here.

"Heretofore such consular business as the United States has had at Harpoot has been conducted by the British vice consul there."

SAY DIETRICH IS INELIGIBLE.

Fusion Leaders in Nebraska to Harass the Governor-Elect.

Lincoln, Neb., Nov. 25.—Fusion leaders in Nebraska charge that Charles H. Dietrich, governor-elect, has rendered himself ineligible to the office because, they assert, he violated the law enacted in 1889 entitled "An act to prevent corrupt practices at elections."

The charge follows an affidavit made by E. F Morearty of Omaha that Dietrich during the campaign gave both him and his partner $25 for a banquet and barbecue. Mr. Dietrich does not deny the contribution, listing it in his expense account filed with the secretary of state, and his friends assert that the barbecue was represented to him as a picnic for poor children.

Chairman Hall of the democratic and Chairman Edmistin of the populist state committees said they had not decided on what course to pursue, but that the matter would at least be investigated.

Twenty-six Perish in the Water.

Quebec, Nov. 26.—News has reached here that the steamer St. Olaf has become a total wreck off Seven Islands and that her crew was entirely lost. Besides the nineteen men of the steamer's crew, it was learned that seven passengers had also perished.

The St. Olaf was an iron steamer of 305 tons. She was valued at about $40,000 and insured for about $20,000.

PORTE REFUSES RECOGNITION.

Request for Exequatur Denied by Government of Turkey.

Constantinople. Nov. 24.—The porte definitely rejected the request for exequatur for the United States consul at Harpoot. This refusal is regarded by the United States legation as a direct violation of treaty rights; consequently, despite the refusal, Dr. Thomas H. Norton, whose was appointed by President McKinley some time ago to establish a consulate at Harpoot has been directed to proceed to his post. The expected visit of the battleship Kentucky to Smyrna is believed to relate quite as much to this matter as to the indemnity question.

Turkish objection to the establishment of a consulate at Harpoot and Erzeroum under apparently clear permission granted by treaty of 1830, has been based on the rather novel reason there is no commerce at these two points, and it has been difficult for our officials to establish a contrary proposition. But some time ago the Turkish government accorded to the British government the right to establish a consulate at Harpoot, and the state department immediately based an additional claim on the "favored nation" clause of its general treaty which would appear to warrant it in demanding the same privileges of establshing a consulate at a given point in Turkey as was granted to Great Britain.

ENVOYS ARE NOT PLEASED.

Regard Chinese Punishment Edicts as Unsatisfactory.

London, Nov. 23.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to the Times from Peking says:

"The appointment of Yu Chang as governor of the province of Hu Pei has been cancelled. This is due to the strenuous British protest. Ching Hsing, treasurer of the province of Ho Nan, who has been appointed in the Chinese have shown in disseminat- his place, is regarded as almost equally objectionable.

"The foreign envoys have agreed that the consistent bad faith which ing abroad misleading intelligence shall be recorded in the preamble of the conjoint note.

"It is reported that Chinese troops have repulsed a German expedition, but no details have been received."

"Nine of the foreign envoys," says the Peking correspondent of the Morning Post, wiring yesterday, "have written strong letters denouncing the punishment edict and declaring that Tung Fu Hsiang must be punished. Dr. Mumm von Schwartzensten, the German minister, has told Li Hung Chang that the foreign powers must themselves punish the guilty officials."

NEW BASIS FOR PEACE PROPOSED

Secretary Hay Addresses Powers in an Effort to Secure a Settlement.

Washington, Nov. 25.—The secretary of state has addressed an identical note to the powers interested in the Chinese situation, setting out tersely and afresh the object of the United States government as to China, and pointing out how such objects as are common to the powers can best be secured.

This note marks the initiation of fresh negotiations on our part for the arrangement of a new basis to tide over the impossible situation created at the last meeting of the ministers in Peking.

Some responses are already at hand and it is stated generally that our advances have been well received and the state department expresses satisfaction with the progress so far achieved.

It is believed the note is an appeal from the extreme course suggested by some of the powers as to the treatment of China and especially in the matter of punishments and indemnties to which the ministers at Peking seem inclined. The intent is to push the negotiations on a more radical business-like basis.

Sir Arthur Sulivan Dead.

London, Nov. 23.—Sir Arthur Sullivan, musical composer, is dead of heart disease.

Sullivan's death was very sudden. At 9 a. m., while he was laughing and talking in the house here, he fell down and died within a few minutes. He had been ailing for some time, but it was not believed his heart was affected. Recently he had been in better health than for some weeks past.

Official Kansas Returns.

Topeka, Nov. 23.—T. T. Kelly, secretary of the republican state committee, has received the official returns from all the counties of Kansas. They show that McKinley's majority is 25,844, Stanley's majority is 17,370, or 8,474 behind McKinley. The total vote of the state was 349,917. McKinley received 187,881; Bryan received 71,339 democratic votes and 90,789 populist votes; total, 162,037.

Declines to Remove the Mayor.

Albany, N. Y., Nov. 24.—Governor Roosevelt has given out his decision in the application for the removal from office of Mayor Robert A. Van Wyck of New York City. He declines to remove the mayor, on the grounds that, while he was undoubtedly a stockholder in the American Ice company, there has been no proof that he wilfully violated the law forbidding a public officer to be a stockholder in a corporation having dealings with his municipality.

A PROMINENT LADY

Speaks in Highest Terms of Peruna as a Catarrh Cure.

Mrs. M. A. Theatro, member Rebecca Lodge, Iola Lodge; also member of Woman's Relief Corps, writes the following letter from 1838 Jackson street, Minneapolis, Minn.:

Mrs. M. A. Theatro, Minneapolis, Minn.

Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

Gentlemen—"As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I have been troubled with chronic catarrh for over six years. I had tried several remedies without relief. A lodge friend advised me to try Peruna, and I began to use it faithfully before each meal. Since then I have always kept it in the house. I am now in better health than I have been in over twenty years, and I feel sure my catarrh is permanently cured."

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. As soon as Peruna removes systemic catarrh the digestion becomes good, nerves strong, and trouble vanishes. Peruna strengthens weak nerves, not by temporarily stimulating them, but by removing the cause of weak nerves—systemic catarrh. This is the only cure that lasts. Remove the cause; nature will do the rest. Peruna removes the cause.

Address The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio, for a book treating of Catarrh in its different phases and stages, also a book entitled "Health and Beauty," written especially for women.

PAIN OPENED HER SKULL

Mrs. Lasher's Remarkable Story—Dr. Greene's Nervura Cured Her.

MRS. FRED. C. LASHER, JR.

The case of Mrs. Fred. C. Lasher, Jr., a well-known woman of Westport, N. Y., is one of the most interesting on record. It is an actual fact that headaches caused her head to split.

"For thirteen years," she says, "I suffered from terrible headaches night and day, until the bones of my skull opened so that the doctor could lay his thumb right into the opening on to my brain. Two doctors attended me and claimed that I was on the verge of insanity. I was under their care for nine years, but got no relief. Then I tried Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and inside of a year the bones of my head had taken their natural shape again."

That Mrs. Lasher's statements are true is vouched for by reliable men of Westport, and by a Justice of the Peace there. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy cured Mrs. Lasher when all other remedies failed, and it cures thousands of suffering women every year. If your head aches, if you cannot sleep and are weak and nervous, remember that this great curative agent, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, will make you well and strong.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is a physician's prescription, formulated from a discovery after years of investigation and experiment. Dr. Greene, 35 West 14th St., New York City, is the discoverer. He can be consulted free personally or by letter.

The tallest man in the world is Lewis Wilkins, a young farmer, who lives near St. Paul, Minn. His height is 8 feet 11½ inches.

KRUGER IN FRANCE.

Ex-President of the Transvaal Gets Warm Welcome.

Marseilles, Nov. 23.—Ex-President Kruger landed here yesterday. Senator Pauliat, the president, and other members of the Paris and Marseilles reception committees assembled at the landing stage, and behind them, drawn up in a long line, were delegations of various patriotic societies, with embroidered silk standards. Kruger cannot but be elated at the warmth of the reception by the people of Marseilles. The broad streets and boulevards from the landing stage to the hotel presented a perfect sea of human beings. From the moment the barge left the side of the Gelderland with Kruger, who appeared to be in good health and was surrounded by Boer representatives, a storm of cheering broke and never ceased until Kruger entered the hotel. Even then a vast concourse of people remained in front of the building until Kruger appeared on the balcony, where he had to remain some time uncovered, acknowledging acclamations of his thousands of admirers.

Replying to addresses of welcome of the presidents of the Paris and Marseilles committees, Kruger, after thanking committees for the warmth of the reception accorded him, expressing gratitude for the sympathy he had received from the French government, he spoke of the war as terrible and barbarously conducted by the British. He said:

"I have fought with savages, but the present war is even worse. We will never surrender. We are determind to fight to the last extremity, and as the republics of the Transvaal and Orange Free State lose their independence it will be because they have lost every man, woman and child."

This declaration dispelled at once any impression that he intends to accept a compromise from the British government His announcement was greeted with a roar of cheers and cries of "Vive Kruger," "Vive les Boers," "Vive La Liberte."

At a banquet given in honor of Mr. Kruger in the evening, Dr. Leyds represented the ex-president and read the following message from him:

"I am fatigued and am in mourning. Moreover, I never attend banquets. Otherwise I should have liked to spend a few minutes with you and to thank you. I shall never forget the warm welcome I have had in your beautiful city which gave France her admirable hymn, that 'Marseillaise' which is the song of all peoples whose independence is threatened and who are strugglig against invaders.

"I wish that your acclamation could have been heard by all those Boers in arms who are encamped in our mountains. They would thank you from the bottom of their hearts. I thank you in their behalf. Could I have been with you I should also have expressed my thanks to all France and would have raised my glass in honor of her worthy president, M. Loubet."

Mr. Kruger has sent the following dispatch to President Loubet.

"In debarking upon the hospitable shores of France, my first act is to greet the worthy chief of the French republic and to forward to you a testimonial of my gratitude for the marks of interest your government and country have so kindly wished to offer me."

Dijon, France, Nov. 24.—Mr. Kruger has become, for a moment at least, the popular idol of the French. His triumphant progress northward through the country from Marseilles to Dijon has placed this beyond doubt. He met with a tremendous reception in each town along the route where the train stopped, culminating in scenes of frenzied enthusiasm here last evening calculated to turn the head of any man.

The population of Marseilles gathered in thousands yesterday morning to escort him to the railroad station and gave him a rousing send-off, while at Tarascon, Avignon, Valance Macol, Lyons and Dijon the inhabitants who crowded the railroad stations, made the rafters tremble with enthusiastic shouts of "Vive Kruger," and "Vive les Boers!" The demonstration was all the more significant because it shows that the acclamations at Marseilles were not merely an explosion of exuberance on the part of the warm-hearted and excitable populace of a sunny clime, but sentiments shared with even greater intensity by the usually less demonstrative and colder blooded inhabitants of the northern provinces.

WILL ISSUE $12,000.

Jos. Lesper of Victor Colo., and His New Money Scheme.

Victor, Colo., Nov. 24.—Joseph Lesper, who recently made an issue of one hundred silver souvenirs, which he called "referendum dollars," says he has assurances from the United States district attorney that his coinage scheme is not illegal. He has ordered a new die, from which ten thousand souvenirs will be struck immediately. The silver cost him $6,500 for making fifteen hundred. He will sell the coins for $12,000, to redeem them on demand for the same amount. The new coins bear the name of a Victor groceryman, who agrees to redeem them in merchandise or money.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucus lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucus surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

Wholesale Prices

On 70,000 Things.

The building shown on the cover is owned and exclusively occupied by us. It is the tallest mercantile building in the world. Our whole business is done by mail, with out-of-town buyers; and we charge wholesale prices only.

Send for Our Catalogue with 1,200 Pages, 17,000 Pictures, 70,000 Prices.

We are the largest store in the world doing an exclusive Mail Order business. No city sales; no agents; no branch stores. This is the original Catalogue business, founded 28 years ago; and our sales exceed those of all other mail order houses in the United States combined. Let us give you some figures. The store contains merchandise valued at $2,500,000. We occupy 25 acres of floor space, employ 2,000 clerks and have two million customers who buy from us by mail. From 15,000 to 35,000 orders and letters come to us daily. Our average daily shipments are 2,500 packages by freight, 4,000 by express and 6,500 by mail—a total of 13,000 packages daily. Annual sales, $12,000,000.

This business has been built by selling to users at wholesale prices. The price given in our catalogue for anything is about what your dealer pays the wholesaler. We save you the dealer's profit. We sell practically everything—all the things that you wear or use; most of the things that you eat—and we save you from 15 to 50 per cent on all. We guarantee that each article is as represented; and we exchange, or pay your money back with all transportation, if you find it otherwise. We make it a pleasure to deal with us.

We have just issued a new catalogue—No. 68—the largest, finest, and most complete book of its kind ever published. It contains 1,200 pages with 17,000 pictures. It gives wholesale prices and truthful descriptions of 70,000 things. It will tell you what your dealer pays for everything. This catalogue would be free if you could call for it, but we must pay 32 cents to mail it. Each book deliverd costs us about $1. We ask you, therefore, to send us 15 cents—less than half the postage—and we will send you the catalogue by mail or express prepaid. If it disappoints you we will send the 15 cents back. Almost any family can save $100 per year by it. The prices and pictures below are taken from this catalogue. If you order any article from this advertisement, please give the order number as stated under each article, enclose the price stated, and the goods will be promptly shipped.

New Lines Of The Popular Burlington Cedar Rapids and Northern Railway.

Within the present year the "Cedar Rapids Route" will add to it's already extensive system 130 miles of new track, entering the very richest portion of southern Minnesota. The line from Worthington to Hardwick, Minn. with it's four prosperous towns is in full opperation. The grading on the Germania-Albert Lee line, passing through Faribault, Freeborn, Steele and Rice counties, is practically completed, and the four new towns on this branch are already started and doing remarkably well.

The line between Albert Lee and Faribault, Minn, is being extended north at the rate of over one mile per day and is expected to reach Owatonna, and perhaps Faribault, this year. The most important town on this line will be Allendale, located midway between Albert Lee and Owatonna. It is the purpose of the Company to make Allendale THE town, and no other towns between Albert Lee and Owatonna. The location is three-fourths of a mile west of the Cooly ville Creamery, near the south line of Steele county, and in the heart of the very best best dairy district in Minnesota.

It is the policy of companies generally to locate towns too near each other for profitable commercial enterprises. Ellendale is an exception, and has more than double the territory of the ordinary locations. Examine the map and see the very large territory tributary to Ellendale. There is no better country in the northwest than the northern portion of Freeborn and the southern portion of Steele counties, Minnesota. The farmers have been anxiously waiting for a convenient market.

There are needed: Banks, Dry Goods Store, Drug Store, Hardware Store, Furniture Store, Grocery Store, General Store, Harness shop, Barber shop, Restaurant, Blacksmith shop, Agricultural Implement warehouse, Wagon shop, Photographer, Hotel, Newspaper and printing office, Lumber yard, Shoe store, Bakery, Jewelry Store, Clothing store, Millinery store, Livery barn, Meat market, Insurance agent, In professional line: Attorney Doctor, Dentist.

Game Fads.

The Star Archarena Combination Boards.

The Archarena combination board opens a wide field and is meeting with much favor. It has been in existance of course, for some time, but found a great demand during the last holiday season. For some time the games played on this wonderful board were regarded as children's games, but grown people now find interesting amusement with them. It furnishes a divertisement from cards which have had their run until they have become tiresome. Twenty different games can be played on this great board, including checkers, chess, archarena, crokinole, ditch carrom, four pocket parlor poll, ten pins, backgammon, race for the White House, billiardette with cues, shovel board, hawk and English sparrows, forty-six etc., with possibilities of other games that may be invented. It is a nice piece of furniture 28 x 28 inches square and can be placed on a table or held in the lap. So far as games of amusement are concerned it is undoubtedly the greatest invention of the age.

The writer was told by Mr. J. L. Harr that he has received a very large shipment of these boards for the coming holiday trade. The home circle must have some sort of amusement and the Archarena board now comes in to fill the "long felt want" and we gladly note that Mr. Harr can supply all with this great home amusement.

.....

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof, Hicks' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St, St. Louis Missouri.

SCLICK—BLACKWELL.

Two Hundred Invited Guests—One Hundred and Fifty Guests present—Elaborate Decorations—The Fatted Calf—Handsome Bridal Cakes.

Married at the home of the brides parents in Garfield township one and one half miles west and two miles north of Garner on Tuesday December 4th., 1900, Miss Edith Schlick to Mr. Arthur Blackwell, of Garner, at 2:30 P. M. The bride—a pretty young lady—was attired in a beautiful pink satin wedding gown trimmed with fine shenile and shiffon and wearing diamonds and opals in commemoration of this great event. The bridegroom wore a handsome black suit and presented an enviable appearance. The young couple was led to the arch by two little girls prettily dressed in white, one the bride's sister and the other the groom's cousin. The ornamentations of the interior of the dwelling were exquisite—elaborate almost beyond description—cut flowers and the natnral green adorned every nook and crevice of the house. The arch—in one corner—elegant to say the least, was bedecked with wedding bells which betokened the appearance of "merry making." The bridal cakes prepared by Mrs. J. Rasmus were two of the finest specimans of cake baking ever exhibited in good old Garfield, a fact attested to by every one who saw them, and Mrs. Rasmus is to be complimented on her ability as a nicknack baker. To spend time and words declaring the goodess of these two young people would not suffice; a far better idea of their true worth can be conveyed to the reader by appending a list of the presents than by any manner of "word painting." The following list of "tokens of remembrance" will give the reader a fair idea of the high esteem in which the bridal couple are held:

Rev. Hascom, of the congregational church of Garner, performed the ceremoney, after which the guests retired to "make merry" and participate in a sumptous repast. All the delicacies of the season were there, turkey, duck, goose, oyster salad, cakes honey, oh my! we can't begin to name all the good things spread on those two tables. A jollier, happier, light hearted gathering never put foot on Garfield township soil and the TIMES editor being present wants to join the participants and friends in wishing the young couple the smoothest possible path throughout their entire future life. God bless them.

Uncle Sam Expends Billions for His Drinks.

A gentleman in this city has recently figured on the cost of liquor consumed in this country, and by statistics has revealed some astonishing facts He finds that all the gold mined in California since 1849 would not pay our drink bill for a single year. The world's production of both gold and silver for the year 1899 would not pay for the drinks of the nation for six months. Add to this the total appropriations of the war congress for 1900, and net the earnings of our national banks, and we have a sum about equal to what intemperance costs our nation annually—$1,069,000,000—a sum sufficient to pay the running expenses of the railway system, covering 254 thousand miles, employing 875,000 men, carring 900,000,000 tons of freight and seven times the population of the country as passengers. In ten years the narion's drink bill would build every car, locomotive and every mile of track. The entire cost to the nation is sufficient to build two hundred thousand homes at a cost of two thousand dollars each. There would be a balance sufficient to put one thousand dollars worth of furniture in each house, one thousand dollars worth of groceries in each pantry one hundred tons of coal in each cellar leaving five hundred dollars for clothing for each home. There would still be sixty nine millions of dollars unspent. Although as a nation we perhaps use less intoxicating liquor than many, these figures show that there is a great fleld for the temperance people of America to work in.—Webster City Tribune.

New Lines Of The Popular Burlington Cedar Rapids and Northern Railway.

Within the present year the "Ceda Rapids Route" will add to it's alread extensive system 130 miles of new track, entering the very richest portion of southern Minnesota. The line from Worthington to Hardwick, Minn. with it's four prosperous towns is in full opperation. The grading on the Germania-Albert Lee line, passing through Faribault, Freeborn, Steele and Rice counties, is practically completed, and the four new towns on this branch are already started and doing remarkably well.

The line between Albert Lee and Faribaul', Minn, is being extended north at the rate of over one mile per day and is expected to reach Owatonna, and perhaps Faribault, this year. The most important town on this line will be Allendale, located midway between Albert Lee and Owatonna. It is the purpose of the Company to make Allendale THE town, and no other towns between Albert Lee and Owatonna. The location is three-fourths of a mile west of the Cooly ville Creamery, near the south line of Steele county, and in the heart of the very best best dairy district in Minnesota.

It is the policy of companies generally to locate towns too near each other for profitable commercial enterprises. Ellendale is an exception, and has more than double the territory of the ordinary locations. Examine the map and see the very large territory tributary to Ellendale. There is no better country in the northwest than the northern portion of Freeborn and the southern portion of Steele counties, Minnesota. The farmers have been anxiously waiting for a convenient market.

There are needed: Banks, Dry Goods Store, Drug Store, Hardware Store, Furniture Store, Grocery Store, General Store, Harness shop, Barber shop, Restaurant, Blacksmith shop, Agricultural Implement warehouse, Wagon shop, Photographer, Hotel, Newspaper and printing office, Lumber yard, Shoe store, Bakery, Jewelry Store, Clothing store, Millinery store, Livery barn, Meat market, Insurance agent, In professional line: Attorney Doctor, Dentist.

Personally Conducted Excursions To California Every Tuesday

Every Tuesday during the winter season there will be a through pullman tourist sleeping car on B. C. R. & N. train No. 2. leaving Albert Lea at 2:30 p. m., which will run through to California via Kansas City, Colorado Springs, the Scenic Route and Salt Lake City.

These cars are provided with the same neat outfits as found in first-class Pullman sleepers and are accompanied by a porter to keep them in first-class order. An obliging conductor also makes the trip through to California with each party to look after their every wish.

The rate per berth, accomodating two persons if desired, from stations Albert Lea to Waverly inclusive is $6, from stations south thereof $5.50. First and second class and round trip tickets are honored in these cars. For rates tickets, reservations and full information address any B. C. R. & N. agent or JNO. G. FARMER, A. G. P. & T. KLEMME, - - - IOWA.

Any woman can keep an expense account, but only about one woman in a hundred can make it tally with her cash.

The Southern cotton manufacturers are interested in China, and they are not the least bit backward in speaking up about it.

Crooked financiering in New York has become so fast and furious that Mr. Miller, the 120 per cent man, has been entirely forgotten.

The latest exposition of rural mail delivery in the United States is the remarkable route extending three thousand miles beyond the reach of the mail-boats in Alaska. The carriers are descendants of reindeer imported from Siberia in 1882, of which there are now twenty large herds in Alaska, notwithstanding frequent newspaper assertions that the reindeer are all dead.

Care of the sick can scarcely reach its highest ideal save where personal attachment supplements knowledge and skill. Therefore, it belongs to the life of every woman. There are few households indeed where any girl can grow up without some opportunities for this experience. Such opportunities may well be supplemented by lectures, courses of reading and well-planned demonstrations.

A collection of ancient Greek ornaments which cost him $200,000 has been given by J. Pierpont Morgan to the Metropolitan museum of art, New York City. The collection was many years making, and includes a large gold crown, a heavy gold necklace, a gold and silver bridal wreath, a gold embossed mask of a young woman, a gold and silver bridal wreath, large gold-winged statuets and a gold ram. They date from 350 B. C.

The wife of Li Hung Chang has the credit of being not only the richest woman in China but also of being the most luxurious woman on earth. Twice daily Mrs. Li bathes in oil of orange and acacia flowers, and she has a staff of 1,000 servants. Her wardrobe is most expensive and is said to contain no fewer than 2,000 coats and 1,200 trouserettes. Mrs. Li is able to walk only a few feet at a time, being crippled like the majority of Chinese women; but if report be trustworthy she is by no means an idle woman, for she is said to keep a detailed account of the expenditure of her vast household and to be an excellent woman of business.

Public sentiment will generally approve the action of the New York sheriff who recently arrested a "lady cyclist." She was trying to cover three thousand miles in quicker time than that distance had ever been ridden before, and when the sheriff interfered had already covered twenty-six hundred miles in less than twelve days. She was in such a pitiable condition that people living near the scene of her riding made complaint. It may not be necessary to regard such a person as a criminal, but any one who knows no better than to impose such a strain upon her own health, if not upon her life, is better off in custody than out of it.

A recent magazine contains a remarkable picture of a wild white-footed mouse nursing her four young ones. It is a reproduction of a photograph made from life under circumstances so pleasant that they are worth retelling. The owner of the camera was walking in the woods with a friend, when he came upon the interesting family group. The frightened mother instantly disappeared, and could not be found even after the most careful search. It was only when the two men reached home that the little creature was found in the pocket of one of them. Fearing that the young ones would die, the photographer ran back two miles with the old mouse in his hand, and the charming picture referred to represents the first meeting of the reunited family.

Mr. Martin Dodge, director of the office of public road inquiries, announces that the secretary of agriculture has established in the division of chemistry a laboratory for testing physically and chemically all varieties of road materials. These substances include rocks of all kinds, gravel, shells, brick, clays and other bodies used in road building in country districts, but do not include materials for municipalities. This laboratory will be ready for operation about December 1. Any person desiring to have road materials tested in this laboratory is advised to write to the office of public road inquiries, department of agriculture, Washington, D. C., for instructions in regard to the methods of selecting and shipping samples.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

NEW ELECTRIC LINE.

One Proposed From Des Moines to Indianola via the Army Post.

Des Moines, Dec. 1.—General Manager F. B. Hippee of the Des Moines City Railway company says the selection of the Denny-Brisco tract for the army post will probably result in giving Des Moines an interurban line extending past the east line of the army post site, through the big Scotch settlement on South Ridge in Warren county and the town of Summerset to Indianola. As soon as the government formally accepts the army post site the street car company will commence the construction of a line to the post. This will in all probability be an extension of the Sevastopol line and would necessitate the construction of about three miles of new road almost due south from the present terminal in Sevastopol. The end of the line would then be brought within about twelve miles of Indianola, with its population of 3,500 people, and within two miles of the big Scotch settlement centering at the Scotch Presbyterian church, just over the county line on the Indianola road. This is the big fruit growing district of middle Iowa and the resources are such as to warrant considerable freight traffic for the road while the country all along the road is thickly populated, thus insuring a considerable freight and passenger traffic that can be expected to come from Indianola.

HOMESTEAD MUST BE SOLD.

Judge Holmes of Polk County Decides Pierce-Stewart Case

Des Moines, Dec. 3.—After weeks of waiting since the suit was instituted last summer, Judge Holmes in the district court has handed down an opinion in the Pierce-Stewart Homestead case. It is held that a receiver must be appointed as provided in the original agreement to sell the property of the Iowa Homestead to the highest bidder, but in the meantime Pierce is to be left in possession of the Homestead property. With the exception that the property must be sold by a receiver the victory is one for Pierce, the court holding that SStewart cannot hold to the terms of the charter as to his employment after the expiration of the charter. No receiver has been named by the court, an opportunity being first allowed to the interested parties to agree, if possible, upon some person to act in this capacity. In case of a failure to agree the court will then appoint a receiver for the purpose of selling the Homestead property, with the exception of the real estate, the sale of which is to be determined by the parties themselves.

STRUCK BY A PASSENGER TRAIN.

Two Johnson County Farmers Killed at a Crossing.

Iowa City, Nov. 29.—Ed Warner and his hired man, Charles Hofeditz, were instantly killed at a crossing three miles east of this city, by passenger train No. 1 pulled by engine No. 472. Warner and his man had been out to the farm, gathered a load of corn and started toward town, approached the crossing and as it was nearly dark and roads rough, it is supposed that the on coming train was not noticed. The train stopped and backed to the crossing, where the bodies of the two men were found about twenty feet from the track. The wagon was broken into pieces, one horse being killed and the other escaping injury. Both men leave families. The train was behind time and was running at a high rate of speed.

SHOT THROUGH THE HEART.

Cedar Rapids Man and Wife Murdered by Footpads.

Burlington, Nov. 30.—W. H. Linter of Cedar Rapids, accompanied by his wife, on the way to the depot to leave for home, after spending Thanksgiving with relatives, was held up by a footpad and on resisting Mr. Linter was shot through the heart, dying instantly. Mrs. Linter ran but was shot in the back, and is now dying at a hospital. The assassin escaped. A man was captured at Patterson, six miles south of here, who gave his name as George Anderson, who had two revolvers on his person, one having two exploded shells. He practically confessed to shooting the Linters.

ONE OF THE FORTY BEST DAILIES.

Iowa Has One Paper in the List in Printers' Ink.

Des Moines, Dec. 3.—Printers' Ink, a New York journal of the newspaper craft, prints a list of "the forty best newspapers in the United States," prepared by an advertiser. The only Iowa paper in the list is the Des Moines Daily News, a fact the more complimentary because the Daily News is sent to mail subscribers for $1 a year, being the lowest priced daily in the world.

Glucose Boiler Explodes.

Davenport, Dec. 1.—The explosion of boiler No. 1 at the glucose works completely wrecked the engine room of that establishment and entirely demolished a large part of the immense boiler room. Fully a dozen workmen were in the structure when the terrific explosion occurred and seven of these were caught in the mass of falling brick, pipes and timbers, and had to be dug out. Five were rescued alive, but more or less severely burned, scalded, crushed or otherwise injured. Two, however, met death where they were pinned to the brick floor of th engine room, and were found there after a search lasting nearly two hours.

SPEEDY TEST TO BE MADE.

Supreme Court to Pass on the Titus Amendment.

Iowa City, Dec. 3.—Attorney General Milton Remley, Senator Titus and Attorney General-elect Mullan of Iowa, in conference here, formulated a plan whereby they hope to secure a speedy opinion of the supreme court and put an end to the Titus amendment muddle.

While they refused to state their plan which was agreed upon, it is understood that they have made arrangements for a test case in the supreme court at an early date. The case as proposed will be brought up in a district court before a judge who will give a speedy decision and will at once be carried up as the case is tried.

The supreme court, it is understood, is not adverse to advancing the case on the calendar and rendering a decision at once. The arguments will probably be submitted to the supreme court in advance and everything be in readiness in order that a decision can be rendered promptly. It is expected that the decision willl be made the first day the supreme court is in session. None of the state officers is disposed to question the right of these men, elected at the last election, to take charge of he offices and none is willing to make the test.

The case, as proposed, will be an earnest controversy and it is expected that both Remley and Mullan will champion the cause of the newly elected man who will make the test. Both of these men believe that the amendment should be construed according to the intent of the author, Senator Titus, who thought he was framing a bill which would lengthen the terms of the officers whose terms expired on the first Monday in January, 1902.

IDENTIFIED BY MRS. LINTER.

She Declares Anderson Shot Herself and Her Husband.

Burlington, Dec. 3.—Mrs. Linter of Cedar Rapids, whose husband was killed and herself fatally shot by a footpad last night, is still living. She recognized George Anderson, arrested at Patterson, as the man who assaulted her husband and herself. The coroner's jury recommended that he be held for trial without bail.

Engineer Had Narrow Escape.

Forest City, Dec. 3.—A collision between the southbound local freight and an empty car on the sidetrack of the Minneapolis & St. Louis was a narrow escape to the engineer. A car had been set out and pushed up the sidetrack about five minutes before the regular local freight came along. After it was too late the engineer discovered that the car was up against the rail of the main line. The engine struck it, tearing off the corner of the car and smashing up one side of the engine badly and tearing off one side of the cab completely.

Will Ask for $150,000.

Vicksburg, Miss., Nov. 29.—The Iowa commissioners to locate the positions occupied by troops from that state during the siege of Vicksburg, have completed their work. At a meeting of the commission it was decided to recommend to the Iowa legislature that an appropriation of $150,000 be made for a grand central monument in memory of the thirty-five Iowa regiments that participated in the siege.

Stole Nine Cents.

Dubuque, Dec. 1.—The jury has returned a verdict of guilty in the case of State vs. Thomas Murphy. Larceny from the person was the charge and the amount stolen was nine cents. Murphy expected to get off as he did not consider the taking of nine cents a grave offense but the jury was inclined to think stealing nine cents as bad as stealing nine dollars.

Charged With Horse Theft.

Ottumwa, Dec. 3—R. R. De Armand, alias William Craig, was arrested by Officers Morrissey and Myers, of the Ottumwa police force, on the charge of horse stealing. The arrest was made for Sheriff Black of Fairfield. The youth, soon after being arrested, confessed to having stolen a horse belonging to J. M. Downey of Packwood, a small town in the northwestern portion of Jefferson county.

Reward for Murderer.

Harlan, Dec. 3.—Judge Macy has offered a reward of $2,000 for the recovery of the remains of Frank Richardson of this county, who is believed to have been murdered several years ago. He has also offered a reward of $1,000 for the arrest or information leading to the conviction of the murderer.

Assumes Her Maiden Name.

Waterloo, Dec. 1.—Mrs. Nettie S. Hoot, wife of the man sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary for attempting to kill his wife with dynamite, has been issued a decree of divorce, and has assumed her maiden name of Nettie M. Schwab.

Woman Justified in Killing.

Des Moines, Dec. 1.—The grand jury voted not to indict Miss Mattie Maish who shot and killed William Foster two months ago. Miss Maish was betrayed under promise of marriage, and the members of the jury held the shooting was justified.

Officers Arrest S. Otis.

Iowa City, Dec. 1.—S. Otis, president of the Home Educational company of this city, and prominent in business and church circles, is arrested on charges of obtaining money under false pretenses and for two other criminal offenses.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines, December 1, 1900.

Joseph S. Trigg, editor of the Rockford Register, who is famous in Iowa as an agriculturist writer and editorial philosopher, is announced as a candidate for secretary of the board of agriculture to succeed George H. Van Houten. The state agricultural convention will be held in Des Moines December 10, 11, 12 and 13. This convention elects the directors and the directors elect the secretary.

The city's share of the mulct tax on cigarettes, which is now due from every dealer in the city who has been handling cigarettes since October 1 will amount to between $12,000 and $15,000. The city receives one-half of the tax collected. It is estimated that 300 retail dealers in the city have been handling "coffin nails" and each one will be asked to pay the quarterly $75.

It is announced by attorneys representing the saloon and anti-saloon interests that a mutual agreement has been reached in the statement of consent decision and appeal from the board of supervisors, and the matter will not come up until the January term. This practically prevents efforts toward closing the saloons again until the middle of January, when it is expected the case will be docketed. A representative of the anti-saloon forces says, however, the matter will be pushed with all vigor at the January term.

W. B. Martin, secretary of state elect, has decided to appoint D. A. Hites as his deputy, thus insuring the retention of Mr. Hites in the office he now holds under Secretary Dobson. At the same time G. S. Gilbertson, the treasurer of state elect, announced the appointment of John McQuiston of Des Moines, county auditor of Polk county, as his deputy.

Dr. Lewis Schooler, chairman of the general army post committee, has sent word to Captain J. A. T. Hull that the committee has selected a site for an army post and has secured the money necessary for its purchase. The site selected is the Drisco-Denny property, located about three and one-half miles south of the business center of the city. The next step toward securing the post will be the appointment of a commission by the government to visit this city and decide if the army post committee's proposition is to be accepted. No one anticipates that there will be any objection. On the other hand, everyone who has been associated in any way with the movement expects the spring of 1901, or at least the early summer, to see an army post, composed of a regiment of cavalry, completely established and in full operation within walking distance of Des Moines. In establishing the post in this city the government will probably begin with an expenditure of a little less than $1,000,000. After it is established the money spent in its management will amount to over $50,000 a month.

The official figures show that the proposition to hold a convention to revise and amend the constitution was lost by 555 votes. The first rough draft of the official figures showed the convention had been carried by a narrow margin. But when the abstracts were checked over it was found there had been errors in transcribing the returns from the abstracts for the purpose of getting at official results. The chief source of the trouble was in the returns from Tama county. This had been credited with 1,000 too many votes for the convention, a "2" having been mistaken for a "3." The total vote cast for the convention according to the official figures was 176,337 and the total vote against it was 176,892. The official figures on the Titus amendment do not alter materially the semi-official figures given out, the majority for the amendment being upwards of 30,000.

Two handsome pieces of marble statuary, the busts of ex-Governor William Larrabee and Mrs. Larrabee, have arrived at the historical building. They are the gifts of the ex-governor to the historical department. Their arrival was an entire surprise to Curator Charles Aldrich, who is highly pleased at receiving them. They will occupy prominent places in the art room. The figures are of life size and are of the purest Parisian marble. They were sculptured at Florence, Italy, the sculptors being Pugi Freres, artists of that city All those who have seen the figures agree they are striking likenesses of ex-Governor Larrabee and his wife.

THE PLAN A FAILURE.

President Objects to Sultan's Method of Settling Our Claim.

Washington, Dec. 1.—Turkey will not be allowed to settle the American missionary claims pending against her under cover of a contract for a man-of-war to be placed in the United States as suggested in a cable from Constantinople. The decision of the president has been several times communicated to the sublime porte, but it persists in its suggestion. Charles Cramp, of the Cramp Ship Building company, who is here, said no contract for a cruiser for the Turkish government has been placed with his firm, nor were negotiations under way. Mr. Cramp referred to the recent visit to this country of a Turkish admiral who, he said, has inspected his yards at Philadelphia, but up to this time there had been no result.

The bishop of Liverpool has requested girls who are candidates for confirmation not to wear hairpins, as they prick his hands in the act of laying on of hands. When Dr. Creighton, the bishop of London, was recently asked how he solved a similar problem, he replied: "I confirm all the boys personally, and transfer those young porcupines to my suffragan, who is an old 'varsity oarsman, with the cast-iron hands of a blacksmith."

Sir F. Hastings Doyle, in his autobiography, relates how, during the fifties, Lord Halifax was walking with Lord Dundas, when the latter suddenly began to make hideous faces to such a degree that Lord Halifax became seriously alarmed and gasped out: "Shall I run for a doctor?" Lord Dundas gave a peremptory "No," as far as he was able. When he had recovered from his paroxysm, he said: "I was only in the agonies of trying not to sneeze. The awful court etiquette in regard to this matter made me really ill many a time. Nowadays I cannot, from long habit, really sneeze, but the sensation that brings about the sneezing simply agonizes me."

AN ENEMY TO DRINK.

One Woman Who Has Done a Great Deal to Put Down This Evil.

Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 3.—(Special)—When the Independent Order of Good Templars of Minnesota wanted a State Organizer they chose Mrs. Laura J. Smith, of 1217 West 33d Street, this city. The American Anti-Treat League also selected Mrs. Smith as National Organizer. The reason is not far to seek. This gifted woman has devoted her life to a battle against Drink and Drinking Habits. Her influence for good in Minnesota is and has been very far reaching.

About two years ago however, it seemed as if this noble woman would have to give up her philanthropic work. Severe pains in her back and under her shoulder blades, made life a burden and work impossible. Physicians were consulted, and they prescribed for Kidney Disease. Three month's treatment however, failed to give Mrs. Smith any relief. Her husband was much exercised, and cast about him for something that would restore his good wife to health and strength. He heard of the cures effected by Dodd's Kidney Pills, and advised her to try them, which she did. She is now a well woman and says:

"Two weeks after I commenced taking Dodd's Kidney Pills, I felt much better, and at the end of seven weeks was completely cured. I have had no recurrence of the trouble, but I take a pill off and on, and find that it keeps me in good health."

Dodd's Kidney Pills are for sale by all dealers at 50 cents a box.

They are easily within the reach of all, and no woman can afford to suffer, when such a simple, and sure Remedy is at hand.

Children may drink it with great benefit. 15 cents and 25 cents per package. Try it. Ask for GRAIN-O.

Forsaking all Others

By AMELIA DUGHEMIN

CHAPTER I.

"Some women are born to daughters-in-law, some achieve daughters-in-law, and some have daughters-in-law thrust upon them. I am of the last category," said Gladys, in her whimsical way. "And really, Louise, there are times when I am crushed by the weight of the unexpected boon."

Mrs. Leonard looked indulgently at the dainty creature reclining in an easy chair that would have swallowed her quite but for the assertive nature of the gown that fell in airy billows on footstool and floor. Mrs. Atherton was always well dressed, as a pretty woman should be. In her flowing draperies of blue, matching the color of her eyes, with blush roses at her breast and in her red golden hair, she looked fair and young. Strangers would have set her age at seven and twenty, perhaps; but grim old Time, for once giving no hint of his vicinity, was checking off the minutes that must soon complete her avowed seven and thirty years of life.

"You knew Harvey would marry some day."

"Not when he was a stripling under twenty. You may say I needn't have consented to the match. Well, all my life I had given him everything he cried for if he cried long enough, so when he wanted this new toy, after making myself nearly ill by opposing him, I yielded, as usual. Beside, what could I do?" she added more seriously. "He was infatuated with Helen. When a handsome woman of twenty-five resolves to capture a boy of nineteen, it is useless to try to offset her influence. And there was the father."

"You think he helped matters on?"

"Yes. A quack doctor of no social standing, swamped by debt and burdened with five daughters, would use any means to see one of them advantageously married. He of course regarded Harvey as my heir, and even then he had a fine situation. Rockville has grown from a village to a manufacturing town since I came here, and well educated young men—for several years I had private masters for Harvey, as I dared not send him away to college—find no difficulty in gaining positions of trust. The boy was in advance of his age; had I opposed him he might have been persuaded into a runaway match. He thought I would forgive him anything."

"I'm afraid women are not successful in rearing boys."

"I know they are not. We are too indulgent, too afraid of hurting our darlings, and in the end they become our masters. Then, too, they are so accustomed to being led by a woman that they surrender to the first designing one they meet, thinking her all she seems to be. Understand, I have no fault to find with Helen in her relation to Harvey. She is a devoted wife and mother, exemplary in all her ways. She helps the poor and goes regularly to church. She is moral as—well, as a copy book, and has a trite saying for every emergency. She was the cornerstone of her shiftless father's household, and is kind enough to wish to be the entire foundation of mine."

"That is where the trouble begins?"

"Naturally, Phebe Tomlinson has kept my house ever since I had one to keep, and resents interference. I uphold my old servant. Helen thinks me weak, frivolous and extravagant. She has persuaded Harvey that I am a mere butterfly, unable to manage my own affairs. You know I am nothing of the kind; yet every day finds me yielding to some new encroachment. Having admitted the nose of the camel I must make room for the whole body, and be crushed to the wall unless I fight for footing. I am not brave, and rather than fight, I give way; but the time is at hand when I must assert myself or become a cipher. And I dread it."

"Never mind, dear. If they go too far, come to New York. You must do so without fear now death has removed the chief cause of your Quixotic exile."

Mrs. Atherton sat erect in her chair and looked cautiously about the room.

"I can hardly realize I am really free from that haunting terror," she said in a lowered tone. "If our deliverance had only come before Harvey's engagement everything might have been altered."

"He does not suspect?"

"Oh, no! How should he? Phebe and I are the only ones who know. But you can see how many considerations forced me to countenance the marriage, and not drive the boy to extremes, lest worse should befall."

"I think you were wise, Gladys. Yet, since Harvey really is married, he needs you no longer. You have lived in this quiet town long enough. As you no longer entertain, you must find Rockville very dull."

"Helen does not care for company," said Gladys, apologetically. "Her health was precarious last winter, and now that baby has come she dislikes to have the routine of the house disturbed. She receives only side door callers, her sisters and their friends, whom she entertains in her own apartments at any hour of the day or evening. Harvey seems satisfied with the society she provides, and has lost interest in his old associates. So I'm obliged to 'flock by myself.'"

Mrs. Leonard laughed and rose to go.

"Well, try it for a few months longer. Then, if matters do not change come to the city. Your money will enable you to live in good style there, and enter society. It is your money, Gladys," she added significantly. "Never forget that. Consider well before you make further sacrifices to an overstrained sense of duty. You should never have so immolated yourself had I known your intention in time."

Mrs. Atherton did not answer as she walked with her friend to the door, encountering on the threshold a tall, handsome young woman about to enter.

"Can you see me now, mother?" the newcomer asked, when Mrs. Leonard had taken her departure. "I have a little matter of business to discuss with you."

Gladys hated business. She looked ruefully at her son's wife as with a great rustling of crisp skirts she took a seat at a small onyx table by the window and produced a number of neatly folded bills and receipts, with a brand new account book whose pages were headed by various names inscribed in the plainest of writing, and followed by beautifully shaped figures. Even on a check Gladys detested figures.

"Harvey and I were talking over household matters last night, mother," began Helen, in the concise tones that so well matched her clear cut personality, "and decided that in future it would be best for us—you and me—to examine the tradesmen's long-drawn accounts every quarter."

"Why?" asked Gladys, evidently disturbed by the suggestion. "I have perfect faith in the people I deal with."

"I know you have; too much, perhaps. Our bills last quarter were very high."

"There were additional persons in the house. Baby Harvey brought his own court with him," said Gladys, smiling. "However, I have no objection to you taking the accounts of Tomlinson. I never meddled with such matters in my life."

"That is really nothing to be proud of, mother," replied Helen, with a deprecating smile. "As for Mrs. Tomlinson, how do we know she is not in league with the tradesfolk? Such cases are not unusual."

"I would sooner suspect myself than Phebe," said Gladys, her soft voice hardening. "She has been in the family for over thirty years."

"And so, if she takes what she considers her commission, regards herself safe. Really, mother——"

"Oh, Helen, I wish you wouldn't call me that!" cried Gladys, who found her daughter-in-law's manner unusually irritating.

"Why, how else should I address you?" asked Helen, compressing her full red lips.

"By my name, Gladys, or Madam Gladys, if you like. Harvey always called me so before his marriage."

"A mother should not be ashamed of the proudest of all titles. I have been taught to venerate my elders."

Gladys was an amiable woman, but she had a pretty one's vanity. At this allusion to her seniority over the speaker she lost her temper.

"Don't be absurd!" she retorted. "There is no common sense reason why a woman of your age should venerate one of mine. When you call me mother you make us both appear ridiculous. One should regard the fitness of things."

"What shall I call you then?" Helen steadily repeated.

"Anything but that. Mrs. Atherton will do if you really decline my previous suggestion," said Gladys, carelessly. She was warming to the fray, and felt some pride in her new found courage. "And now I must ask you to excuse me. I ride at three."

Helen methodically replaced her papers in the account book.

"Shall you have time to attend to this matter when you return, Mrs. Atherton?" she coldly asked.

Gladys almost flinched; the deliberate utterance of her name seemed like a douche of cold water. Before she had time to rally her forces the door was thrown open with the abrupt movement that indicates a perturbed spirit, and a clumsily made woman of fifty, with keen, gray eyes and a shrewd, plain face, entered.

"Now, now, now, Mrs. Harvey, what are you worrying the mistress about?" she asked, in a deep voice roughened by a provincial burr. "She's not to be troubled with business."

"Phebe, be quiet! I'm ashamed of you!" cried Gladys, looking even more disturbed than Helen, now covered with angry confusion. "My son's wife is at liberty to do as she pleases in these matters."

"I'm not saying otherways; she's welcome to all you have, no doubt; it's her that complains of the leaks, not me; but if she wants to stop them, I'll show her where to begin. Fruit out of season, and wine and cordials, soon count up to a pretty penny."

"You are insolent," said Helen, with difficulty controlling her anger. "You must be aware that what I send to my father—most of it would otherwise be wasted—is for distribution among his poor patients."

CHAPTER II.

Phebe grunted disbelievingly, but at an imperative sign from Mrs. Atherton left the room.

"You will, I am sure, pardon Phebe's freedom of speech, Helen; she regards herself as a privileged person," said Gladys, apologetically. "So far as I am concerned, I feel indebted to you for becoming my almoner. Indeed, I am perfectly satisfied with things as they are in all ways. Phebe keeps the establishment as I desire it to be kept, and must be left alone. I shall not meddle with her province and I advise you not to do so. You have seen how she resents interference."

"Then you will not look at the accounts?" asked Helen. She had completely recovered her self poise, and was again calmly assertive.

"No. You really must excuse me."

"Very well. I am sorry you consider my well meant offer interference. Do not forget that I acted on my husband's suggestion."

"I have no doubt your intentions were of the best. I admit, too, that I may live extravagantly; but I have been used to luxury all my life. I like it, and I can afford it. That, I think, covers the question."

She rose, indicating that the interview was at an end; but Helen had still something to say, and being a resolute young woman, proceeded to say it.

"And do you owe nothing to your son and to his sons after him?" she slowly asked. "My dear father has often told me that he is but the steward of his children's property; as all he has will one day be theirs, he owes it to them to limit his expenses as much as possible. Have you no such realization of a plain duty?"

Gladys stood for a moment as if petrified; then her outraged feelings found vent in a stinging reply.

"I was not aware that Doctor Blake ever had a dollar he could honestly call his own," she said with unmistakable contempt.

Helen turned scarlet. Her anger seemed almost to suffocate her. She put her hand to her throat, which throbbed violently. Gladys shrank from her fierce look, terrified at the demon she had stirred. But the poor doctor's daughter had learned self-mastery in a trying school, and after one stormy moment was herself again.

"I thank you for your kind and charitable thought, madam," she said calmly, and with a bow left the room, leaving her conqueror to endure what was worse than the pangs of defeat—the consciousness that she had not acted with the generosity which usually characterized her every action.

Standing at the drawing room window half an hour afterward, with her baby is her arms, Helen saw Gladys gallop off, followed by a groom in unassuming livery. She disapproved of this groom as she disapproved of the housekeeper and Gladys' own maid. They were all unnecessary luxuries. To the debt-haunted doctor's daughter lavish expenditure seemed almost wicked—the more so that one day the money which made it possible would belong by right to her children.

She stood looking discontentedly into the fair garden, now rioting in roses, waiting for Harvey's appearance. Every day found her at this window, ready to greet him with a smile while he was still at a distance, and with her baby in her arms, her beautiful eyes glowing with wifely love and motherly pride, she made a picture fair enough to justify young Atherton's infatuation for her. She was his world, and had been ever since her slow glance sought and lingered on him two years before, prematurely kindling the dormant fires of his nature. From that moment all things in earth and heaven were as naught to him when compared with his peerless Helen.

MORSELS of WIT & HUMOR.

A Fish Story.

From the Washington Star: "The biggest I ever caught," began the story-teller, a scholarly looking party, who evidently knew more about schoolbooks than flybooks——

"Got away," interrupted a thin-faced little man with a nose like a shingle.

"I'm no liar," the story-teller flared up. "This is a true story, and I'm prepared to swear to it. It was in the year '89, when we had the hottest summer——"

"I didn't know the summer of '89 was so very hot," said a man in a weatherbeaten straw hat.

"If all you didn't know," said the story-teller, "was piled on top of you you'd be flatter than a flounder and deader than a mackerel. As I was saying, in the summer of '89 a party of us went to upper Canada on a fishing expedition. It wasn't hot up there a little bit. On the contrary, it was so cold that the ice froze the first night we got there."

"Gosh!" exclaimed the little man with a shingle nose.

"As I was saying," said the story-teller, showing genuine gameness, "it froze the first night we got to our fishing ground, but we went out the next morning just the same, and I hadn't been fishing more than fifteen minutes when I got a bite that I thought was going to pull the boat under. Let go of my rod and it went scooting through the water, but I soon got it again, and the fight over the water and under it began in earnest. I hadn't been fishing for a long time and was nervous as the dickens, but I had some sense left, and I didn't intend to let that fish get away if I could help it. I was so excited that I never did know how long I tussled with it, but in time I landed him in the boat, and he was the biggest one I ever caught in my life. I was so ex——"

"How much did he weigh?" eagerly inquired the man in the straw hat as he drew up close to the story-teller.

"Exactly half a pound," said the story-teller, as serious as a sermon.

"You think you are dern smart, don't you?" sniffed the little man with the shingle nose, as he got up and walked outside where he could get more breathing room.

Story of a New Cophetua.

From the Cleveland Plain Dealer: The heir of the gilded household had just proposed to the pretty kitchen maid. She regarded him with a steady glance as she polished off her rounded arms with a coarse towel.

"I must have every Thursday out," she said.

"Yes," he murmured.

"And every Sunday afternoon."

"Yes."

"And every night as soon as the dinner things are done up."

"Ye-es."

"How many in the family?"

"Only you and I."

"Any children?"

"N-n-no."

"Much company?"

"Very little."

"Any furnace to tend?"

"No."

"Hired man to do all the outside work?"

"Yes."

"What make of piano do you use?"

"The Bangaway."

"Let me think. Ah, yes, I shall insist upon having the breakfast room to receive my beaux in."

"Well, by thunder, you don't get it!" cried the gilded heir as he turned and stalked away.

So the maid haughtily rolled up her sleeves and went back to her work.

$1. Per Annum In Advance.

A gentleman in Ames who undoubtedly thought the country newspapers were getting too much toll for the use of a column of advertising, sent a letter to the Ladies Home Journal asking their rates for advertising. The answer he received stated that $4.000 was charged for a single page for one issue. His curiousity is now appeased and he takes to the country editor like a fly to a syrup barrel.

The time of the year is coming when clubbing propositions will scattered throughout the country galore. We have the inside track on this kind of business and can do you some good in helping you spend your money judiciously and at a great saving. Will guarantee to get you reading for 1901 cheaper than you can get it any where else. This may seem like an extravgant claim, but is the truth. Before you buy, come to or address the Klemme Times office. "Money saved is money earned," now if you want to earn 25, 50 or $1.00 on your next year's reading don't pass us by.

Some of our denizens seem to exercise a great amount of freedom when it comes to borrowing things without the asking for them. A number of instances have come into notice just recently in reference to taking things from another which one has no right to. Do not show to much liberty in the "placing on of hands" where they have no right, or where they have no business. There is a limit where borrowing things ceases to be borrowing and becomes plain offhand stealing. Beware lest the law takes hold of you and persues it's rightful course. If you want any thing just remember this "Ask and it shall be given unto you."

The attention of some of our young men and boys is hereby called to the depot waiting room. Every evening a few moments before the south bound passenger comes in they congregate there and make the room very disagreeable by filling it with tobacco smoke. Now the men do not mind this so much but the women cannot stand it where there are a dozen men and boys pulling for all they are worth at a cob or clay pipe, and oozing forth great volumes of unhealthy odors. Expectorating tobacco juice all over the floor does not look well either. Besides using some obscene language which accidently passes their ungarded lips they are continaally doing other petty meanesses of no import whatever. Not for the agent's sake, nor for our sake but for woman's sake be a little more manly in such public places. It will redound to your credit twofold.

A NARROW ESCAPE. A GRATEFUL WOMAN.

MRS. F. J. LYNCH, GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Mrs. F. J. Lynch, 324 South Division street, Grand Rapids, Mich., writes: The Peruna Medicine Company, Columbus, Ohio:

Gentlemen:—"I earnestly recommend Peruna to any suffering women as it cures quickly. I had a most persistent cough which nothing seemed to cure. Two bottles of Peruna did more for me than all the doctors seemed to do. In a couple of weeks I found myself in excellent health, and have been enjoying it ever since. Hence I look on Peruna as a true friend to women."

MRS. F. J. LYNCH.

Chronic Coughs and Colds Are Catarrhal Diseases.

Catarrh Is the Continual Scourge of Christendom.

Catarrh hovers ominously over every city, and nestles treacherously in every hamlet. It flies with vampire wings from country to country and casts a black shadow of despair over all lands. Its stealthy approach and its lingering stay makes it a dread to the physician and a pest to the patient.

It changes the merry laugh of childhood to the wheezy breathing of croup, and the song of the blushing maiden to the hollow cough of consumption. In its withering grasp the rounded form of the fond wife and mother becomes gaunt and spectral, and the healthy flush of manhood turns to the sallow, haggard visage of the invalid.

Cough takes the place of conversation, speech gives way to spitting, the repulsive odors of chronic catarrh poison the kiss of the fondest lovers, and thickened membranes bedim sight, impair hearing and destroy taste.

Like the plague-stricken Egyptians a cry of distress has gone out from every household, and the mildew of woe clings to every hearthstone.

Catarrh in some form, catarrh in some stage lurks as an enemy in the slightest cough or cold and finishes its fiendish work in heart disease and consumption.

No tissue, function, or organ of the body escapes its ravages; muscles wither, nerves shatter, and secretions dry up under its blighting presence. So stubborn and difficult of cure is this disease that to invent a remedy to cure chronic catarrh has been the ambition of the greatest minds in all ages. Is it therefore any wonder that the vast multitude of people who have been cured of chronic catarrh by Peruna are so lavish in their praise of this remedy? That the discovery of Peruna has made the cure of catarrh a practical certainty is not only the testimony of the people, but many medical men declare it to be true.

As a drug store in this age of the world is incomplete without Peruna, it can be obtained anywhere with directions for use. A complete guide for the prevention and cure of catarrh and all diseases of winter, sent free by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, Ohio.

NEWS IN GENERAL

STATIST DESIRES PEACE.

English Financial Journal Wants Boer War Stopped.

London, Dec. 3.—The Statist proposes that the government shall begin negotiations with Commandant General Botha and General De Wet to bring the war to a close. As the Boer leaders might misunderstand the motive of an overture from the military authorities, it suggests that the highest civil authority in Cape Town should begin the negotiations, if not Sir Alfred Milner, then the chief justice of Cape Colony, or even Mr. J. H. Homeier.

This great financial journal leads up to its proposal by an analysis of the situation in South Africa and says:

"We are losing in every way, losing in prestige and losing in life. We are seeing our South African possessions plunged into greater distress and the opinion is gaining ground abroad that we are incapable of bringing the struggle to a satisfactory termination."

Military incompetence is alleged and the Statist avers that military harshness should be avoided and the Boers be conciliated.

"If men like Botha and De Wet voluntarily surrender and bind themselves not to act against us in the future," the Statist will say, "is there any good reason why a promise should not be given not to send them out of the country? Mr. J. B. Robinson suggests that Botha and De Wet should be invited to take seats in the legislative council that would be established. The suggestion is worthy of approval. The Boers should not be excluded, even from the beginning, from anything which can safely be given them."

CHINESE MAY WIN VICTORY.

Spectator Forecasts Their Triumph Over the Allies.

Paris, Dec. 1.—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Peking says the French minister there, M. Pichon, is authorized, if all the ministers are in accord, to sign and hand to the Chinese plenipotentiaries the positions adopted by the diplomats at the Chinese capitol, though, before the presentation of the positions, the dispatch adds, they will probably undergo fresh modifications.

London, Dec. 1.—The Spectator, in a striking article dealing with the Chinese crisis, expresses the opinion that the most recent developments at Peking foreshadow a Chinese victory over the allies.

"The quarrel has been brought to the test of force," it says, "and force on the civilized side has proved insufficient. This result is mainly due to the attitude of Russia and the United States. If China escapes with the payment of a small indemnity and many promises on paper, as seems not unlikely, since Germany and Great Britain may not be willing to incur the expenditure and risk involved in persisting in their demands, it will be equivalent to a victory for China, for nothing has occurred which will convince the Chinest that their mighty empress has been defeated or that Europe can avenge any future massacres."

KITCHENER REPORTS LOSSES.

Defeated Viljoin and Erasmus, But Had Heavy Losses.

London, Dec. 3.—The first dispatch from Gen. Kitchener in the capacity of commander-in-chief of the British forces in South Arrica was dated Bloemfontein, November 30, and confirmed the report of fighting between Gen. Pilcher and Gen. Dewet, and adds that Gen. Knox is in touch with the Dewet force near Castleburg, twelve miles north of Betheuli; that the Boers attacked Boshoff the 28th and renewed the 29th, but were repulsed without British loss. Gen. Kitchener also reports that November 28 and 29 savage fighting occurred officers were wounded, and five men with the Viljoen and Erasmus commands; that he drove the Boers to positions in the vicinity of Rietfontien. The British casualities were heavy. Col. Lloyd and five other killed and fifty wounded.

CANAL RIGHTS ARE SECURED

Secretary Hay Gets Concessions From Government of Nicaragua.

Washington, Dec. 3—Secretary Hay, for the government of the United States, and Senor Correa, Nicaraguan minister, signed a treaty whereby the latter government concedes to the United States the necessary rights and privileges within her bestowal for the construction of the Nicaraguan canal.

ROUGH ON MORMONS.

Hungarian Peasants Not Pleased With Mormon Elders.

Vienna, Dec. 1.—Advices received from Temesver, South Hungary, record rough treatment received there by two Mormon elders emissaries from Salt Lake, Utah. They had hardly commenced to enunciate their views on polygamy when the audience stormed the platform and ejected the pair from the hall. One of them was compelled to run the gauntlet of 300 irate citizens, armed with sticks, straps and knotted cords and shod with hobnailed shoes. He was afterwards stripped to the waist and thrashed by half a dozen matrons. The second Mormon was ducked in a horse pond. Finally the elders were rescued by the police. The minister of the interior has prohibited further Mormon attempts to proselyte as being a danger to the well being of the state.

TYPHOON AT GUAM.

United States Cruiser Yosemite Lost During the Storm.

New York, Nov. 29.—Advices have been received here from Manila that the island of Guam was visited by a typhoon on November 23, which wrecked thousands of homes, among them being the headquarters of Governor Schroeder. The towns of Indrajan and Terraforo were swept away, and it is estimated that hundreds of the native population in various parts of the island met their deaths. The cocoanut crops were rendered worthless and the vegetation of the island killed by salt water. The storm came up in the forenoon and swept across the island with amazing rapidity.

The United States auxiliary cruiser Yosemite, which was anchored adjacent to the collier Justin, dragged her anchor and was driven around 150 yards from the reef, her bows being crushed in. A launch with a crew of five men had previously left the ship to endeavor to find a safe anchorage for the vessel, the indications being that anchors would not hold her where she was. The men were not seen after they left the ship and it is practically certain that the heavy sea which the storm kicked up swamped the launch. The bodies of Coxswain F. Swanson and Seaman George Anhel were recovered after the typhoon subsided. All efforts to save the ship were futile and she was finally scuttled and abandoned.

BOERS GAIN BIG VICTORY

Capture Entire British Garrison at Dewetsdorp.

London, Nov. 30.—Lord Roberts cables from Johannesburg, under date of Wednesday, November 28:

"The Dewetsdorp garrison of two guns of the Sixty-eighth field battery, with detachments of the Gloucestershire regiment, the Highland light infantry and Irish rifles, 400 in all, surrendered at 5:30 p. m., November 23. Our losses were fifteen men killed and forty-two wounded, including Major Hansen and Captain Digby. The enemy is said to be 2,500 strong. Four hundred men were dispatched from Edenburg to relieve Dewetsdorp, but they did not succeed in reaching there in time. Knox joined this force and found Dewetsdorp evacuated. Seventy-five sick and wounded had been left there. Knox pursued and is reported to have successfully engaged Steyn and De Wet near Vaalbank, November 27. They retired west and southwest. Knox's messenger failed to get through, so I have no details."

London, Nov. 30.—The disaster at Dewetsdorp has sent a thrill of alarm through Great Britain. The censorship continues so strict that there is no hope of arriving at a clear conception of the actual position of affairs in South Africa. For instance, independent accounts of the subsequent proceedings and the capture of Dewetsdorp give ample details, not omitting to announce the capture of two Boer wagons and a quantity of loot, but there is not the slightest mention of the surrender of 400 British troops and two guns, which were not even disabled, inasmuch as the Boers were able to use them against the British relief forces.

The ubiquitous De Wet seems again to have gotten away, and, so far, there is no news that the captured British have been liberated.

Taking into consideration the enigmatical military situation north of the Orange river, the smouldering rebellion in Cape Colony, the rumors that France has promised Kruger to press arbitration on England if he is able to obtain the support of Germany and that Lord Kitchener after all is not to be given the chief command in South Africa, the British government will meet the new parliament next week at an excedeingly inopportune moment.

GOLD RECORD IS BROKEN.

Treasury Holds the Largest Stock in the Country's History.

Washington, Dec. 1.—The largest stock of gold coin and bullion ever held in the United States is now accumulated in the treasury and its branches. The total has been rising steadily during the whole of the present year and is now $474,108,336, or about $76,000 greater than at the close of 1899.

This gold is not all the direct property of the United States, but is held against outstanding gold certificates. The amount of these, less the amount in the treasury and its branches, was $230,755,809 Wednesday. All the remaining gold, amounting to about $243,000,000, belongs to the treasury as a part of the reserve fund of $150,000,000. The influx of gold into the treasury comes partly from the new gold from the Klondike and other mines, but its retention is due to the pressure for currency, which leads to the acceptance of gold certificates and other paper money in preference to coin.

THIRTEEN KILLED OUTRIGHT.

Fifty Others Injured in a San Francisco Accident.

San Francisco, Nov. 30.—Thirteen people were killed and fully fifty badly injured by the collapse of the roof of the Pacific glass works, on Fifteenth street yesterday, while it was crowded with men and boys watching a football game on the field adjoining.

About seventy-five people fell through the roof upon the red-hot furnaces and glass vats below. All were horribly burned and it is feared that in addition to the thirteen deaths already reported, there will be several more.

WHY MRS. PINKHAM

Is Able to Help Sick Women When Doctors Fail.

How gladly would men fly to woman's aid did they but understand a woman's feelings, trials, sensibilities, and peculiar organic disturbances.

Those things are known only to women, and the aid a man would give is not at his command.

To treat a case properly it is necessary to know all about it, and full information, many times, cannot be given by a woman to her family physician. She cannot bring herself to tell everything, and the physician is at a constant disadvantage. This is why, for the past twenty-five years, thousands of women have been confiding their troubles to Mrs. Pinkham, and whose advice has brought happiness and health to countless women in the United States.

MRS. G. H. CHAPPELL.

Mrs. Chappell, of Grant Park, Ill., whose portrait we publish, advises all suffering women to seek Mrs. Pinkham's advice and use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as they cured her of inflammation of the ovaries and womb; she, therefore, speaks from knowledge, and her experience ought to give others confidence. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is absolutely free.

CONSUMPTION

STORIETTES.

One of Mr. Whistler's art students at the schools in Paris the other day asked the master very seriously if he thought that she might paint Nature exactly as she saw her. Mr. Whistler very promptly replied: "There is no earthly reason why you should not paint Nature exactly as you see her, so long, my dear lady, as you do not see Nature exactly as you paint her!"

The Cornwallis Wests have not yet become reconciled to the marriage of their youthful son to the widowed Lady Randolph Churchill, and have on various occasions made her feel the brunt of their wrath. But the bride of but a few months does not resent this treatment, for she, too, is a mother with two sons of a marriageable age, to whom she is passionately devoted. "Why, of course, I can quite understand Mrs. Cornwallis West's annoyance." She is reported to have said to a group of friends the other day; 'how can she help feeling cross? I am sure I would be just as angry as possible if she had been a widow, and had attempted to marry my Winston."

In the flood of anecdotes which the bethrothal of Queen Wilhelmina has let loose, there is one wich shows that the youthful sovereign's aversion to Great Britain does not date from the beginning of the Transvaal war. It is said that when but a little maiden she was one day undergoing a geopraphy lesson, and her governess asked her to draw a map of northern Europe. Holland naturally loomed large in the chart, while the British Isles, a mere dot, were somewhere in the Arctic region. The governess insisted an a readjustment of the powers. Reluctantly her pupil brought the hated country into a more temperate zone. "But I simply won't make it any larger," she said.

Ambassador Choate was recently the guest of Canon Scott, the rector of Lavenham, Suffolk, which boasts of one of the finest and oldest parish churches in England. While going over the church, Mr. Choate was much struck with its beauty, and, American fashion, kept asking his host the age of this and the other thing. That screen must be very ancient?" he said. "Oh, yes, it is centuries old," was the reply. "And this paneling on the door?" "Is quite modern," Canon Scott blandly answered; "it was put up only forty years before the discovery of America, you know." The American embassador was immensely tickled, and swallowed his patriotic wrath at the reply.

SENATOR DAVIS IS DEAD

He Passed Away After an Illness of Over Two Months.

St. Paul, Mnn., Nov. 28.—United States Senator Cushman Kellogg Davis, chairman of the committee on foreign relations of the senate, died at his home in this city, last evenng at 8:48 o'clock after an illness of two months. He has suffered greatly during his sickness, and gradually sank away, being unconscious for several hours before death, and, so far as could be known, suffering no pain.

For more than a week it has been known that the death of Senator Davis was certain to occur within a short time. Although the bulletins issued by Dr. Stone from day to day made no positive statement to this effect, they nevertheless gave tne impression that the case was a hopeless one.

However, the announcement came as a profound shock to the friends and fellow townsmen of the distinguished statesman, who had been hoping against hope. The senator's devoted wife, who had been in constant attendance upon his sick bed, had never lost hope. The senator, in his moments of lucidity, expressed a strong determination to recover, and within a week told United States District Attorney Evans, who had been admitted to see him, that he was positive he would soon be well.

The serious kidney affection which developed on November 11 had refused to yield to treatment, and his weakened frame was unable to withstand the poisons left in his system by these organs failing to perform their functions. On Sunday, November 18, a serious change for the worse was noted, and from that time on it was evident that he could not recover.

Mr. Davis was elected United States senator in 1887. Throughout his first term he was chairman of the committee on pensions. As a member of the committee on territories, Senator Davis led the fight for the admission of the Dakotas to statehood, making his first speech in the senate on that subject. At the beginning of his second term Senator Davis was placed on the committee on foreign relations and when Senator Sherman was transferred to the cabinet of President McKinley, Senator Davis was placed at the head of that important committee. In 1895-'96 many friends of the senator pressed his name for the presidential nomination, but before the state convention to name delegates met, he withdrew and McKinley delegates were sent from Minnesota. During the past four years Senator Davis' position as chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate and later as one of the Paris peace commissioners have kept him prominently before the public of all nations. He was re-elected without opposition in 1889 for his third term.

FEEDING 3,000 PRISONERS.

Filipinos Say That Aguinaldo is Doing So

London, Dec. 3.—There is a noticeable incursion of Filipinos into London, and the Paris report, subsequently denied, that Agoncillo, Aguinaldo's agent in Europe, was contemplating going to Hong Kong to reorganize there the Filipino transport and resupply the Filipinos with munitions of war, has given rise to the belief that the Filipinos in Europe are contemplating a new campaign. A representative of the Associated Press interviewed one of the most prominent members of the European junta, who had just returned from Paris and Madrid. He said:

"We are planning no new campaign. There is no reason why Agoncillo should go to Hong Kong to give the Filipinos a further supply of the munitions of war. The fact that Agoncillo has just leased a home in Paris shows he intends to remain there and watch events. The reports of our committees at Kobe, Yokohama, Macao, Batavia, Hong Kong and Bangkok show that they are all working well. This is also evidenced by the fact that 10,000 rifles were smuggled into Manila last month. The war is no nearer the end than ever. Filipino resources are still great, as can be judged by the fact that Aguinaldo is continuing to keep and feed 3,000 Spanish prisoners."

GUNBOAT SENT TO MOROCCO.

Washington Authorities Propose to Collect Indemnity at Once.

Washington, Dec. 3.—The state department has sent instructions to United States Consul Gunmore at Tangiers, Morocco, to proceed to the capital of that country as fast as possible on a man-of-war to present a fresh claim of the United States for indemnity on account of the murder of Marcus Ezaguin, a naturalized American citizen, last June. The warship, which will probably be the Kentucky, will be recalled from Smyrna for the purpose, and will convey the consul from Tangiers to Mazagan, which is the nearest port to Fez, the capital of Morocco.

WOES OF WORKERS.

The American man or woman is industrious. Our leisure class is small, our working world very large. Many of our leading citizens of great wealth are hard workers. Our laboring classes are found in herds and hordes in the "hives of industry." What is all this work for? In most cases it is for daily bread, in many for maintenance of others. Great numbers also work to acquire wealth. Some for great commercial prominence. Some to preserve intact a splendid inheritance. Necessity, generosity and ambition are the inspiration of all classes of industry, and the object of every one falls to the ground when ill-health attacks him.

Maintaining health is the most vital thing in the world for workers of every class, and the usefulness of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, as a strengthener of the constitutional and vital powers, is beyond all question. This great remedy enters into partnership with Nature and helps human beings do their work without giving up to premature decay. The strain of work is on the minds of some, on the bodies of others, but the nourishing of either, or both, is in the nerves and blood. Nervura acts directly on the fountains of health and its strengthening power is wonderful.

Dr. Greene's NERVURA for the Blood and Nerves.

What does the worker do when some chronic trouble manifests itself? He takes some stimulant or something which is designed for temporary effect, and simply weakens his already overworked system. How different from this is the work of Nervura! How beautiful its support to the natural powers! Without shock of any kind its purely vegetable elements seek out the weak spots and build them up. Immediately the circulation of the blood improves and the sluggish elements are expelled. The nerves are quieted, the quality of the blood is enriched and the new and strengthening tide communicates itself to every muscle of the body.

Mr. JOHN D. SMITH, Electrician for the Thomson-Houston Electric Co., of Lynn, Mass., says:

"When a man has been sick and is cured, it is his duty to tell others about it, that they, too, may get well. Three years ago I had been working almost night and day, could not eat regularly, and got only a few hours' sleep at night. No man can stand that long, and I soon began to be prostrated. I could not sleep when I tried, and my food would not stay on my stomach. I was in a terrible condition, and was much alarmed.

"I went to doctors, but they did me no good. Learning of the wonderful good done by Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, I determined to try it. It cured me completely of all my complaints. I eat heartily and sleep well, thanks to this splendid medicine. I believe it to be the best remedy in existence."

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give all health seekers his counsel free of charge. His office is at 35 West 14th Street, New York City, and his advice may be secured by personal call or by letter through the mail; no charge is made in either case. The worn-out in body, mind, or sexual powers will get prompt help from Dr. Greene. His advice is absolutely confidential and is free to all.

VOLUME VI. KLEMME, IOWA, THURSDAY, DEC. 13, 1900. NUMBER 20

New Lines Of The Popular Burlington Cedar Rapids and Northern Railway.

Within the present year the "Cedar Rapids Route" will add to it's already extensive system 130 miles of new track, entering the very richest portion of southern Minnesota. The line from Worthington to Hardwick, Minn. with it's four prosperous towns is in full opperation. The grading on the Germania-Albert Lee line, passing through Faribault, Freeborn, Steele and Rice counties, is practically completed, and the four new towns on this branch are already started and doing remarkably well.

The line between Albert Lee and Faribaul', Minn, is being extended north at the rate of over one mile per day and is expected to reach Owatonna, and perhaps Faribault, this year. The most important town on this line will be Ellendale, located midway between Elbert Lee and Owatonna. It is the purpose of the Company to make Ellendale THE town, and no other towns between Albert Lee and Owatonna. The location is three-fourths of a mile west of the Cooly ville Creamery, near the south line of steele county, and in the heart of the very best best dairy district in Minnesota.

It is the policy of companies generally to locate towns too near each other for profitable commercial enterprises. Ellendale is an exception, and has more than double the territory of the ordinary locations. Examine the map and see the very large territory tributary to Ellendale. There is no better country in the northwest than the northern portion of Freeborn and the southern portion of Steele counties, Minnesota. The farmers have been anxiously waiting for a convenient market.

There are needed: Banks, Dry Goods Store, Drug Store, Hardware Store, Furniture Store, Grocery Store, General Store, Harness shop, Barber shop, Restaurant, Blacksmith shop, Agricultural Implement warehouse, Wagon shop, Photographer, Hotel, Newspaper and printing office, Lumber yard, Shoe store, Bakery, Jewelry Store, Clothing store, Millinery store, Livery barn, Meat market, Insurance agent, In professional line: Attorney Doctor, Dentist.

Storm Windows at J. H. Queal & Co.

The IRL R. HICKS 1901 ALMANAC

Whatever may be said of the scientific causes upon which the Rev. Irl R Hicks bases his yearly forecasts of storm and weather, it is a remarkable fact that specific warning of every great storm, flood cold wave or drouth, have been plainly printed in his now famous Almanac for many years. The latest startling proof of this fact was the destruction of Galveston, Texas, on the very day named by Prof. Hicks in his 1900 Almanac, as one of disaster by storm along the gulf coasts. The 1901 almanac by far the finest, most complete and beautiful yet published is now ready. This remarkable book of near two hundred pages, splendidly illustrated with charts and half-tone engraving, goes as a premium to every subscriber who pays one dollar a year for Prof. Hic s' journal, Word and Works. The Almanac alone is sent prepaid for only 25c. Order from Word and Works Publishing Company 2201 Locust St. St. Louis Missouri.

District court doings.

The case of Stearns vs. Wolfkill an appeal from the chief justice of Magor township was tried to jury Wendesday. The case was given to the jury near evening with instruction to seat their verdict and court adjourned until Friday afternoon for Thanksgiving The grand jury doing likewise. On opening of court Friday the jury in the Stevens case returned a verdict for the defendent.....trail vs. Barker & Sons was called for trail but the plaintiff failed to appear and the case was dismissed for want of prosecution.

The criminal case of State vs. J. S. Knause indicted for obtaining property by false pretense was called Friday p. m. The defendent entered plea of guilty as charged in the indictment and sentance will be announced Dec. 6th..... The grand jury reported Saturday morning and having finished the work on hand was discharged for the year. The grand jury voted "no indictment" in the information against Ed. Haskins and the court discharged the defendant. ....Friday p. m. a jury was empaneled in the case of J. B. Clark vs. I. C & Western R'y Co. The railway crosses Mr Clark's farm near Corwith and this suit was to recover damage for the company more land than it was entitled to under it's right of way deed. The case was given to the jury Tuesday evening a verdict of $200 was returned for the plaintiff. The case of C. C. Dayton vs. John Love is on trial. This is a suit to recover $275. as the purchase price of a monument made at the plaintiff's works in Mason City. The defendant resists the suit and claims that the monument made and delivered was not the one ordered by him and the inscription on the stone was incorrect.—Signal acknowledge the authority of the United States, of which there are assuring indications.

It must be apparent that we will require army of about 60,000, and that during present conditions in Cuba and the Philippines President should have authority to increase the force to the present number of 100,000. included in this number authority should given to raise native troops in the Philippines up to 15,000, which the Taft commission believes will be more effective in detecting and suppressing guerrillas, assassins and drones than our own soldiers. The full discussion of this subject by the Secretary of W in his annual report is called to your earnest attention.

I renew the recommendations made in last annual message that the congress provide a special medal of honor for the volunteers, regulars, sailors and marines on duty in Philippines who voluntarily remained in service after their terms of enlistment expired.

I favor the recommendation of the Secretary of War for the detail of officers from line of the army when vacancies occur in adjutant general's department, inspector general's department, quartermaster general's department, subsistence department, pay department, ordnance department, and signal corps.

The army cannot be too highly commended for its faithful and effective service in active military operations in the field and the difficult work of civil administration.

POSTAL SERVICE GROWS.

The continued and rapid growth of the postal service is a sure index of the great and increasing business activity of the country. Its most striking new development is the extension of rural free delivery. This has come almost wholly within the last year. At the beginning of the fiscal year 1899-1900 the number of routes in operation was only 391, and most of these had been running less than twelve months. On the 15th of November, 1900, the number had increased to 2,614, reaching in forty-four states and territories and serving a population of 1,801,524. The number of applications now pending and awaiting action nearly equals all those granted up to the present time, and by the close of the current fiscal year about 4,000 routes will have been established, providing for the daily delivery of mail at the scattered homes of about 3,500 of rural population.

This service ameliorates the isolation of farm life, conduces to good roads and quickens and extends the dissemination of general information. Experience thus far has tended to allay the apprehension that it would be so expensive as to forbid its general adoption or make it a serious burden. Its actual application has shown that it increases postal receipts and can be accompanied by reductions in other branches of the service, so that the augmented revenues and the accomplished savings together materially reduce the net cost. The evidence which point to these conclusions are presented in detail in the annual report of the postmaster general, which, with its recommendations, is recommended to the consideration of the congress. The full development of this special service, however, requires such a large outlay of money that it should be undertaken only after a MESSAGE OF THE PRESIDENT.

Annual Address to the National Congress.

Congress Is Urged to Pass the Ship Subsidy Measure and the Army Bill and Attention Is Called to the Necessity of a Cable to Hawaii—Reduction of Revenue Asked.

The president's annual message to congress is in part as follows:

Washington, Dec. 3.—President McKinley's message to Congress contains 18,000 words. It is in part as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: At the outgoing of the old and the incoming of the new century you begin the last session of the fifty-sixth congress with evidences on every hand of individual and national prosperity and with proof of the growing strength and increasing power for good of republican institutions. Your countrymen will join with you in felicitation that American liberty is more firmly established than ever before, and that love for it and the determination to preserve it are more universal than at any former period of our history.

The republic was never so strong, because never so strongly intrenched in the hearts of the people as now. The Constitution, with few amendments, exists as it left the hands of its authors. The additions which have been made to it proclaim larger freedom and more extended citizenship. Popular government has demonstrated in its 124 years of trial here its stability and security, and its efficiency as the best instrument of national development and the best safeguard to human rights.

When the sixth congress assembled in November, 1800, the population of the United States was 5,308,483. It is now 76,304,799. Then we had sixteen states. Now we have forty-five. Then our territory consisted of 909,050 square miles. It is now 3,846,595 square miles. Education, religion and morality have kept pace with our advancement in other directions, and while extending its power the government has adhered to its foundation principles and abated none of them in dealing with our new peoples and possessions. A nation so preserved and blessed gives reverent thanks to God and invokes His guidance and the continuance of His care and favor.

CHINA COMES FIRST.

The Horrors of the Pekin Siege and the Timely Rescue.

In our foreign intercourse the dominant question has been the treatment of the Chinese problem. Apart from this our relations with the powers have been happy.

ORIGIN OF CHINESE TROUBLES.

The recent troubles in China spring from the anti-foreign agitation which for the past three years has gained strength in the northern provinces. Their origin lies deep in the character of the Chinese races and in the traditions of their government. The Taiping rebellion and the opening of Chinese ports to foreign trade and settlement disturbed alike the homogeneity and the seclusion of China.

Meanwhile foreign activity made itself felt in all quarters, not alone on the coast, but along the great river arteries and in the remoter districts, carrying new ideas and introducing new associations among a primitive people which had pursued for centuries a national policy of isolation.

The telegraph and railway spreading over their land, the steamers plying on their waterways, the merchant and the missionary penetrating year by year farther to the interior, became to the Chinese mind types of an alien invasion, changing the course of their national life and fraught with vague forebodings of disaster to their beliefs and their self-control.

For several years before the present troubles all the resources of foreign diplomacy, backed by moral demonstrations of the physical force of fleets and arms, have been needed to secure due respect for the treaty rights of foreigners and to obtain satisfaction from the responsible authorities for the sporadic outrages upon the persons and property of unoffending sojourners, which from time to time occurred at widely separated points in the northern provinces, as in the case of the outbreaks in Sze-Chuen and Shantung.

Posting of anti-foreign placards became a daily occurrence, which the repeated reprobation of the imperial power failed to check or punish. These inflammatory appeals to the ignorance and superstition of the masses, mendacious and absurd in their accusations and deeply hostile in their spirit, could not but work cumulative harm. They aimed at no particular class of foreigners; they were impartial in attacking everything foreign.

MURDERS OF MISSIONARIES.

An outbreak in Shantung, in which German missionaries were slain, was the too natural result of these malevolent teachings. The posting of seditious placards, exhorting to the utter destruction of foreigners and of every foreign thing, continued unrebuked. Hostile demonstrations toward the stranger gained strength by organization.

The sect commonly styled the Boxers developed greatly in the provinces north of the Yang-Tse, and with the collusion of many notable officials, including some in the immediate councils of the throne itself, became alarmingly aggressive. No foreigner's life, outside of the protected treaty ports, was safe. No foreign interest was secure from spoliation.

The diplomatic representatives of the powers in Peking strove ii vain to check this movement. Protest was followed by demand and demand by renewed protest, to be met with perfunctory edicts from the palace and evasive and futile assurances from the tsung-li-yamen. The circle of the Boxer influence narrowed about Peking, and while nominally stigmatized as seditious, it was felt that its spirit pervaded the capital itself, that the imperial forces were imbued with its doctrines, and that the immediate counselors of the empress dowager were in full sympathy with the anti-foreign movement.

The increasing gravity of the conditions in China and the imminence of peril to our own diversified interests in the empire, as well as to those of all the other treaty governments, were soon appreciated by this government, causing it profound solicitude. The United States from the earliest days of foreign intercourse with China had followed a policy of peace, omitting no occasion to testify good will, to further the extension of lawful trade, to respect the sovereignty of its government, and to issue by all legitimate and kindly but earnest means the fullest measure of protection for the lives and property of our law-abiding citizens and for the exercise of their beneficent callings among the Chinese people.

UNITED ACTION OF POWERS.

Mindful of this, it was felt to be appropriate that our purposes should be pronounced in favor of such course as would hasten united action of the powers at Pekin to promote the administrative reforms so greatly needed for strengthening the imperial government and maintaining the integrity of China, in which we believed the whole western world to be alike concerned. To these ends I caused to be addressed to the several powers occupying territory and maintaining spheres of influence in China the circular proposals of 1899, inviting from them declarations of their intentions and views as to the desirability of the adoption of measures insuring the benefits of equality of treatment of all foreign trade throughout China.

With gratifying unanimity the responses coincided in this common policy, enabling me to see in the successful termination of these negotiations proof of the friendly spirit which animates the various powers interested in the untrammeled development of commerce and industry in the Chinese empire as a source of vast benefit to the whole commercial world.

In this conclusion, which I had the gratification to announce as a completed engagement to the interested powers on March 20, 1900, I hopefully discerned a potential factor for the abatement of the distrust of foreign purposes which for a year past had appeared to inspire the policy of the imperial government, and for the effective exertion by it of power and authority to quell the critical anti-foreign movement in the northern provinces most immediately influenced by the Manchu sentiment.

Seeking to testify confidence in the willingness and ability of the imperial administration to redress the wrongs and prevent the evils we suffered and feared, the marine guard, which had been sent to Pekin in the autumn of 1899 for the protection of the legation, was withdrawn at the earliest practical moment, and all pending questions were remitted, as far as we were concerned, to the ordinary sorts of diplomatic intercourse.

SLAUGHTER BY BOXERS.

The Chinese government proved, however, unable to check the rising strength of the Boxers and appeared to be a prey to internal dissensions. In the uneq contest the anti-foreign influences s gained the ascendancy under the leadship of Prince Tuan. Organized arm of Boxers, with which the imperial for affiliated, held the country between Pe and the coast, penetrated into Manchu up to the Russian border, and throu their emissaries threatened a like ris throughout northern China.

Attacks upon foreigners, destruction their property and slaughter of nat converts were reported from all si The tsung-li-yamen, already permea with hostile sympathies, could make effective response to the appeals of legations. At this critical juncture, the early spring of this year, a propo was made by the other powers tha combined fleet should be assembled Chinese water as a moral demonstra under cover of which to exact of Chinese government respect for fore treaty rights and the suppression of Boxers.

The United States, while not particip ing in the joint demonstration, prom sent from the Philippines all ships could be spared for service on the nese coast. A small force of mari was landed at Taku and sent to Pe for the protection of the American le tion. Other powers took similar act until some 400 men were assembled in capital as legation guards.

Still the peril increased. The legati reported the development of the seditimovement in Pekin and the need of creased provision for defense against While preparations were in progress a larger expedition to strengthen the gation guards and keep the railway o an attempt of the foreign ships to m a landing at Taku was met by a from the Chinese forts. The forts thereupon shelled by the foreign ves the American admiral taking no par the attack, on the ground that we not at war with China and that a ho demonstration might consolidate the foreign element and strengthen the ers to oppose the relieving column.

Two days later the Taku forts captured after a sanguinary con Severance of communication with P followed, and a combined force of tional guards, which was advancin Pekin by the Pei-Ho, was checke Lang Fang. The isolation of the tions was complete.

HEROISM OF THE LEGATIONS.

The siege and the relief of the legations has passed into undying history. In all the stirring chapter which records the heroism of the devoted band, clinging to hope in the face of despair, and the undaunted spirit that led their relievers through battle and suffering to the goal, it is a memory of which my countrymen may be justly proud that the honor of our flag was maintained alike in the siege and the rescue, and that stout American hearts have again set high, in fervent emulation with true men of other race and language, the indomitable courage that ever strives for the cause of right and justice.

By June 19 the legations were cut off. An identical note from the yamen ordered each minister to leave Pekin, under a promised escort, within twenty-four hours. To gain time they replied, asking prolongation of the time, which was afterward granted, and requesting an interview with the tsung-li-yamen on the following day. No reply being received, on the morning of the 20th the German minister, Baron von Ketteler, set out for the yamen to obtain a response, and on the way was murdered.

An attempt by the legation guard to recover his body was foiled by the Chinese. Armed forces turned out against the legations. Their quarters were surrounded and attacked. The mission compounds were abandoned, their inmates taking refuge in the British legation, where all the other legations and guards gathered for more effective defense. Four hundred persons were crowded into its narrow compass. Two thousand native converts were assembled in a near by palace under protection of the foreigners. Lines of defense were strngthened, trenches dug, barricades raised and preparations made to stand a siege, which at once began.

"From June 20 until July 17," writes Minister Conger, "there was scarcely an hour during which there was not firing upon some part of our lines and into some of the legations, varying from a single shot to a general and continuous attack along the whole line." Artillery was placed around the legations and on the overlooking palace walls, and thousands of 3-inch shot and shell were fired, destroying some buildings and damaging all. So thickly did the balls rain that, when the ammunition of the besieged ran low, five quarts of Chinese bullets were gathered in an hour in one compound and recast.

Attempts were made to burn the legations by setting neighboring houses on fire, but the flames were successfully fought off, although the Austrian, Belgian, Italian and Dutch legations were then and subsequently burned.

ATTITUDE IN CHINA.

America's attitude has been unvaried and was first broadly defined by a circular to the powers of July 3 last, this country's policy as then defined being "to seek a solution which may bring about permanent safety and peace to China, preserve Chinese territorial and administrative entity, protect all rights guaranteed to friendly powers by treaty and international law and safeguard for the world the principle of equal and impartial trade with all parts of the Chinese empire." Of course, in addition to this broad and generous view of the rights and interests of all nations, there has since been added the question of reparation for injuries received the past summer and the indemnity for the expenses necessarily incurred in connection with the relief of the legations. On this point the president says: "We forego no jot of our undoubted right to exact exemplary and deterrent punishment of the responsible authors of the criminal acts whereby we and other nations have suffered grievous injury."

While the hope is expressed that a complete settlement of all the questions involved may be reached, it is admitted that the question of indemnity is one of "grave concern," as measured in money alone, a sufficient recompense may be beyond the power of China to pay. The president is disposed to think, however, that due compensation may be made by increased guaranties for foreign rights and immunities and "by the opening of China to the equal commerce of all the world."

RELATIONS WITH OTHER COUNTRIES.

Following the China question and situation there are brief statements in respect to the relations of the United States to other countries of the world, which, on the whole, are satisfactory. There seems to be some friction over the treatment of Americans in Austria in regard to military service, but it is stated representations have been made whenever the course adopted has appeared unduly onerous.

COURT OF ARBITRATION.

It is with satisfaction that I am able to announce the formal notification at The Hague on Sept. 4, of the deposit of award, which was deposited in London awaiting arrangements by the governments of the United States and Great Britain for its disposal, has recently been paid over to the two governments.

A lately signed convention of extradition with Peru as amended by the senate has been ratified by the Peruvian congress.

Another illustration of the policy of this government to refer international disputes to impartial arbitration is seen in the agreement reached with Russia to submit the claims on behalf of the American sealing vessels seized in Bering Sea to determination by T. M. C. Asser, a distinguished statesman and jurist of the Netherlands.

Thanks are due to the imperial Russian government for kindly aid rendered by ts authorities in eastern Siberia to American missionaries fleeing from Manchuria.

NEW RELATIONS WITH SPAIN.

Satisfactory progress has been made toward the conclusion of a general treaty of friendship and intercourse with Spain, in replacement of the old treaty, which passed into abeyance by reason of the late war. A new convention of extradition is approaching completion, and I should be much pleased were a commercial arrangement to follow. I feel that we should not suffer to pass any opportunity to reaffirm the cordial ties that existed between us and Spain from the time of our earliest independence and to enhance the mutual bnefits of that commercial intercourse which is natural between the two countries.

By the terms of the treaty of peace the line bounding the ceded Philippine group in the southwest failed to include several small islands lying west of the Sulus, which have always been recognized as under Spanish control. The occupation of Sibutu and Cagayan Sulu by our naval forces elicited a claim on the part of Spain, the essential equity of which could not be gainsaid.

In order to cure the defect of the treaty by removing all possible ground of future misunderstanding respecting the interpretation of its third article, I directed the negotiation of a supplementary treaty, which will be forthwith laid before the senate, whereby Spain quits all title and claim of title to the islands named, as well as to any and all islands belonging to the Philippine archipelago lying outside the lines described in said third article, and agrees that all such islands shall be comprehended in the cession of the archipelago as fully as if they had been expressly included within those lines. In consideration of this cession the United States is to pay to Spain the sum of $100,000.

A bill is now pending to effect the recommendation made in my last annual message that appropriate legislation be had to carry into execution article 7 of the treaty of peace with Spain, by which the United States assumed the payment of certain claims for indemnity of its citizens against Spain. I ask that action be taken to fulfill this obligation.

The King of Sweden and Norway has accepted the joint invitation of the United States, Germany and Great Britain to arbitrate claims growing out of losses sustained in the Samoan Islands in the course of military operations made necessary by the disturbances in 1899.

LARGE REVENUE SURPLUS.

It is gratifying to be able to state that the surplus revenues for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1900, were $79,527,060.18. For the six preceding years we had only deficits, the aggregate of which from 1894 to 1899 inclusive amounted to $283,022,991.14. The receipts for the year from all sources, exclusive of postal revenues, aggregated $567,240,851.89, and expenditures for all purposes, except for the administration of the postal department, aggregated $487,713,791.71. The receipts from customs were $233,164,871.16, an increase over the preceding year of $27,036,389.41. The receipts from internal revenue were $295,327,926.76, an increase of $21,890,765.25 over 1899. The receipts from miscellaneous sources were $38,748,053.97, as against $36,394,976.92 for the previous year.

REDUCTION OF REVENUE.

I recommend that the congress at its present session reduce the internal revenue taxes imposed to meet the expenses of the war with Spain in the sum of thirty millions of dollars. This reduction should be secured by the remission of those taxes which experience has shown to be the most burdensome to the industries of the people.

I specially urge that there by included in whatever reduction is made the legacy tax, bequests for public uses of a literary, educational or charitable character.

AID FOR MERCHANT MARINE.

American vessels during the past three years have carried about 9 per cent of our exports and imports. Foreign ships should carry the least, not the greatest part of American trade. The remarkable growth of our steel industries, the progress of shipbuilding for the domestic trade, and our steadily maintained expenditures for the navy have created an opportunity to place the United States in the first rank of commercial maritime powers.

REGULATION OF TRUSTS.

In my last annual message to the congress I called attention to the necessity for early action to remedy such evils as might be found to exist in connection with combinations of capital organized into trusts, and again invite attention to my discussion of the subject at that time.

The whole question is so-far-reaching that I am sure no part of it will be lightly considered, but every phase of it will have the studied deliberation of the congress, resulting in wise and judicious action. Restraint upon such combinations as are injurious, and which are within federal jurisdiction should be promptly applied by the congress.

THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

The Rebellion Almost at an End—Recommendations.

In my last annual message I dwelt at some length upon the condition of affairs in the Philippines. While seeking to impress upon you that the grave responsibility of the future government of those islands rests with the congress of the United States, I abstained from recommending at that time a specific and final form of government for the territory actually held by the United States forces, and in which as long as insurrection continues the military arm must necessarily be supreme. I stated my purpose, until the congress shall have made known the formal expression of its will, to use the authority bested in me by the Constitution and the statutes to uphold the sovereignty of the United States in those distant islands as in all other places where our flag rightfully floats, placing, to that end, at the disposal of the army and navy all the means which the liberality of the congress and the people have provided. No contrary expression of the will of the congress having been made, I have steadfastly pursued the purpose so declared, employing the civil arm as well toward the accomplishment of pacification and the institution of local governments within the lines of authority and law.

FAITH OF THE ARMY KEPT.

The articles of capitulation of the city of Manila on Aug. 13, 1898, concluded with these words:

"This city, its inhabitants, its churches and religious worship, its educational establishments, and its private property of all descriptions are placed under the special safeguard of the faith and honor of the American army."

I believe that this pledge has been faithfully kept. As high and sacred an obligation rests upon the government of the United States to give protection for property and life, civil and religious freedom, and wise, firm and unselfish guidance in the paths of peace and prosperity to all the people of the Philippine islands. I charge this commission to labor for the full performance of this obligation, which concerns the honor and conscience of their country, in the firm hope that through their labors all the inhabitants of the Philippine islands may come to look back with gratitude to the day when God gave victory to American arms at Manila and set their land under the sovereignty and the protection of the people of the United States.

PEACE IS ASSURED.

Progress in the hoped-for direction has been favorable. Our forces have successfully controlled the greater part of the islands, overcoming the organized forces of the insurgents and carrying order and administrative regularity to all quarters. What opposition remains is, for the most part, scattered, obeying no concerted plan of strategic action, operating only by the methods common to the traditions of guerrilla warfare, which, while ineffective to alter the general control now established, are still sufficient to beget insecurity among the populations that have felt the good results of our control and thus delay the conferment upon them of the fuller measures of local self-government, of education and of industrial and agricultural development which we stand ready to give to them.

By the spring of this year the effective opposition of the dissatisfied Tagalas to the authority of the United States was virtually ended thus opening the door for the extension of a stable administration over much of the territory of the archipelago. Desiring to bring this about, I appointed in March last a civil commission composed of William H. Taft of Ohio, Professor Dean C. Worcester of Michigan, Luke E. Wright of Tennessee, Henry C. Ide of Vermont and Professor Bernard Moses of California.

PROGRESS TOWARD PEACE.

Coincidentally with the entrance of the commission upon its labors I caused to be issued by Gen. MacArthur, the military governor of the Philippines, on June 21, 1900, a proclamation of amnesty in generous terms, of which many of the insurgents took advantage, among them a number of important leaders.

This commission, composed of eminent citizens representing the diverse geographical and political interests of the country, and bringing to their task the ripe fruits of long and intelligent service in educational, administrative and judicial careers, made great progress from the outset. As early as Aug. 21, 1900, it submitted a preliminary report, which will be laid before the congress, and from which it appears that already the good effects of returning order are felt; that business, interrupted by hostilities, is improving as peace extends; that a larger area is under sugar cultivation than ever before; that the customs revenues are greater than at any time during the Spanish rule; that economy and efficiency in the military administration have created a surplus fund of $6,000,000, available for needed public improvements; that a stringent civil service law is in preparation; that railroad communications are expanding, opening up rich districts, and that a comprehensive scheme of education is being organized.

THREE RULES TO BE INVIOLABLE.

It is evident that the most enlightened thought of the Philippine islands fully appreciates the importance of these principles and rules, and they will inevitably within a short time command universal assent. Upon every division and branch of the government of the Philippines therefore must be imposed three inviolable rules:

"That no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law; that private property shall not be taken for public use without just compensation; that in all criminal prosecutions the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial, to be informed of the nature and cause of the accusation, to be confronted with the witnesses against him, to have compulsory process for obtaining witnesses in his favor and to have the assistance of counsel for his defense; that excessive bail shall not be required, nor excessive fines imposed, nor cruel and unusual punishment inflicted; that no person shall be put twice in jeopardy for the same offense, or be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself; that the right to be secure against unreasonable searches and seizures shall not be violated; that neither slavery nor involuntary servitude shall exist except as a punishment for crime; that no bill of attainer or ex-post facto law shall be passed; that no law shall be passed abridging the freedom of speech or of the press or the rights of the people to peaceably assemble and petition the government for a redress of grievances; that no law shall be made respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, and that the free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship without discrimination or preference shall forever be allowed."

RULES AS TO LAND AND CHURCH.

It will be the duty of the commission to make a thorough investigation into the titles to the large tracts of land held or claimed by individuals or by religious orders; into the justice of the claims and complaints made against such landholders by the people of the island or any part of the people, and to seek by wise and peaceable measures a just settlement of the controversies and redress of wrongs which have caused strife and bloodshed in the past. In the performance of this duty the commission is enjoined to see that no injustice is done; to have regard for substantial rights and equity, disregarding technicalities so far as substantial right permits, and to observe the following rules:

"That the provision of the treaty of Paris pledging the United States to the protection of all rights of property in the islands, and as well the principle of our own government which prohibits the taking of private property without due process of law, shall not be violated; that the welfare of the people of the islands, which should be a paramount consideration, shall be attained consistently with this rule of property right; that if it becomes necessary for the public interest of the people of the islands dispose of claims to property which the commission finds to be not lawfully acquired and held, disposition shall be made thereof by due legal procedure, in which there shall be full opportunity for fain and impartial hearing and judgment; that if the same public interests require the extinguishment of property rights lawfully acquired and held due compensation shall be made out of the public treasury therefor; that no form of religion and no minister of religion shall be forced upon any community or upon any citizen of the islands, that, upon the other hand, no minister of religion shall be interfered with or molested in following his calling, and that the separation between state and church shall be real, entire and absolute."

ADMINISTRATION OF ISLANDS.

The next subject in order of importance should be the organization of government in the larger administrative divisions correspondping to countries, departments or provinces in which the common interests of many or several municipalities falling within the same tribal lines or the same natural geographical limits may best be subserved by a common administration. Whenever the commission is of the opinion that the condition of affairs in the islands is such that the central administration may safely be transferred from military to civil control they will report that conclusion to you with their recommendations as to the form of central government to be established for the purpose of taking over the control.

SUPPORTED BY MILITARY FORCE.

All legislative rules and orders, establishments of government and appointments to office by the commission will take effect immediately, or at such times as they shall designate, subject to your approval and action upon the coming in of the commission's reports, which are to be made from time to time as their action is taken. Wherever civil governments are constituted under the direction of the commission such military posts, garrisons and forces will be continued for the suppression of insurrection and brigandage and the maintenance of law and order as the military commander shall deem requisite, and the military forces shall be at all times subject under his orders, to the call of the civil authorities for the maintenance of law

MINISTER SAVED

Rev. Henry Langford entirely cured of Nervous Prostration by Dr. Greene's Nervura Blood and Nerve Remedy.

REV. HENRY LANGFORD.

Rev. Henry Langford, the eminent Baptist divine, of Weston, W. Va., has just escaped utter nervous and physical prostration. He is pastor of four churches. "For ten years," he said, "I have been nervous and growing worse all these years. During the last four or five years I became so nervous I could scarcely sign my name so it could be read. I was so nervous that I could not read my own sermon notes after they had been laid aside awhile.

"I was unable to hold my head steady in the pulpit, nor could I hold or handle my books and papers without embarrassment, owing to the trembling and weakness of my hands and arms. I was so nervous that I could scarcely feed myself. In fact, my nervous system was wrecked.

"I tried many remedies recommended by physicians, but found no permanent relief.

"One day I was in the store of R. S. Ogden, at Sardis, W. Va., and he said to me: 'You take two bottles of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and if you say it don't help you, you need not pay for it.'

"I took two bottles of this medicine and found so much relief that I bought two more bottles, and now I am wonderfully improved in health and in strength. Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy did it. I can heartily and truthfully recommend it to the sick. Too much cannot be said in praise of this splendid medicine. I say this for the good of other sufferers from nervous and prostrating diseases who can be cured by this remedy. For myself, I am thankful to God that I found Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, and for what it has done for me."

DR. GREENE'S OFFER OF FREE ADVICE.

Dr. Greene, Nervura's discoverer, will give his counsel free to all who write or call upon him at his office, 35 West 14th Street, New York City. His advice is from his great skill and experience and will shorten the road to health. Thousands come to him and write to him constantly. Do not put off getting the right advice, if you are ill.

and order and the enforcement of their authority.

Later reports from the commission show yet more encouraging advance toward insuring the benefits of liberty and good government to the Filipinos, in the interest of humanity and with the aim of building up an enduring, self-supporting and self-administering community in those far eastern seas. I would impress upon the congress that whatever legislation may be enacted in respect to the Philippine Islands should be along these generous lines. The fortune of war has thrown upon this nation an unsought trust which should be unselfishly discharged, and devolved upon this government a moral as well as material responsibility toward these millions whom we have freed from an oppressive yoke.

I have upon another occasion called the Filipinos "the wards of the nation." Our obligation as guardian was not lightly assumed; it must not be otherwise than honestly fulfilled, aiming first of all to benefit those who have come under our fostering care. It is our duty so to treat them that our flag may be no less beloved in the mountains of Luzon and the fertile zones of Mindanao and Negros than it is at home, that there as here it shall be the revered symbol of liberty, enlightenment and progress in every avenue of development.

The Filipinos are a race quick to learn and to profit by knowledge. He would be rash who, with the teachings of contemporaneous history in view, would fix a limit to the degree of culture and advancement yet within the reach of those people if our duty toward them be faithfully performed.

The message then touches upon Porto Rico and Cuba, reciting the history of the adoption of the Constitution of the latter country.

OTHER POINTS OF MESSAGE.

Hawaii, Civil Service and the Washington Centennial.

OUR MILITARY CONDITION.

The present strength of the army is 100,000 men—65,000 regulars and 35,000 volunteers. Under the act of Mach 2, 1899, on June 30 next the present volunteer force will be discharged and the regular army will be reduced to 2,447 officers and 29,025 enlisted men.

In 1888 a board of officers convened by President Cleveland adopted a comprehensive scheme of coast defense fortifications, which involved the outlay of something over one hundred million dollars. This plant received the approval of the congress, and since then regular appropriations have been made and the work of fortification has steadily progressed.

More than $60,000,000 have been invested in a great number of forts and guns, with all the complicated and scientific machinery and electrical appliances necessary for their use. The proper care of this defensive machinery requires men trained in its use. The number of men necessary to perform this duty alone is ascertained by the War Department at a minimum allowance to be 18,420. There are fifty-eight or more military posts in the United States other than the coast defense fortifications. The number of these posts is being constantly increased by the congress. More than $22,000,000 have been expended in building and equipment, and they can only be cared for by the regular army. The posts now in existence and others to be built provide for accommodations for and if fully garrisoned require 26,000 troops. Many of these posts are along our frontier or at important strategic points, the occupation of which is necessary.

We have in Cuba between 5,000 and 6,000 troops. For the present our troops in that island cannot be withdrawn or materially diminished, and certainly not until the conclusion of the labors of the constitutional convention now in session and a government provided by the new constitution shall have been established and its stability assured.

In Porto Rico we have reduced the garrisons to 1,636, which includes 896 native troops. There is no room for further reduction here. We will be required to keep a considerable force in the Philippine Islands for some time to come. From the best information obtainable we shall need there for the immediate future from 50,000 to 60,000 men. I am sure the number may be reduced as the insurgents shall come to acknowledge the authority of the United States, of which there are assuring indications.

It must be apparent that we will require an army of about 60,000, and that during present conditions in Cuba and the Philippines the President should have authority to increase the force to the present number of 100,000. Included in this number authority should be given to raise native troops in the Philippines up to 15,000, which the Taft commission believes will be more effective in detecting and suppressing guerrillas, assassins and ladrones than our own soldiers. The full discussion of this subject by the Secretary of War in his annual report is called to your earnest attention.

I renew the recommendations made in my last annual message that the congress provide a special medal of honor for the volunteers, regulars, sailors and marines on duty in the Philippines who voluntarily remained in the service after their terms of enlistment had expired.

I favor the recommendation of the Secretary of War for the detail of officers from the line of the army when vacancies occur in the adjutant general's department, inspector general's department, quartermaster general's department, subsistence department, pay department, ordnance department, and signal corps.

The army cannot be too highly commended for its faithful and effective service in active military operations in the field and the difficult work of civil administration.

POSTAL SERVICE GROWS.

The continued and rapid growth of the postal service is a sure index of the great and increasing business activity of the country. Its most striking new development is the extension of rural free delivery. This has come almost wholly within the last year. At the beginning of the fiscal year 1899-1900 the number of routes in operation was only 391, and most of these had been running less than twelve months. On the 15th of November, 1900, the number had increased to 2,614, reaching into forty-four states and territories and serving a population of 1,801,524. The number of applications now pending and awaiting action nearly equals all those granted up to the present time, and by the close of the current fiscal year about 4,000 routes will have been established, providing for the daily delivery of mails at the scattered homes of about 3,500 of rural population.

This service ameliorates the isolation of farm life, conduces to good roads and quickens and extends the dissemination of general information. Experience thus far has tended to allay the apprehension that it would be so expensive as to forbid its general adoption or make it a serious burden. Its actual application has shown that it increases postal receipts and can be accompanied by reductions in other branches of the service, so that the augmented revenues and the accomplished savings together materially reduce the net cost. The evidences which point to these conclusions are presented in detail in the annual report of the postmaster general, which, with its recommendations, is recommended to the consideration of the congress. The full development of this special service, however, requires such a large outlay of money that it should be undertaken only after a careful study and thorough understanding of all that it involves.

Very efficient service has been rendered by the navy in connection with the insurrection in the Philippines and the recent disturbance in China. A very satisfactory settlement has been made of the long-pending question of the manufacture of armor plate. A reasonable price has been secured and the necessity for a government armor plant avoided.

CONTRACT LABOR LAWS.

In my annual message of Dec. 5, 1898, I called attention to the necessity for some amendment of the alien contract law. There still remain important features of the rightful application of the eight-hour law for the benefit of labor, and of the principle of arbitration, and I again commend these subjects to the careful attention of the congress.

THE DISCOVERER OF

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

The Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

No other medicine in the world has received such widespread and unqualified endorsement.

No other medicine has such a record of cures of female troubles or such hosts of grateful friends.

Do not be persuaded that any other medicine is just as good. Any dealer who asks you to buy something else when you go into his store purposely to buy Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has no interest in your case. He is merely trying to sell you something on which he can make a larger profit. He does not care whether you get well or not, so long as he can make a little more money out of your sickness. If he wished you well he would without hesitation hand you the medicine you ask for, and which he knows is the best woman's medicine in the world.

Follow the record of this medicine, and remember that these thousands of cures of women whose letters are constantly printed in this paper were not brought about by "something else," but by

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound,
The Great Woman's Remedy for Woman's Ills.

Those women who refuse to accept anything else are rewarded a hundred thousand times, for they get what they want—a cure. Moral—Stick to the medicine that you know is Best.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, do not hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice. It is free and helpful.

Remember that we all have failings without adding to same.

Local enterprise and push is what makes a city out of a small town. The editor must have a proof for every statement he makes, and the business man can help him wonderfully. If the editor says THIS is the town to do your trading and marketing, the doctors, the hardware men, the general store keepers, all of them must chime in and push to the front. And the best way to push a town is to advertise it. Use your local paper to do this and you will not regret it. Don't be afraid of crowding the newspaper man for space, he has plenty of it.

PUT ON THE BRAKE.

(GEORGE CLAY LLOYD. MAYETTA KAN.

I saw one day, on the brow of a hill,
A boy with a big, heavy load;
He pulled on the lines with a firm, strong hand,
As he struck the decline in the road.
The wagon was new, the harness was strong,
But the horses, though good, were small;
The heavy load forced them into a trot,
And I tremled for fear they would fall,
I knew if they fell the boy would be hurt,
I felt that his life was at stake;
I shouted above the noise of the wheels,
"Say, little boy, put on the brake."

He grasped the lines with his small left hand,
The brake lever seized with his right.
He knelt on his knees and with a strong push.
He set on the brake good and tight;
Then he reined the horses back into a walk,
And could easily guide them at will,
And, safe and sound, and without a mishap,
Was soon at the foot of the hill.
As he stopped to loosen the brake, I said,
"A lesson from this you will take,
Many a wasted life might have been saved
Had they, in time, put on the brake.

Now there is the boy who smokes cigarettes,
At first it is done on the sly;
He's easily muddled at task and play,
For his brain is injured thereby.
His brother in folly, the tippling lad.
At first had an intellect clear;
He's clouding it over day after day,
For those boys I tremble with fear.
Whenever I see one indulging I say,
"He's struck the decline—no mistake,"
And I call aloud to him as he hastens along,
"Say, little boy, put on the brake."

There is the girl who is thoughless and vain.
She's sowing wild oats, it appears;
As she's swing today with laughter and song
She will reap tomorrow with tears.
She never will soil her lily white hands
To aid mother in her household cares;
She knows more than her mother, she thinks,
And heeds not her counsel and prayers
I know, as sure as night follows day,
A wreck of her life she will make,
And I shout, while yet it is easy to stop.
"Say, little girl, put on the brake."

There is the man who frequents the saloon
Untruthful, dishonest, profane,
Who seeks rude companions, squanders his time,
And cares not if he gives others pain.
What to him are tears of mother and wife
Or sobs of his own little child?
His conscience is seared, his soul has died out,
He plunges down reckless and wild,
But the road ends at the foot of the hill,
And below is the brimstone lake.
I shout while yet he has time to reform,
"Say, my dear friend, put on the brake."

OLDEST MAN IN AMERICA

Tells How He Escaped the Terrors of Many Winters by Using Peruna.

Mr. Isaac Brock, the Oldest Man in the United States.

Mr. Isaac Brock, of McLennan county, Tex., has attained the great age of 111 years, having been born in 1788. He is an ardent friend to Peruna and speaks of it in the following terms:

"During my long life I have known a great many remedies for coughs, colds, catarrh and diarrhoea. I had always supposed these affections to be different diseases, but I have learned from Dr. Hartman's books that these affections are the same and are properly called catarrh.

"As for Dr. Hartman's remedy, Peruna, I have found it to be the best, if not the only reliable remedy for these affections.

"Peruna has been my stand-by for many years, and I attribute my good health and my extreme age to this remedy. It exactly meets all my requirements.

"I have come to rely upon it almost entirely for the many little things for which I need medicine. I believe it to be especially valuable to old people."
Isaac Brock.

Catarrh is the greatest enemy of old age. A person entirely free from catarrh is sure to live to a hale and hearty old age. A free book on catarrh sent by The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Dec. 4.—In the senate aside from the reading of the president's message and the administration of the oath of office to Wm. B. Dillingham, the new senator from Vermont, no business was transacted.

House—After the reading of the message the deaths of the late Representatives Daley, of New Jersey, and Hoffecker, of Delaware, and Senator Davis, of Minnesota, and Gear, of Iowa, were announced, and as a further mark of respect to their memories, the house adjourned until tomorrow.

Washington. Dec. 5.—Senate—Senator Dolliver was assigned to membership on committees on Pacific railroads, agriculture, education and labor, interstate commerce, postoffice and post roads and improvements of the Mississippi river. Among bills passed was one to encourage the holding of an interstate and West Indian exposition in Charleston, S. C., in 1901. The Spooner Philippine bill was displaced by the ship subsidy bill as unfinished business and Frye addressed the senate in favor of its passage.

House—Hull reported the army reorganization bill, which went over till tomorrow. Among bills passed was one to provide for the detail of not to exceed 100 retired army officers and 300 non-commissioned officers as military instructors in the public schools of such cities as adopt a system of military instruction.

Washington, Dec. 5.—Senate—Pettigrew's resolution asking for information on Cuban postal frauds was referred to the committee on relations with Cuba. Frye concluded his address in favor of the ship subsidy bill.

House—The army bill came up under special order and eleven of its twenty-six pages were disposed of. The feature of the debate was the speech of McCall, rep., of Massachusetts, who not only opposed the bill, but attacked the whole Philippine policy of the administration.

Washington, Dec. 6.—Senate—The senate spent almost the entire time in executive session, the floor being occupied by Morgan, who while declaring that the Hay-Pauncefote treaty was not necessary to the success of the Nicaragua canal, favored its ratification in deference to the wishes of the secretary of state.

House—The house, at the end of a long sitting, passed the army reorganization bill by a vote of 166 to 133. Three democrats, Messrs. Hall of Pennsylvania and Underhill and Clayton of New York voted with the republicans for the bill, and Mr. McCall, republican, of Massachusetts, with the democrats against it. Otherwise it was a strict party vote. An anti-canteen amendment by Littlefield was adopted. The democratic proposition, an extension of the temporary army until July 1, 1903, which was voted upon indirectly on a motion to recommit, commanded the votes of only about half the opposition and of two republicans, Mr. McCall and Mr. Mann of Illinois.

Washington, Dec. 7.—Senate—In executive session the senate agreed to vote on the amendment offered by the committee on foreign relations providing for the policing of the canal, on next Thursday at 3 o'clock. An amendment was offered by Senator Teller, striking out the treaty prohibition against the fortification of the Nicaragua canal when constructed. Senator Morgan concluded his speech and Teller spoke for two hours in opposition to the treaty.

House.—The house passed the Grout oleomargarine bill by a vote of 196 to 92. The substitute offered by the minority of the committee on agriculture which imposed additonal restrictions on the sale of oleomargarine to prevent its fraudulent sale as butter and increased the penalties for violations, was defeated by a vote of 113 to 178. The bill as passed makes all articles known as oleomargarine, butterine, imitated butter or imitated cheese transported into any state or territory for consumption or sale subject to the police power of such state or territory, but prevents any state or territory from prohibiting the transportation or sale of such product when produced and sold free from coloration in imitation of butter. The bill increases the tax on oleomargarine colored in imitation of butter from 2 to 10 cents per pound and decreases the tax on oleomargarine uncolored from 2 cents to ¼ cent per pound.

HOLLAND HAS A WELCOME.

Cordial Hand Extended Oom Paul at The Hague.

The Hague, Dec. 7.—At the opening of the second chamber yesterday, President Gleichman said:

"President Kruger arrives here today. I take occasion to propose that the chamber authorize me to welcome, in its name, the president to our country and offer him an expression of our cordial sympathy."

The proposal was adopted amid cheers.

When Kruger arrived he was greeted at the station by the burgomaster and councellors and a choir of 610 girls, who chanted Psalm 72, verses 6, 7 and 11. The former president and suite then repaired to the royal waiting room, where the burgomaster warmly welcomed him in a brief speech.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

WIFE CHARGED WITH MURDER.

Mrs. John Hossack Arrested While Attending Her Husband's Funeral.

New Virginia, Dec. 6.—While attending her husband's funeral, Mrs. Margaret Hossack yesterday was arrested by Sheriff Lewis Hodson of Warren county, charged with the murder of her husband, John Hossack, who was killed in cold blood Saturday night at the Hossack home, six miles northwest of this place.

The attendance at the funeral was unusually large, farmers coming for miles around to attend. But when the sheriff stepped up to Mrs. Hossack, shortly after the last chunk of dirt had been thrown upon the newly made grave, and she was on her way to town with her children by her side, the arrest caused a tremendous sensation. Mrs. Hossack took the arrest calmly, evidently having anticipated the event. She expressed a desire to go first to her home to get a few things and within an hour the sheriff and the accused were on their way to the county jail at Indianola.

More than twenty witnesses were examined by the coroner and his jury before the evidence was closed. Almost the last witness, and by far the most important one examined, was Mrs. Hossack herself. She reiterated her former statements of the crime, and although she was under examination for nearly three hours nothing in the way of causing her to break down or to cross herself in her evidence resulted

The evidence upon which Mrs. Hossack was arrested is purely circumstantial, the only testimony being to the effect that Hossack and his wife had frequent quarrels, and the improbability of the woman's story that she slept peacefully by the side of the murdered man and heard no sounds until after it was all over and the murderer had escaped through the front door.

WILL BE HARD FOUGHT CASE.

Warren County Tragedy Transferred to the Courts.

Indianola, Dec. 7.—Mrs. John Hossack, who has been arrested for the murder of her husband, was brought to this city and lodged in jail.

Several members of the family were in the city arranging matters of business and preparing for the long legal contest which is no doubt soon to follow.

There is every indication that the Hossack case will be hard fought. The fact that all the evidence against Mrs. Hossack, as far as has been given out, is purely circumstantial; that the family has lived in the vicinity for more than thirty years, and has numberless friends. The family is well-to-do and has plenty of money at its command to fight the case.

The accused takes her arrest with considerable stoicism, although it is apparent that she feels the disgrace attending her arrest keenly.

THOM MISSING.

Sioux City Startled by the Downfall of a Once Respected Citizen.

Sioux City, Dec. 8.—The police are looking for Charles Thom, a church member, trusted bookkeeper and a son of a wealthy woman of Beatrice, Neb., by whose disappearance revelations were made of his double life, with gambling, women and drink. Among his secret misdeeds forgeries and embezzlement are charged. He left a note admitting a snortage in his employer's fund of $200. The shortage is supposed to much exceed this sum, however. By a letter for him from a Carroll, Neb., widow his intimate relations were established with another woman. He had frequently remained away from home all night of late. His wife thinks his mind has become affected by a cancerous growth. His father was insane. All his wife's and his own relatives are prominent near Beatrice.

Alleged Rapist on Trial.

Ottumwa, Dec. 8.—The trial of the alleged rapist from Albia, Alva Booker, began here yesterday. At the very outset an important question was sprung by the defense, in the fact that the prosecuting witness was deaf. And it was necessary that the questions put to her be written. The attorneys for the defense objected to this, but Judge Eichelberger overruled the objections and the trial proceeded.

Secretary Root Approves.

Washington, Dec. 8.—Secretary Root has approved the appointment of Major General Elwell S. Otis, U. S. A., Lieutenant Colonel James P. Kimball of the medical department and Major George E. Pond of the quartermaster's department to constitute the board of the three to inspect the site for the army post in Des Moines, and has ordered them to proceed on the work at once.

College to be Rebuilt.

Sioux City, Dec. 8.—The main hall of Western college at LeMars, destroyed by fire last fall, will be rebuilt, the contract having been let to Rowles & Bailey of Omaha at the price of $12,952, exclusive of plumbing, heating and lighting. C. H. Parsons of Des Moines is the architect.

Iowan Promoted in Philippines.

Marshalltown, Dec. 8.—Quartermaster B. A. Beeson of the Soldiers' Home has received a cablegram from his son, Lieutenant Ed Beeson, now serving in the Philippines, stating that he had been promoted to the position of first assistant surgeon, with the rank of surgeon.

BAD FIRE AT AMES.

Main Building of Agricultural College Nearly Destroyed.

Ames, Dec. 9.—The main building at the State Agricultural college was almost completely destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The north wing and most of the center of the building are in ruins, and the botanical collection, one of the most valuable in the country, suffered heavy loss. The total loss is estimated at close to $50,000.

Two hundred men students, occupying the north wing of the building as a dormitory, escaped with their lives, fifty using the fire escape, but were able to save but few of their belongings. Practically nothing but the south wing of the building was saved.

The fire originated in the boiler room of the heating plant in the basement of the north wing at 4 o'clock. It caught in a heap of shingles used as kindling. This was directly under the conduits through which the steam pipes lead to the upper floors. This created a strong draft and the fire was sucked up to the top floor in an instant. A moment later the entire top floor was in flames. By the time the alarm could be given the top floor was a burning furnace, and the fire was rapidly eating its way downward.

Students were aroused from sound slumber as if by magic and rushed for the fire escapes half-clad. That all of them escaped without one being seriously injured in the panic is almost miraculous.

Paul St. Clair, the fireman in charge of the boiler room, gave the alarm as soon as he discovered the seriousness of the fire, but the facilities of the college fire department were utterly inadequate to the emergency.

The display of college spirit was magnificent, and it was the perfect discipline of the students which prevented more destructive spread of the flames.

Their efforts saved most of the $10,000 botanical collection, which was on the first floor of the north wing.

The building which has been destroyed was erected in 1868 at a cost of $200,000. Repairs were made on it two years ago and it was in good condition. It was devoted to dormitory purposes and recitation rooms.

THE TITUS AMENDMENT

Declared Void Because of an Error by Journal Clerks.

Burlington, Dec. 5.—The Hawkeye claims that the Titus amendment is absolutely void because of the failure of the journal clerks to spread the same as adopted upon the journal of the house. The Hawkeye sums up the case as follows:

"1. The constitution required that the resolution amending that instrument must be entered at length upon the journals of each (both) houses.

"2. It was not so entered in the house journal of the twenty-seventh general assembly.

"3. The supreme court has held that this is mandatory and failure to comply renders the amendment null and void.

"4. Upon a rehearing the court reaffirmed and reinforced its opinion by the statement that 'where the existing constitution prescribes a method for its own amendment, an amendment thereto to be valid must be in strict conformity to that method.' Omitting the entering in full of the resolution upon the house journal was a glaring violation of the prescriptions of the constitution and renders the amendment invalid.

"5. If a slight variation in the phraseology of the prohibitory amendment made it invalid, how much greater in destructive effect must be the entire omission of the resolution from the house journal! The constitution was clearly violated and its requirements ignored in the house of the twenty-seventh general assembly and consequently the amendment is of no effect."

DAILY NEWS WILL CELEBRATE

Des Moines Dollar Daily Has Nearly 30,000 Circulation.

Des Moines, Dec. 10.—The Des Moines Daily News will soon celebrate in a formal way its success in attaining to 30,000 circulation, its regular issues being now about that figure. When the News reached the 10,000 mark in 1895 it celebrated by giving a feast to its newsboys; when 20,000 was attained in 1898 a grand business men's parade was given; and the approaching celebration is awaited with some curiosity, as the News is always doing something new and striking. The vast circulation of the Daily News is largely due to its low price of $1 a year, 75 cents for six months, 50 cents for three months.

ARRESTED FOR MINING FRAUDS.

C. P. Bentley of Colorado Taken Up at Clinton.

Clinton, Dec. 10.—The police made perhaps the most important arrest ever made in Clinton, when they placed C. P. Bentley, formerly a wealthy miner of Colorado Springs, under arrest, charged with fraudulently issuing several thousand shares of mining stock, owned by Colorado Springs capitalists. Bentley is secretary of eight mining companies, operating twenty-three valuable mines. He has been in hiding about two months and admits his identity. He refuses to talk and says he will go back without requisition papers, as he is tired of hiding.

One of the Finest Commercial Fruit Farms in Missouri.

Situated in Howell county, Missouri, the famous "Land of the Big Red Apple," near Pomona and Olden on the K. C., F. S. & M. R. R., immediately adjoining the celebrated "Olden Fruit Farm."

The property embraces 240 acres of fine unimproved timber lands, 40 acres cleared pasture, 40 acres grain and 320 acres fruit. The fruit consists of

16,000 APPLE TREES,

3,000 Ben Davis, 3,000 Black Twig, 3,000 Minkler, 2,000 Jonathan, 2,000 Rome Beauty, 2,000 Gano, 1,000 York Imperial; 8,700 7 years old, 5,800 6 years old, 1,500 3 years old.

13,000 PEACH TREES.

4,000 Elberta, 2,000 Salway, 2,000 Susquehanna, 1,000 Mountain Rose, 1,000 Family Favorite, 3,000 other varieties; 5,000 3 years old, 5,000 6 years old, 3,000 4 years old.

And a few acres in pears, plums, berries, etc., for family use.

There are on the farm a superintendent's house, cost $1,500; 5 cottages for employes, cost $1,200; barn, corn crib, tool and wagon houses, etc., cost $1,000.

One of the best fruit men in the country has had personal charge from the original clearing till now and has made the farm one of the best that time, money and skill can produce.

The owner, a non-resident, planned and developed the place for a permanent home and occupation for a delicate son. The latter has recently become a hopeless invalid, and as the owner can not give the farm personal attention, he has decided to sell or exchange for property near his home, which he can look after.

This is an unusual opportunity for someone who desires to engage in the fruit business on a large scale. For further information address

Forsaking all Others

He came into sight at last, as fine a specimen of young manhood as one would wish to see, with his tall, erect figure and hair and eyes as dark as Helen's own. As he lifted his cap and waved it in greeting Helen held the baby high above her head, that papa might see him, and stood smilingly at her post until Harvey had entered the room and enfolded mother and child in his embrace. The little scene was enacted every day, but to neither had it lost its charm. They were ardent lovers still.

"I'll run up and get into my flannels, Nell, and we'll take a walk through the grounds," said Harvey, when the usual small questions had been asked and answered. "Saunders told me this morning he didn't like the appearance of the young plum trees, and I promised to go and look at them. Shall I send Mary for the boy?"

"No, thank you; I'll take him to the nursery myself. I must change my dress if we are to have a tramp," said Helen, with a glance at her trailing tea gown.

She enjoyed walking through the grounds with Harvey, and took an active interest in stock and crops. Before his marriage Gladys always accompanied him in these expeditions, but she never did so now. Helen claimed every moment of her husband's leisure; she considered him hers and hers alone; not even his mother had a claim upon him; and her open demonstration of the almost fierce love that found outlet in constant caresses even in the presence of a third party, made the better bred Gladys feel so decidedly in the way that she soon ceased to intrude upon the pair, to Helen's satisfaction and Harvey's secret relief; for few men care to have a witness to their matrimonial love making, particularly if that witness be a mother or a sister.

Strolling leisurely homeward, the wedded couple encountered Gladys just returning from her ride. She smilingly raised her whip to her hat in salute, and rode smartly toward the house. Harvey looked after her admiringly.

"By Jove! I believe the mater grows lovelier every day," he exclaimed. "And how superbly she sits her horse!"

Helen frowned a little. Mrs. Atherton's beauty was not a congenial theme with her.

"That reminds me, Harvey; I spoke to your mother today about the bills, as you suggested, and she refused to look at them, she is satisfied with things as they are."

"Oh, very well; in that case we'll let the matter drop," said Harvey, easily.

"And allow the tradesmen to go on cheating us, as I am convinced they do? My conscience would not permit me to remain inactive under such circumstances. No, dearest, you must see her yourself, and bring her to our way of thinking—the only right way. You have great influence with her."

"Yes, I fancy I have," said Harvey, complacently. "But you see I've never meddled with her business affairs, and I hardly like to begin now."

"Why not? It is your duty to protect her interests and your own. The property will all be ours some day—"

"God forbid!" broke in Harvey. "I can't imagine life without the dear little mater. Beside, she is young yet—she may outlive us both."

Helen was a good woman; but she did not look overjoyed at this suggestion.

"Even then there is baby to consider," she said smoothly. "We all owe a certain duty to him. If you and I can redeem money that is being absolutely thrown away we ought to do it, however we may dislike to appear officious."

"Well, sweetheart, I'll see what I can do," said Harvey, rather reluctantly. "As you say, it is my duty to look after things, for the place is virtually mine, as much as it is the mater's. I don't know the terms of my father's will, but of course he provided suitably for his son."

"It seems very strange to me that there was no division of the property when you came of age," replied Helen, for the first time expressing a thought which had for weeks vexed her. "You ought to open the subject with your mother. She is unbusiness-like, and may not realize that the time has come for a settlement. She can't treat you as a dependent always. You are a married man now, with a married man's responsibilities."

Harvey's face had grown very grave. Helen saw that she had said enough for this time, and changed the subject.

CHAPTTR III.

"May I come in, Mamma Gladys?" asked Harvey, entering his mother's private parlor as he spoke. "Nell is busy with the youngster, and I thought I'd smoke my after dinner cigar here if you don't object."

Gladys had been sitting at the piano, evoking minor chords in unison with her mood. She felt sad and lonely, like one cut off from the intimacies of life. Some mothers gain a daughter when their sons marry, but the majority lose a son. Gladys had long realized that she belonged to the majority.

She sprang up on Harvey's entrance, her face alight with pleasure.

"I am only too happy to have you, dear. I see little of you nowadays."

"Yes, I'm an old married man now," said Harvey, laughing comfortably, "and my family absorbs most of my leisure." He threw himself into the chair she rolled forward, and lighted a cigar with the taper she gave him. "Now push that ottoman over here, little woman, and sit beside me while we talk." She obeyed, and nestled close to him, looking with pride into the boyish face which was the dearest in the world to her. Harvey puffed with evident enjoyment for a time, chatting of trifles. Then he said quite easily, "By the way, what is this little misunderstanding between you and Nell? She is much disturbed by it, though I assured her she is over sensitive."

"Oh! Then you came here because Helen sent you?" she asked.

"Well, not exactly; I knew a word from me would set matters straight, so I thought I'd better come. Where are you going?"

"Only to an easy chair; this ottoman isn't comfortable." There were tears in her eyes but Harvey did not see them. "If we are to have a consultation, I may as well sit at my ease."

She said no more, and after waiting a minute, he asked—

"Well, aren't you going to tell me all about it?"

"Hasn't Helen already told you?"

"Yes, but I prefer to hear your own version of the matter."

"There really is no need of it. I am sure your wife is truthful; what she said occured no doubt did occur."

"Then I can't understand why you refuse to accept her sensible suggestion and look into things a little, with her aid. Nell's a first rate business woman, and I don't believe you realize how much money is spent in the house."

"You have your full share of all that comes into it, Harvey."

"Why, of course," he responded, with a half wondering look, as if surprised at the reminder. "What is yours is also mine in a sense; we e common inheritance. It is becau interests are identical that Hel I wish to protect them. You see that, little woman? It would the dear girl very much if you' her into your confidence—trea more like a daughter in truth is in spirit."

Gladys did not answer for a f ments; she moved her chair her face was partly in shadow she could note every expression

"Before we talk any furthe presently said, "I should like t just what it is Helen desires. prehend that she wishes to re general expenses of the establi but how? Does she want t Phebe's place?"

"Hardly that," returned flushing. "She thinks, howev she is here, you no longer n services of a housekeeper."

"And do you think I ought out an old and faithful serva a lifetime of devotion to mine?"

"Certainly not; she would r your maid."

"So that is it!" exclaimed with a half laugh. "I thoug great idea was agitating Hele Dear, clumsy Tomlinson my And I suppose there are other she thinks might be dispens Well, perhaps they could; b to have plenty of people a place"—her voice grew firme "and I intend to have them. no assurance that I am glad my house and its luxuries and your wife. But you mu things as they are. I will further interference."

"Interference! Surely you regard my dear wife's sugg interference!"

"What else is it? I have n plained to you of Helen, but day she entered the house shown a disposition to take it; I have submitted patient small encroachment after hoping to content her, but mands increase instead of l seems to forget that the esta not hers."

Harvey arose and walked across the room several times, at last coming to a standstill before her chair.

"No, little woman," he said in a kind yet cold tone, "we do not forget it—we merely question it."

How that "we" stung Gladys only a woman in her position can understand. But it hardened her, too. She did not answer, waiting for his next words.

"Legally, the estate is yours, I admit; but as my father's son I am surely entitled to my share of his property. Money you have never grudged me; you were always most generous. Nevertheless, I am only a sort of hanger on—a dependent on your bounty. This doesn't seem fair. Now that I am of age, and with a married man's responsibilities, we should come to some regular business understanding. God forbid that I should inherit your money. Yet in common justice I ought to share it."

"Are you not sharing it now, Harvey?"

"Yes, in a sense; but can't you understand that I am a boy no longer, and want my legal rights?"

"Or rather your wife——"

"Let us keep her name out of the discussion. I will not hear another word against her even from you," said Harvey, haughtily.

Gladys' lips quivered.

"You must admit that she is your adviser—a wise one, perhaps, from her point of view," she said gently. "But you are both reasoning in the dark. Harvey, you have no legal claim on my property."

"No claim on my own father's money!"

"It was not his money. He was a poor man. My father was very angry when he married one of his daughters." Gladys spoke in short sentences, carefully, as if fearing she might say too much. "It was a runaway match, and papa would not forgive it."

"Why did you never tell me this before?" asked Harvey, sharply.

"I wished to spare you pain, dear. What need for you to know, since all I had was practically yours? I speak now because I must. If you had only been content with things as they were! It was to keep you out of your father's way that I came here, where no one knew me, after papa died. For he was a bad man—a drunkard, gambler and criminal. He married your poor little mother—he was very handsome, and she a romantic boarding school girl—for her money, and when it was gone, left her and her baby to starve, as they might have done but for Phebe Tomlinson."

Gladys was very pale, and shivered once or twice as she talked. But Harvey felt no compassion for her; his sympathy was for himself. He remembered that Mrs. Atherton had never talked of his father, and answered his childish inquiries concerning him vaguely, diverting his thoughts to other subjects; but he had not dreamed of this, and the knowledge was bitter.

"This man, your husband, is he living?"

"No; he died in prison a year ago."

STORIETTES.

One day Tom Corwin, a prominent figure in legal and political circles years ago, met a political opponent with whom he promptly fell into a discussion, in the course of which he constantly referred to the whig party as if it were still in existence. "Don't you know the old whig party is dead?" at last exclaimed his acquaintance, with evident irritation; "Horace Greeley killed it, and it's dead and buried." "Certainly," said Mr. Corwin, with much solemnity, "and I am one of its graves, sir, and not to be trampled on!"

On one occasion the zeal of Lord Wolseley, the retiring commander-in-chief of the British army, for the welfare of his men got the better of his discretion. Dinner was being served to the soldiers, and orderlies hurried backward and forward with steaming pails of soup. Lord Wolseley stopped one of them. The man was at attention in a moment. "Remove the lid." No sooner said than done. "Let me taste it." "But, plaze yer—" "Let me taste it, I say." And taste it he did. "Disgraceful! Tastes like nothing in the world but dishwater." "Plaze, yer honor," gasped the man, "and so it is."

In relating some of the mishaps which befell him during his travels in Germany, Justice Garoutte said: "In Nuremberg we ordered the cabman to take us to the Strauss hotel. He drove us to a hotel where it said in big letter 'Ostrich hotel.' I insisted on being taken to the Strauss. The cabman became angry; we refused to alight. High words ensued. Thereupon a gentleman stepped up and informed me that 'Strauss' was German for 'Ostrich.' We very quietly alighted and the storm was over. At Frankfort we desired to go to the Swan hotel. The driver insisted upon our alighting at the 'Cygne hotel.' Arguments again took place, and finally it came upon me that 'Cygne' was French for that noble bird, the swan. All this occurred, too, in the presence of the female members of the family, all of whom spoke French, but cygne was too much for them."

M. D. Johnson, a seaman from the United States steamer Albatross, who was one of the passengers on the "Owl" train from Los Angeles which was wrecked near Antioch recently, thus describes his experience: "It was a little after two bells this morning, and I was smoking my pipe in the 'Owl's' stern gallery. The first thing I knew of any happening was when I was thrown violently from my seat. After the pitching and jumping had stopped, I crawled out and saw that the steering gear of the 'Owl' had been carried away, causing her to part amidship. The after end listed badly to starboard and went aground, throwing all the hands in a heap to the listed side. No lives were lost, however, though all were badly shaken up and somewhat damaged. One unlucky passenger bunted the glass out of a port hole, cutting her head and face quite badly. After wigwagging the craft coming up behind to change her course, the forward end of our craft picked up the passengers and crew and continued her voyage. As for me, I will be glad when I am safe aboard the Albatross again. This cruising overland is too rough and choppy for me."

FROM BRYAN'S OWN CITY

Comes a Startling Story—An Open Letter That Will Cause a Sensation.

LINCOLN, Neb., Dec. 8.—(Special.)—At No. 2115 O street, this city, is the B. & M. wallpaper house. "B. & M." are the initial letters of the proprietors, Mr. A. C. Bonsor and Mr. O. E. Myers. The senior partner, Mr Bonsor, is a well-known and highly respected citizen, and no one has ever doubted his truthfulness. It is, therefore, the pronounced opinion in Lincoln and the state generally that the significant and very strong statements made in Mr. Bonsor's letter will go unchallenged. After explaining his willingness that the matter be given the fullest possible publicity in the public interest, Mr. Bonsor proceeds:

I have suffered untold misery and pain for over ten years. My kidneys were diseased. I tried many so-called remedies, but they did me no good. I saw an advertisement of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and I bought some, and commenced to use them at once. I had not been taking them three days before I began to improve. For years I had not had one good night's sleep, and before the first box of the Dodd's Kidney Pills were all used, I could sleep all night without pains. I am now completely cured, and have not a pain or ache left. I cannot recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly, for they are unexcelled as a kidney remedy. Yours truly,

ELL CENTER NEWS.

Harry Rice has a new feed grinder.

C. P. Ell and lady attended the party here last Wednesday.

Ira Robbins enjoyed a visit from his sister last week from Rodman.

Miss Lizzie Martin is spending a few days with her friend Miss Bruand this week,

Mrs. John Stork received quite a serious injury last week while getting out of a wagon.

Wm. Guth's team took a lively spin one day last week fortunately no serious damage was done.

Mrs. Wm. Baack sold a nice bunch of sheep last Tuesday. Ray Burman was the purchaser.

Frank Marshall who has been in Illinois the last year returned here some time ago to help his father carry on his farm work.

Ray Burman has a new cutter and he is waiting about as anxiously for some snow as some of the young ladies are for a ride in it.

The people of Pleasant Mound are preparing for a big time with their Christmas exercises Christmas eve. We will report later.

Wm. Henderson's sale last Wednesday was well attended and everything brought a good price. Quite a number of the business men of Garner and Klemme were in attendance buying stock for their farms.

The Burman boys finished corn husking last Tuesday and they were in such high spirits that they gave a party Wednesday evening. The time was merrily spent in playing games and a good supper was served consisting of oysters in conection with other eatables. Such parties have a tendency to cause one to forget the long and tedious hours spent in corn picking.

A large number of the old friends and neighbors met at Wm. Hendersons last Thursday and gave them a surprise the ladies brought with them plenty of eatables and a sumptous feast was served. Among those from abroad who visited them were Wallace Carr of Garner, and a brother who was visiting him also Mr Ellis and wife of Britt. The day was very pleasantly spent and when the hour of departure arrived all expressed their deep regrets at having Mr. Henderson and family leave.

GERMANTOWN GEMS.

The Mrs. John Hartbeck sale last Thursday was well attended and things generally sold at a full figure.

Mrs. Fred Griewe and Mrs. W. C. A. Gast were guests of Wm. Sampson and family near Klemme, last Saturday.

The farmers of this neck of the woods clubbed together last week and hauled Mrs. Hartbeck's oats and corn to Klemme.

Miss Lydia Sampson. left last Friday for Charles City to attend the wedding of her cousin, John Fluhrer, and do the bridesmaid part.

There will be Christmas exercises held in the Germantown church. Arrangements have been made for a good lengthy program and Christmas tree.

Messers Tony and Bernhard Hartbeck of Delaware county, Colesburg, Iowa left Monday for home after a short visit with Mrs. J. Hartbeck.

School Notes.

Fredie Becker entered school last week.

Bessie Lawerence is absent on account of sickness.

The A class in room I are enjoying their new books very much.

The new pupils in the Intermediate Room are Henry and Albert Barz.

The 4th Grade is studing John Paul Jones for Supplementry reading which they find quite interesting.

The 7th grade in room III have taken up the study of literature. They are at present reading the Life of Dewey.

Grace Blank, Elmer Dow, and Glen Phelps were on the sick list last week and were not able to attend school.

STORIETTES.

Robert Barr relates that once, speaking with Bret Harte, he upheld the rigid life Henry Thoreau had led at Walden Pond, as compared with the luxurious surroundings of many modern authors. Barr advocated a return to the simpler habits of our ancestors. "Yes," Harte replied, "living on parched peas sounds very fine in a book. When I visited Emerson, I was astonished to find how close Walden Pond was to the Emerson homestead, and I commented on this. I had imagined that the pond was away out in the wilderness, miles from any human habitation. Before Emerson could reply, Mrs. Emerson spoke up in the tone of a woman exposing a humbug: 'Oh, yes, Henry took good care not to get out of hearing of our dinner horn.'"

An anecdote of Gladstone is set down by Sir Wemyss Reid in the new Anglo-Saxon. Reid tells how, on one occasion, about ten years ago, he sat opposite Mr. Gladstone at dinner and noticed that the side of his face was severely bruised and cut. The explanation was interesting. Mr. Gladstone had been to call, a few evenings before, upon Lord Granville, who was then very ill. In returning he took a short cut through some of the alleys of Mayfair, and in passing along one narrow street he slipped off the pavement and, losing his balance, fell at full length upon the road. "I lay there stunned for a minute at least," he added, in his deep, sonorous voice, "and though a great many people passed, no one came to my assistance or took the slightest notice of me. I suppose they thought that I was drunk."

Cows, it appears, have most accommodating appetites and digestions. When, in the 'sixties, an Oxford cow was credited with swallowing a mackintosh, it drew from Osborn Gordon, then the well known witty censor of Christ Church, London, the expression of a hope that its milk would now be waterproof.

People who did not know the Bertrams wondered how it were possible for so many children to live in so small a house. When Dr. Bertram built the house it was considered of very good size, but that was many years ago, and since then five bright, happy children had come to crowd the little brown house. On one side of them lived a little boy who was an only child and the idol of his father and mother. He had the enviable reputation of having everything he wanted. When some of the little Bertrams wished they were as fortunate as Lawrence Cole, their sister Helen, who was 14, would say:

"Oh, it wouldn't be nice to have all the things we want—there wouldn't be anything to wish for, and wishing is such fun!"

Of their neighbor on the other side the children stood in great awe. He was a bachelor named Samuel Jorden, who lived all alone, and who detested children; and how in the world he happened to build a house right next to the little brown house full of them is not known.

But, in spite of all the wealth on either side of them, the Bertrams were the happiest, most contented of families. There was always such fun there, with never a dull day, so that every child in the neighborhood loved to go there, but after dinner at night was the jolliest time, when Dr. Bertram was at home. They would all gather around the open fire in the library and everyone had to tell what he and she had been doing all day. Then they would have a little music from Helen and her mother, and the girl would transfer them all to an ideal world with the music from her violin. Then came the procession to bed, where Marjorie would be carried, half asleep. The queer thing about the Bertram family was that everyone was utterly different in look and character, so that one never knew just which one they loved best.

It was only the third day before Christmas, when Dorothy, who was just "half past six," went up stairs to find her mother. She had a wistful look on her little face that one could never resist.

"Mother, dear, have I got something for everybody now?"

"Yes, Dorothy, I think you have, and you have helped me very much, besides," answered her mother.

"Well, then, would you please give me just fifteen cents more and let me go out all alone and spend it?"

"Why, yes, my child, you may have that. I suppose it is some great mystery, isn't it, and I mustn't ask?" said Mrs. Bertram.

"No, please don't ask—ever!" said the child earnestly.

"Ever!" thought her mother, as the child went out, "what can she be going to do with it?

It was almost dark when Dorothy opened the door of a florist's little shop, two blocks down the street. Never was a child who loved flowers more than this little maid, and she would talk to them as she would to her dolls. She was a frequent visitor at this shop, and when the other children hurried off to a candy store with an occasional five cents, she usually spent hers for a few pretty flowers. So as she stood there hesitatingly, the man smiled and asked her what she wished.

"I WANT ALL YOU CAN GIVE ME."

"I want all you can give me of some kind that smells sweet, for fifteen cents. I suppose the flowers are all very dear, aren't they?" she added dubiously, but the man had disappeared inside the glass closet, and when he brought out a lovely bunch of Dorothy's favorite cinnamon pinks, she fairly danced. He was very generous with his little customer and gave her eight blossoms, sweet and fresh.

It was quite dark when Dorothy arrived home, but she went straight on past her door, and, wonder of wonders! she turned in at the gate of Mr. Jorden's house!

"Please might I see Mr. Jorden for a minute?" she asked the astonished maid who opened the door just wide enough to look out.

"Well, I never! you don't know how he hates children, I guess," she said, opening the door wider.

A big lump, which she tried to swallow, came up in Dorothy's throat.

"Yes, I do, but may I just see him a minute? I won't bother him."

"Well, I don't know what he'll say, I'm sure," said the girl, as she led the way through the beautiful hall to a door at which she knocked.

"Here, sir, is one of them children that lives next door. She's got some message, I guess."

"FLOWERS?" HE SAID.

And in one second Dorothy found the door shut behind her, and there, in the chair before the fire, sat Mr. Jorden.

"Well, what is it you want, little girl?" said he as he turned toward her. "Be quick, for I am very busy."

"Oh, are you busy?" asked Dorothy, surprised, because he was not doing anything but looking at the fire. "I—I only wanted to give you these, sir, and I'll go right away.

The man stared hard at the white paper parcel she held out to him.

"Flowers?" said he.

"Yes."

"For what, may I ask?"

"Just for Christmas, because you live all alone. Good-bye," and she was gone.

The pretty flowers had begun to fade by the warm fire before Mr. Jorden came out of the brown study into which he had fallen.

"God bless her brave little heart," said he, as he held Dorothy's flowers.

The first joy of the Christmas tree was over, the presents were all distributed, and every one of the little Bertrams were sitting around admiring the candles and the clever trimming of the tree.

"There goes the door bell again," said someone.

"Do you think Santa Claus has come back?" asked Marjorie.

It was a great disappointment to her when she saw her mother shaking hands with Mr. Jorden. He looked rather sad, though he smiled at them all. There was a bright carnation in his buttonhole, the sight of which made Dorothy want to get behind someone.

"How happy you look," said the visitor, sitting down. "I could see you through my side windows—I have often looked in upon you, and tonight I took the liberty of joining you for half an hour. Shall I intrude?"

"Not at all," said Dr. Bertram. "You are very welcome."

Mr. Jorden drew Dorothy toward him and kissed her.

"Do you know," he said, turning to look at them all, "that a man may grow to be fifty years old and learn for the first time what he should always have known. It is this little girl who has taught me how sweet and comforting a child may be, and I used to think they were put into the world only to annoy people."

This was Mr. Jorden's conversion, and though all the children grew to love him, it was Dorothy who became his daily companion and friend.

Cast Care to the Winds.

Holly berries red and bright,
Wealth of candles flick'ring light,
Christmas in the air!
Childish faces all aglow,
Outside sleigh bells in the snow—
Banished is dull care.

Older wiseheads for the time
Join in sport and song and rhyme—
Happy Chrismastide!
Mem'ry brings back golden youth
Eyes then seeing only youth,
Ever at its side.

Joy tonight is crowned the queen
Of the festive Christmas scene.
May her rule be long!
None can claim a rebel heart
With her foll'wers forms a part—
Theirs a gladsome song!

A Bit of Deception.

She stood beneath no chandelier
Entwined with mistletoe;
I glanced the hall-length far and near,
I looked both high and low;
No license for a kiss was hung,
'Twas near a failure flat,
When lo, I spied a sprig among
The feathers on her hat.

Roy Farrell Greene.

Old English Customs.

It was customary in former days, in Cornwall, England, for the people to meet on Christmas eve at the bottom of the deepest mines and have a midnight mass.

In some parts of Derbyshire the village choir assemble in the church on Christmas eve and there wait until midnight, when they proceed from house to house, invariably accompanied by a keg of ale, singing "Christians, Awake!" During the week they again visit the principal houses in the place, and having played and sang for the evening, and partaken of the Christmas cheer, are presented with a sum of money.

In Chester and its neighborhood numerous singers parade the streets, and are hospitably entertained with meat and drink at the various houses where they call.

The "ashton fagot" is burned in Devonshire. It is composed entirely of ash timber, the separate branches bound with ash bands and made as large as can be admitted to the floor of the fireplace. When the fagot blazes a quart of cider is called for and served upon the bursting of every hoop or band around the fagot. The timber being green and elastic, each band bursts with a loud report.

In one or two localities it is still customary for the farmer, with his family and friends, after partaking together of hot cakes and cider (the cakes being dipped into the liquor previous to being eaten) to proceed to the orchard, one or the party bearing hot cake and cider as an offering to the principal apple tree. The cake is formally deposited on the fork of the tree and the cider thrown upon the cake and tree.

A superstitious notion prevails in the western parts of Devonshire that at 12 o'clock at night on Christmas eve the oxen in their stalls are always found on their knees as in an attitude of devotion.

One John Martyn, by will, on Nov. 28, 1729, gave to the church wardens and overseers of the poor of the parish, St. Mary Major, Exeter, £20, to be put out at interest, and the profits thereof to be laid out every Christmas eve in twenty pieces of beef, to be distributed to twenty of the poorest people in the parish, said charity to be continued forever.

Old Santy is no phantom prim—
The cheer he brings cures many ills;
Thro' dreamland's door we follow him,
And lose the thought of New Year's bills.

Christmas Waits.

In England the "waits" are musicians who play throughout the towns and cities at night, for two or three weeks preceding Christmas. They call on the inhabitants for donations. At one time it was the custom to let out this privilege to one man, who was privileged to hire as many waits as he chose and to take a goodly percentage of the profits, none others but his players being allowed to engage in this occupation.

If you lose the habit of giving you lose the happiness of living.

We may look on life as an empty dream, but an empty coal bin is apt to make it a chilly reality.

J. W. Shultz of Wichita, Kan., some time ago ground some alfalfa seed into flour, out of which he made cakes. They proved, however, too bitter to be palatable, and so he made a fluid extract from the seeds, which he declares will make everybody fat, strong and healthy. He is not willing to take any money for his discovery.

The London Globe remarks: "Many of the soldiers who return home have to go without food for several hours during the complicated business of disembarkment. After breakfasting at 6:30 on a raw morning the men spent the rest of the day in disembarking." To breakfast on a raw morning ought to make a soldier feel that to breakfast on a raw egg is a full course meal.

At one of the railway construction works in Glasgow, the other day, a Roman Catholic clergyman, who takes a great interest in the members of his flock engaged at the cutting, saw one of them entering a "pub." He hailed him, but Pat simply looked and walked in. Waiting till he came out, the reverend gentleman accosted him thus: "Pat, didn't you hear me calling?" "Yes, your rivrince, I did, but—but I had only the price of one."

One day, at a large family dinner, Pasteur called the attention of those present to the danger of imbibing germs while eating fruit, and to impress the necessity of caution upon his hearers washed his bunch of grapes in a glass of water. After he had finished the grapes and had forgotten his little speech, being thirsty, he drank from the glass in which the grapes had been washed, thereby arousing much merriment among the irreverent youngsters present.

HER HEART WAS TOUCHED.

A South Dakota Mother and Her Little Girl Express Their Gratitude in an Open Letter.

FOLSOM, Custer Co., South Dakota, Dec. 15.—(Special.)—Mrs. H. D. Hyde has given for publication a letter expressing her unbounded gratitude to Dodd's Kidney Pills for the double cure of herself and little daughter.

Mrs. Hyde has been troubled with pains in her heart for over three years and for a long time her little girl suffered from weak kidneys. The grateful lady does not seem able to find words strong enough to express her gratitude. She has written the following:

I cannot say too much in praise of Dodd's Kidney Pills. They are the greatest kidney and heart medicine I ever used. I had been troubled for over three years with a severe pain in my heart, which entirely disappeared after I had taken a few doses of Dodd's Kidney Pills. I also gave them to my little girl, whose kidneys had been weak, and she commenced to improve from the very first dose. Dodd's Kidney Pills are certainly a wonderful medicine. I would be pleased to have this, my statement, published, as I feel it my duty to let others know just what the Pills will do for them.

LESSON XII, DEC. 23—LUKE 19: 11-27.

The Parable of the Pounds—"Every One of Us Shall Give Account of Himself to God"—Romans 14: 12—Reward of the Faithful.

11. "And as they heard these things." The conversation in the house of Zaccheus (vs. 1-10), as in our last lesson. "He added," to what he had said in the house, a parable for those who had been looking on. "Because he was nigh to Jerusalem." Fifteen to twenty miles, but easily reached in one day. Jerusalem was the capital where they expected their Messiah to appear, and where his reign would begin and center, in David's city and on David's throne. "And because they thought that the kingdom of God." The new kingdom he had come to found, the glorious reign of the Messiah, who would deliver them from all their enemies, and bring prosperity. "Should immediately appear." They thought that all their dreams about the kingdom were to be visibly realized, immediately and in their way.

12. "A certain nobleman." Literally, a man well born, one of high rank and noble blood. "Went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom." The kingdom was not in the far country, but at home where he lived. "And to return" to the kingdom which he sought to rule.

13. "He called his ten servants." Rather, ten of his servants, "for such a noble would count his servants by the hundreds."—Cambridge Bible. "And delivered them ten pounds." One to each. The pound was the Attic mina, the Roman money then in use in Palestine, and was worth one hundred drachmae or denarri (so often translated pence), or about seventeen dollars. "Occupy." Old English for using of laying out what is possessed. An occupier formerly meant a trader. They were to invest the capital in whatever way seemed wisest to each.

14. "But his citizens." Over whom he would rule, but not of his personal household. "Hated him." This was true historically of Archelaus. "And sent a message after him." Rather, an embassy to follow him. "We will not have this man to reign over us." Theophylact well observes how twice this very declaration found formal utterance from their lips—once when they cried to Pilate, "We have no king but Caesar;" and again, when they said, "Write not, The King of the Jews."—Trench.

15. "When he was returned." Having left the servants alone for some time, in order to test their fidelity. But the time came when due account must be tendered.

16. "Then came the first." The reports of three only are given as representatives of the whole. "Thy pound hath gained ten pounds." In an honest business way he had greatly increased his capital.

17. "And he said unto him, Well," or "Well done," as in the R. V. and in Matthew. His master's full and hearty approval brought him nearer and gave him peace and comfort. "Have thou authority over ten cities." Observe the contrasts, from a servant to a ruler, from a few things to many.

18. "The second came." He was less diligent and faithful, and yet was true. He had less reward, but had his due reward. His five cities corresponded to his faithfulness and ability in using the five pounds.

20. "Here is thy pound." Implying that he thought he had been scrupulously honest. "Which I have kept laid up in a napkin," or "handkerchief." He claimed credit for fidelity, too. He did not steal his lord's money, but returned every farthing.

21. "For I feared thee." Lest I could not satisfy thee and thy claims, and might lose what thou didst entrust to me, and then how could I look in thy face? "Because thou art an austere man." Severe in modes of judging or acting. "Thou takest up," etc. You expected me to do the work, while you had all the gains.

22. "Out of thine own mouth will I judge thee." Your own statements condemn you. "Thou knewest," etc. "To be read interrogatively."—Vincent. You knew, did you? All the more should you have been faithful. Even if it were true, this is an unfair description of me.

23. "Wherefore then." You had an easy course before you. You had no right to prevent my money from making its natural gains. "Into the bank." "It is the broker's table or counter, at which he sat in the market or public place, and upon which he set out the sums of money required for transacting his daily business. "Mine own with usury," or "interest." Not necessarily implying anything illegal or exorbitant.

24. "Take from him the pound." He must give up that which he is unwilling to use. He never really possessed it. He merely stood in the way of its proper use, and must give it to those who are willing to make good use of it.

26. "Unto every one which hath." He only has true possession of a thing who uses its powers and forces. He does not really "have" anything which he does not make a stepping-stone to something better. "Even that he hath." In the lower sense, what was entrusted to him.

27. "But those mine enemies." Who not only neglected duty, but refused to be subject to his sway. "Slay them before me." There is nothing possible for those who, in spite of all warnings and all influences for good, determine to remain in sin, and oppose the reign of righteousness in Christ but to be destroyed.

Poor Solace.

Recently a man was going by the night mail to Carlisle. Before starting he called the guard, tipped him heavily, and said: I am going to sleep, and am a heavy sleeper, but I must get out at Carlisle. Get me out, at all hazards. Probably I shall swear and fight, but never mind that. Roll me out on the platform if you can't get me out in any other way. The train started, the man went to sleep, and when he woke up he found himself at Glasgow. He called the guard, and expressed his views in very powerful language. The guard listened with a sort of admiring expression, but, when the aggrieved passenger paused for breath, he said: "Eh, mon, ye have a fine gift o' swearin', but ye canna haud a cannle to the ither mon whom I rolled out on the platform at Carlisle."—To-Day.

Pits for Storage of Roots.

The time of the year is here when the farmer must prepare to store his roots for winter use. While, of course, a cold-storage house is the desirable thing, yet to many farmers this is not possible, for the reason that most farms are so far from a cold-storage plant that it would not pay to haul the roots there. Besides the farmer frequently wants to store roots that he intends to use himself in feeding stock or for household consumption later on. In the storage of sugar beets for factory use various ways have been tried. In our first illustration we give a method used in Nebraska for the purpose mentioned. In this case the pile of beets is about four feet wide and the pile of dirt over them is six inches in thickness. Above the first layer of earth is a layer of six inches of straw, and before cold weather comes on two inches more of dirt are put on. The hole shown at V is a ventilating hole one foot in diameter. This kind of a pit is reported to do very well in Nebraska. Whether it will be found equally serviceable in some other parts of the country can only be told by experience.

In our second illustration is shown the method as followed in some parts of Wisconsin. Notice is taken of the fact that greater cold and more adverse conditions must be faced. The cut shows a cross-section only, as the beets are really placed in a deep and wide furrow that may be any number of feet in length. The pile here shown is about six feet wide and three feet high. On the top of it is 18 inches of earth with ventilating tile every six feet. The tile is left open while the roots are sweating, but can be closed after the process is completed.

The Orange in Its Infancy.

When the orange was first known to man it was a small bitter berry, about the size of a large cherry and rather abundantly provided with seeds. It was a native of Hindostan originally and it is thought was transported thence into Arabia and Persia about the eighth or ninth century of the Christian era. It bore an evil reputation at first, the Moslems believing it accursed. Nevertheless it throve, and a century or two later had developed into a fruit much different from that of the original growth in Hindostan. It made its first appearance in Europe in the twelfth century, when some of the crusaders brought oranges home as souvenirs of their travels in the Holy land. It was not accepted as an addition to the known kinds of fruits, however, for many years, on account of a prevailing legend that those who tasted its luscious juice were impelled against their will to embrace the faith of Mohammed.

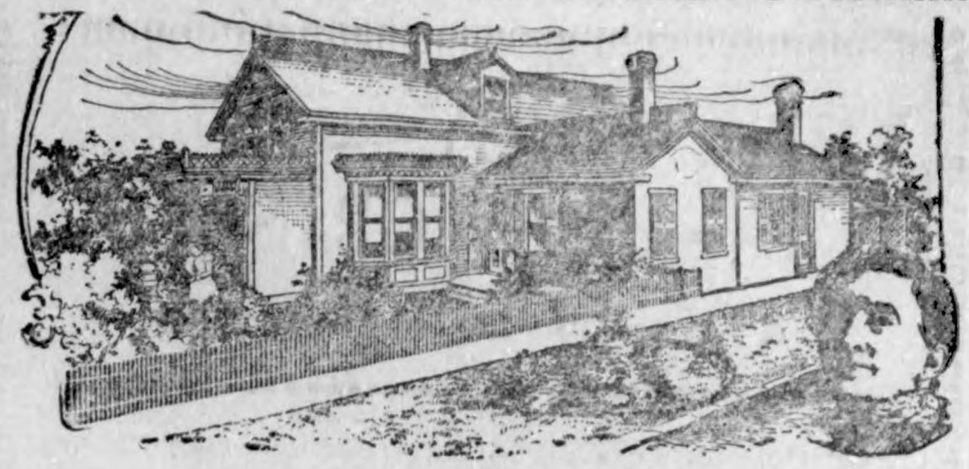
Cape Colony Fruits.

Regulations were adopted last February by the government of Cape Colony, Africa, forbidding the importation of all trees, plants, fruits, tubers, roots, bulbs, etc., until the same had been examined by the proper officials to determine the absence of noxious insects and plant diseases; and the importation of any stone fruit tree or fruit graft cutting, scion, root, seed or produce thereof from the United States or Canada; but the authorities are considering the advisability of relaxing the prohibition of such importations from parts of the United States free from the diseases of peach yellows or peach rosettes.

Peach Yellows in Illinois.

The state entomologist, Dean S. A. Forbes, of the University of Illinois, reports the discovery of a serious case of the yellows of the peach at DuQuoin, in the midst of the fruit district of southern Illinois. The disease is one against which general measures of destruction have been taken by law in Michigan, California and other fruit growing states. This is the first case of any importance that has ever been found in Illinois, and every effort will be made to prevent its spread. All infected trees will be destroyed without delay in accordance with the horticultural inspection law now in force in this state.

MRS. BREWER RECOMMENDS PERUNA FOR GRIP AND FEMALE CATARRH.



The Home of Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer at Westerly, R. I.

In a letter to Dr. Hartman concerning the merits of Pe-ru-na, Mrs. Brewer writes, among other things:

Westerly, R. I.

"Dear Dr. Hartman—I find Pe-ru-na a sure cure for all catarrhal affections so common in this part of the country. It cures a cold at once. There is no cough medicine that can at all equal Pe-ru-na. As for la grippe, there is no other remedy that can at all compare with Pe-ru-na.

"I am among the sick a great deal in our city and have supplied many invalids with Pe-ru-na, simply because I am enthusiastic in my faith as to its results. I have never known it to fail to quickly and permanently remove that demoralized state of the human system which follows la grippe.

"In all cases of extreme weakness I use Pe-ru-na with perfect confidence of a good result. In cases of weakness peculiar to my sex I am sure that no other remedy can approach in good results the action of Pe-ru-na. It meets all the bad symptoms to which females are subject. The irregularities and nervousness, the debility and miseries which afflict more or less the women from girlhood to change of life, are one and all met and overcome by this excellent remedy. I wish every young lady in our city could read your book.

"Mrs. Lizzie M. Brewer."

Pe-ru-na will cure the worst cases of catarrh. La grippe is acute epidemic catarrh, for which Pe-ru-na is a specific.

Mrs. J. W. Reynolds, New Lisbon, Ohio, suffered for many years with chronic catarrh of the lungs, head and throat; continuous cough; many physicians failed to cure. Permanently cured by Pe-ru-na. Thousands of testimonials could be produced. A valuable treatise on catarrh sent free by The Pe-ru-na Medicine Company, Columbus, O.

A pie factory in Chicago is noted for its pumpkin pies, of which it sells thousands every day. The discovery has been made that they are prepared without pumpkins. The substitute is a mixture of sweet potatoes, apples and cheap flour, with a chemical extract which imparts a pumpkin flavor.

Women in China have the privilege of fighting in the wars. In the rebellion of 1850 women did as much fighting as the men. At Nankin, in 1853, 500,000 women from various parts of the country were formed into brigades of 13,000 each, under female officers. Of these soldiers, 10,000 were picked women, drilled and garrisoned in the city.

A statistician, from sources which he does not disclose, calculates that there have been already exported to Australia, in preparation for the Duke of York's visit, 50,000 Union Jacks (ninepenny edition), 500 bales of "tiddlers," a million rounds of crackers (as well as quick-firing rockets), 6,700 reams of red, white and blue ribbons, 850 bushels of fog-horns, 1,300 gross of buttons, and 350 statute miles of streamers.

Germany and Switzerland produce over 2,000,000 glass eyes in a year; and a Paris manufacturer, with a reputation for finer work, some 300,000. They are made in the shape of a hollow hemisphere,and the utmost skill is required in forming the pupil out of the colored glass. The great majority of artificial eyes are used by workmen, especially those in iron foundries, where many eyes are put out by sparks. It is seldom that a woman has a glass eye.

Even the unoffending dressmaker's dummy has fallen under the ban of the reformer, and may possibly give place to models with normal waists. Oddly enough, the most notable exponent of tight lacing in this century was not a woman, but Nicholas I. of Russia. To attain that military style which he deemed essential, he laced so tightly that he often fainted when ungirthing for sleep. While the American rejoices that the bedpost corset-girl is out of fashion, he cannot help wishing that the present Nicholas had followed the example of his ancestor in pinching his own waist rather than in squeezing the breath out of Finland.

There is a young man in Flushing, Long Island, who has lost the use of his legs, and therefore drives about in a little wagon drawn by a goat. He is a registered voter, and at the late election went to the polling place—a fire-engine house—in his wagon. The entrance in use was too narrow to admit the carriage, so the great double doors were thrown open and he drove in. Having received a ballot, he drove to one of the booths, but this also was too narrow. The election inspectors moved a canvas booth to his side, folded it about him and left him to mark his ballot in secret, as the law requires. When this was done the cripple drove to the ballot-box, deposited his vote, and then drove out.

President McKinley has a record of purchasing 37,000 cigars of one brand in the fourteen years he was in congress. While this is a very large number, yet it is no more than a great many men smoke in the same period, as it averages but seven cigars a day. Mr. McKinley had a peculiar custom in handling his cigars. During his service in congress he always bought them by the box, leaving the box at the stand from which all his purchases were made. It was a convenient place for him to call by to get a bundle of cigars, either in the morning or the evening. He had no tendency toward making changes in the brand he smoked. He chose a good one and stuck to it, though since he left congress and while he has been in the White House he has not patronized the same cigar, probably simply because it was not as convenient to buy.

The two-horned white rhinoceros of Africa is considered one of the rarest of animals. For years heedless sportsmen slaughtered the species until it was thought to have been exterminated. Some time ago six specimens were discovered in a remote corner of Mashonaland, and a hunting expedition was organized which resulted in four much-desired mountings being secured by museums. It was again concluded that the white rhinoceros had been exterminated, but recently Maj. Gibbons of the British army ran across a stray specimen in the Nile region and shot it. This Andrew Carnegie succeeded in buying for the Carnegie museum of Pittsburg, and it is a most desirable curio, for besides being exceedingly rare, it is said to be a fine mounting, standing six feet high at the shoulders and measuring thirteen feet from the tip of the nose to the root of the tail.

THE NEWS IN IOWA

DES MOINES ARMY POST.

Committee of Army Men Approve the Site Chosen.

Des Moines, Dec. 15.—The last obstacle in the way of an establishment of a military post at Des Moines was removed yesterday when the board of army officers appointed to inspect army sites in or near this city visited the Briscoe-Denny tract, four miles south of town, and sent to Secretary of War Root at Washington its unanimous approval of that location and the recommendation that it be accepted by the government. This positively settles the army post question, as there is no doubt but the recommendations of the board will be followed. Congressman Hull has been notified of the action, and it is expected that he will ascertain at the earliest possible moment the action of the secretary of war and communicate it to the citizens of Des Moines. It is further expected that the formal acceptance of the site will be received by the Commercial Exchange within the next two weeks, and the property transferred before January 1. The government it is understood will begin preparations for the establishment of the post as soon as the weather will permit next spring making it probable that by this time next year the post will be established. General S. Otis and aide, Captain C. H. Murray, of Chicago, Lieutenant James P. Kimball of Omaha, and Major George E. Pond, of St. Paul, constituted the army post board.

INDICTED FOR MANSLAUGHTER.

Seventeen-Year-Old Boy Accidentally Kills His Brother.

Cresco, Dec. 16.—The grand jury of Howard county has indicted Lewis Eide, 17 years old, charging him with the crime of manslaughter. The tragedy which resulted in the indictment occurred December 3 at the home of the Eide family, about fifteen miles southwest of Cresco. On that morning angry words passed between young Eide and his father, and the former left home, not returning until dusk in the evening. While his father was standing by a cupboard, examining a butcher knife, the boy got a shotgun and placed two cartridges in it, warning the younger children to keep out of the way. The father advanced to the middle of the room, and the boy aimed the gun at him. The farmer knocked the muzzle to one side just as the gun was discharged, and the shot killed Ole Eide, a 9-year-old brother of Lewis. It is generally believed that the boy had no intention of killing his brother, but had brooded over the wrongs of a 16-year-old sister, who is said to be in a delicate condition brought on by her father, until he had become temporarily insane and determined to avenge his sister's wrongs. Indictments against the father are expected to follow.

MUST PAY THE PENALTY.

Albia Negro Found Guilty of Rape of White Woman.

Ottumwa, Dec. 14.—Elza Booker, colored, charged with the rape of Mrs. Sarah Hoevel, a white woman residing at Albia, was found guilty. The crime was committed two months ago and occasioned terrific excitement. For a time a lynching seemed inevitable, but in the end cooler heads prevailed and justice was permitted to take the usual course. Defendant secured a change of venue to Ottumwa, because public sentiment at Albia was so strong as to prevent an impartial trial there. On the witness stand Booker testified that he had frequently met Mrs. Hoevel by appointment, a palpable falsehood. It had the effect of causing Mrs. Hoevel to faint in the court room.

SALOONKEEPER HIT HARD.

Convicted of Selling Liquor id Bath Rooms at Des Moines.

Des Moines, Dec. 16—Judge Prouty sentenced B. F. Parker to pay a fine of $500, it having been conclusively proven that he sold liquor contrary to law in the Equitable bath rooms. In default of the payment or in the absence of an appeal, the court ordered that Mr. Parker be committed to jail. Parker furnished the bond. But this is not all of Parker's troubles. Assessor Frank French intimated that he would serve notice on him for the payment of the county and city mulct tax for the quarter covering the date on which the liquors wer sold in the Equitable rooms, amounting to $300.

WHERE WILL THE GROWTH END?

Remarkable Progress of Iowa's Dollar Daily.

Des Moines, Dec. 17.—The recent enlargement of the Des Moines Daily News to eight pages appears to be only the beginning of that wonderful newspaper's growth, many of its recent issues having been twelve and even sixteen pages. The astonishment among publishers at this growth is increased by the fact that the subscriptoin price of the Daily News is $1 a year, 75 cents for six months, 50 cents for three months.

Train Down an Embankment.

Creston, Dec. 17.—An engine, twelve cars and five men plunged down a 50-foot embankment near Murray. John Dozie was killed and the other four men injured, two probably fatally. The trestle gave way when the train's weight was upon it. The accident occurred on the Burlington's new grade.

TRIED TO ROB BOX OFFICE.

Masked Robbers Foiled in Sioux City Opera House.

Sioux City, Dec. 14.—Two masked men made a desperate attempt to rob Treasurer Harley Rounds in the box office of the Grand opera house during a performance of Shore Acres. They beat him badly over the head with their revolvers and shot at him twice, but the bullets merely pierced Rounds' clothing and the robbers were frightened away without getting the money that lay on a desk near by.

While counting over the tickets with Manager Ross, of the Shore Acres company, Treasurer Rounds went to the street door of the office to answer a rap. The door was pushed open violently and two masked men entered and immediately set upon Rounds. Ross saw the situation and threw a table at the robbers who then fired two parting shots, both at Rounds. The big audience in the opera house became almost panic stricken by the noise of the fight. They imagined the wall of the house were falling and it took the combined efforts of players and orchestra to quiet the house. The robbers made good their escape.

SHOOTING A MYSTERY.

Mrs. Jeannette Broadbent Is Found Seriously Injured.

Des Moines, Dec. 13.—Mrs. Jeanette Broadbent, a professional nurse, who achieved prominence in the Richardson divorce trial now in progress in the district court by testifying regarding certain damaging admissions alleged to have been made to her by Mrs. Richardson concerning the paternity of the youngest Richardson child, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded in her apartments on the second floor of the Baker block. Mrs. Broadbent insists that an attempt was made to murder her. She holds that she was wounded by a man who disappeared as soon as the shot was fired, and that the shooting was due to a desire for revenge on the part of some one because of her testimony in the Richardson case. She claims to have been informed that her life was in danger and says that one intimation came from Mrs. Richardson. Because of the circumstances surrounding the shooting the police hold that Mrs. Broadbent attempted suicide.

A MUSICAL GIFT

Most Appropriate for Christmas.

The season of song and gladness, and a gift fit for a queen—even an American queen—would be one of the wonderful high grade A. B. Chase pianos, unsurpassed by any other piano in the world. One of these marvelous instruments will be sent you on approval, direct from factory, on easy terms, and satisfaction guaranteed.

Full particulars, catalogue and a beautiful souvenir, "From Century to Century," sent free this month on application to the A. B. Chase Co., Norwalk, Ohio, or their special representative, Mr. Nathan Ford, 1620 Sixth avenue, Des Moines.

Malicious Prosecution Charged.

Sioux City, Dec. 17.—There was an unexpected ending in the district court of the $2,000 embezzlement case against William Brower of Moville. The prosecution, after finishing its evidence, asked that the case be dismissed. Immediately afterward the prosecuting witness, George Coleman, manager of the Eureka Mercantile company of Moville was served with notice of a $25,000 damage suit for malicious prosecution. The main witnesses against Brower became all muddled up in their efforts to prove that Brower "knocked down" $2,000 of the company's money in his year of employment.

Move Against Des Moines Drug Stores.

Des Moines, Dec. 16.—The crusade of the State Anti-Saloon league against the drug stores in Des Moines, which are accused of violating the liquor law, has begun. Rev. H. H. Abrams, state organizer of the league, applied for temporary injunctions against proprietors of four drug stores. If they are convicted they will be permanently enjoined from selling liquor and subjected to all the penalties of the prohibitory law. It is understood that similar prosecutions will be begun in other parts of the state.

Town Nearly Wiped Out.

Muchakinock, Dec. 17.—The entire business section of this city came near being wiped out by fire this morning. Six of the principal business buildings and one residence were destroyed entailing a loss of about $60,000. The heat was intense and the entire town was threatened before the flames were finally got under control.

Trust Was to Blame.

Davenport, Dec. 15.—The coroner's jury investigating the recent explosion in the glucose works resulting in four men killed, returned a verdict that the disaster was due to the gross negligence in the company's method of operating the boiler room. This is a trust plant.

Started Fire With Kerosene.

Mitchellville, Dec. 15.—Miss Ethel Crawford, while lighting a fire with kerosene, was suddenly enveloped in flames and before help arrived was baked from head to foot. She is not expected to live.

In Jail For a Dog.

Waterloo, Dec. 16.—Fred Jenks, a weinerwurst vender, was arrested and placed in jail for refusing to pay his dog tax. A local ordinance empowers the mayor to impose such a sentence. The tax was originally $1.

NEWS IN GENERAL

BRITISH MEET SHARP REPULSE.

General Clements Routed by Commandant Delarry's Men.

London, Dec. 15.—Kitchener reports that after severe fighting at Nooitgedacht, General Clements' forces were compelled to retire by a Boer force of twenty-five hundred under Commandant Delarry. Four British officers, Colonel Legge of the Twentieth Hussars and Captains MacBean, Murdoch and Atkins were killed.

Kitchener also reports that the Boers made an attack and were repulsed at Lichtenburg. General Letrmer was killed. Attacks upon Bethlehem and Brede were also repulsed, the Boers losing ten killed and fourteen wounded.

The absence of the names of any officers of the Northumberland Fusileers in Kitchener's dispatch leads to foreboding that the four companies of Fusileers mentioned are in the hands of the Boers. Orders were issued at Aldershot, Malta and other military centers to dispatch all available mounted infantry to South Africa.

Johannesburg, Dec. 15.—The battle still continues in the hills a few miles from Krugersdorp. General Clements has asked for reinforcements, and mounted men under General French have already gone, There have been many casualities on both sides. It is estimated that the Boers number 2,800.

ENGLISH ARE AMAZED.

Little Hope of Speedy Ending of South African War.

London, Dec. 17.—The astounding and utterly unexpected reverse of the British at Magaliesberg, the news of which was broken to the nation exactly one year after General Buller's defeat at Colenso, effectually disposes of any hope that the war in South Africa is nearly ended and completely abated the myth that the operations there were merely of a guerilla nature. As Mr. Lloyd-George, liberal, said in the house of common: "This is the worst of the severe reverses suffered by the British, and it is quite evident that the war will drag on for many months to come. De Wet is making England the laughing stock of the world. We have 210,000 men in the field, yet we are unable to protect ourselves from disaster at the hands of small commandoes drawn from a pastoral population."

The extent of the reverse and the disgrace of such a large body of men surrendering to a small contingent of Boers has created a feeling of shame and astonishment which finds free vent. With somewhat cruel coincidence the Northumberlands are known as the "fighting Fifth." The Second batallion, to which the captured companies belong, was one of the heaviest sufferers at Stormberg a year ago. The regiment has often been pronounced by home and foreign critics to be one of the finest in the British army.

573 FUSILEERS MISSING.

Northumberland Forces Captured by the Boers.

London, Dec. 16.—Lord Kitchener reports officers and 555 men missing from General Clement's force. They consist of four companies of the Northumberland Fusiliers. Judging from the message these were captured by the Boers. Clement's casualties December 13 amounted to five officers and nine men killed and many apparently wounded.

The following is Lord Kitchener's message to the war office:

"Pretoria, Dec. 14.—Clements brought in his force to Comando Nek unopposed. The casualties were, I regret to say, heavy. Killed, five officers and nine of other rank. Missing, eighteen officers and five hundred and fifty-five of other ranks. These latter, four companies of Northumberland Fusiliers, were stationed on a hill and some yeomanry and other details were sent to support them. The names and nature of the wounds are being telegraphed from Cape Town.

"Broadway's brigade took part in the engagement. The Boers suffered severely. Knox drove De Wet north to the Thaban'chu-Ladybrand line, which is held by our troops. De Wet's force, about 3,000 strong, made several attempts to get through during the day, assisted by a force of Boers operating from the north. These attacks were driven back, though some of the Boers from the south were able to get through the line."

CREDENTIALS RECEIVED.

Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching Have Authority to Act

Peking, Dec. 15.—Li Hung Chang and Prince Ching have sent an official notification to the ministers that they have received the promised documents authorizing them to act in behalf of China in the peace negotiations and announcing that they are ready to proceed as soon as the ministers desire.

The fact that Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the British minister to China, has not yet received authority from his government to sign the joint note causes astonishment here, as it is felt that the other powers, having agreed, there cannot be anything in the joint note to cause Great Britain to object sufficiently to make it refuse to sign.

Mr. Conger says he believes China will immediately accept the terms imposed and that it has it in its power to comply with the majority of them before spring, while the others can wait.

ENGLISH COMMENT.

What London Editors Think of the Senate's Action.

London, Dec. 14.—Commenting on the adoption of the committee amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty the Daily Chronicle says:

"The news is very serious indeed. It means, in a ward, that the jingoes and Anglophobes of the United States senate have triumphed and that we are back again today where we were at the time of the Venezuelan imbroglio and President Cleveland's insolent and provocative speech.

"The Americans intend to fortify the canal in spite of the treaty engagement to the contrary. We cannot possibly stand by and allow the Clayton-Bulwer treaty to be thus set aside. The good relations between the two countries must of necessity be gravely menaced. This is the outcome of Mr. McKinley's reelection. Worse could hardly have happened if Mr. Bryan had been returned."

The Daily Graphic remarks:

"We have no doubts as to the result. Anglo-American statesmanship will find an amicable solution of the difficulty created by American jingoes. We fail to see, however, how the Clayton-Bulwer treaty can be got rid of without the mosquito territories reverting to Great Britain."

The Standard observes:

"It is more of a rebuff for President McKinley's executive than for Great Britain. England cannot possibly accept the Hay-Pauncefote treaty thus amended; and it would be insulting to the people and government of the United States to assume that they would either denounce the Clayton-Bulwer treaty without offering an equitable equivalent or contemplate the gross illegality of disregarding it."

THEY ARE NOW CITIZENS.

Harrison on People of America's New Territory.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Dec. 15.—Ex-President Benjamin Harrison delivered a lecture before the Students' Lecture association of Michigan university upon the theme of the relation of the annexed territories and their civilized inhabitants to the United States. It was, as General Harrison declared, not intended to be a legal argument on questions brought into discussion by the Porto Rican bill, but rather a popular discussion of some of the views that have been expressed in relation to some of the students of our annexed territories. The lecturer decided that we had done something without historical precedents—not in the way of expansion but in the character of it. He said that we had taken over peoples, rather than lands as heretofore. He held the view that the civilized inhabitants of the territories were citizens of the United States and that the revenue provisions of the constitution, relating to taxation for federal purposes applied to the territories.

The occasion for the recent departure from precedents was found, he said, especially in the character of the inhabitants of the Philippines. As to Porto Rico and Hawaii, there would probably have been no occasion found for treating them otherwise than we have usually done. The competition of our home products and especially the freedom of the Filipinos to settle in the states were causes for alarm. These considerations, he said, might very appropriately had influence when the question of taking over the Philippines was before us, but it was now too late. He argued that the provisions of the Spanish treaty, and of all treaties were subject to the constitution and could not impair it and if these islands became part of the United States, in the sense of the constitution their people became citizens and the revenue clause which was especially under discussion in the Porto Rican case, applied. He argued that the limitations in the constitution upon the powers of congress, whether expressed in the affirmative or negative form, applied to the exercise of that power in all places, that the very object in the section requiring duties to be uniform throughout the United States—which was to prevent congress from establishing any where under the jurisdiction of the United States favored ports—would be thwarted if foreign goods might be admitted to Porto Rico free, and thence into the United States free. He especially dwelt upon the liberty clauses of the constitution as necessarily applicable to all civilized peoples owing allegiance to the United States.

The lecture may be taken to be an exposition of what General Harrison meant when he said the Portan Rican legislation was a grave departure from right principles.

Forsaking all Others

By AMELIA DUGHEMIN

In truth poor Harvey, in many ways a boy still, needed the comfort the woman he adored alone could give; in her presence he was speedily cheered and soothed.

"It's an ugly story, darling," she said, "but no one knows it. And the situation is substantially the same; you are your grandfather's heir morally, if not legally, and surely your mother will not let you suffer all your life for her fault—no woman in her position could be so wicked."

Harvey winced. Only the other day he had thought that mother little lower than the angels. Helen saw that even she might speak too plainly, and took another tone. But inwardly she rejoiced that the woman she had felt was her superior had not always lived above reproach. The knowledge promised a certain hold upon her, and in her manner toward Gladys when next they met there was a hint of power and a measure of contempt the latter found it hard to bear.

Harvey's demeanor, too, had altered. For days he looked pale and grave. Although perfectly respectable to his mother he spoke to her as seldom as possible, addressing most of his remarks, when the little family met at table, to his wife. Gladys sympathized with his mood, and waited patiently for it to pass. She knew how galled his proud spirit must be; still, as the monotonous days crawled by, bringing no change, she began to feel very lonely.

She would have consoled herself with the baby had she been allowed to do so, but Helen had her own ideas, wise ones, all of them, on the subject of child rearing. It made an infant precocious, she said, to notice them too much; his intellect should be allowed to develop gradually. As for the inane nonsense called baby talk, no child of hers should listen to it. Good English was just as simple and far more sensible. And Gladys, who would have cooed the sweet mother jargon by the hour, all the world forgetting save the smiling mite in her arms, knew that a reproof was intended, and accepting it, left Harvey's baby to Harvey's wife.

Had she been a strong-minded woman she would have have risen above her trials and found happiness in her own occupations; but she was only a gentle, clinging creature to whom love was as the breath of life. That gone, nothing remained.

She wondered sometimes how Harvey, even though displeased, could neglect her so. In the past they had been everything to each other. Now he seldom gave her a thought; his wife was his all in all. Helen's coldness did not hurt her; she was not of her blood, and she had no claim on her affection; but she had given her life to Harvey, and his indifference was hard to bear.

One cold, rainy day Phebe found her crying in her private parlor, which was divided from her sleeping and dressing rooms by a wide hall. The curtains were drawn and the spacious apartment usually so pretty in its tints of crimson and blue seemed cold and gloomy.

CHAPTER IV.

The housekeeper said not a word, but went to the window and threw back the curtains, then touched a match to the wood laid ready in the grate. The flames leaped forth as if glad to escape from their resinous prison, making glittering reflections in the polished tiles and filling every corner with a rosy glow. Phebe rolled her mistress' favorite chair to the hearth.

"Come and sit here, Miss Gladys, while I get you a cup of coffee. It will warm you up. The room is like a vault."

Gladys crushed back a sob and meekly did as she was bidden. She always obeyed Phebe. She drank the coffee when it was brought and looked apologetically into the housekeeper's kind if grim face.

"I miss Louise Leonard so much!" she said.

"I know all about it, Miss Gladys. That reason will do as well as any other. When are you going to have Mr. Walter Barr and his young wife here to dinner? They've been married three months now."

"I suppose I ought to invite them soon," said Gladys, brightening a little. "But Mrs. Harvey so objects to company——"

"And is the house to be kept like a tomb to please her? She has her husband and baby, and you have nobody, it seems. It's little I ever thought to see Mr. Harvey a woman's fool! She twists him around her finger, and the great booby doesn't know it. Well, well, I won't say any more, but you're being moped to death, and I'm not going to stand by and see you fade away before my eyes. Rouse yourself, my dearie. You'll be a different creature if you see living people once more."

Gladys looked thoughtfully into the fire for a space.

"I think you are right, Phebe," she presently said with an air of decision. "I will do as you say."

She dressed herself with unusual care for dinner. She was resolved to charm her sulky boy into good humor. He had just taken his place at the table when she entered, a charming vision in pale pink and white, and he smiled involuntarily.

"Why, how lovely we are this evening!" he exclaimed.

Helen darted at him a disapproving look; but the pleasant words had escaped, and Gladys was responding to them in kind as she took her place at his right. She had long ago given Helen the head of the table. She coveted it, and Harvey was pleased to see her there, and she herself cared nothing for petty distinctions.

The conversation moved on pleasantly, if a trifle haltingly, and presently Gladys announced her intention of inviting Mr. and Mrs. Barr and one or two other friends to dinner.

"I had thought of next Tuesday, Harvey, if you and Helen are disengaged for that evening," she said.

"We are, as far as I know," he answered, glancing at his wife.

Helen did not respond. She was displeased that Mrs. Atherton should contemplate entertaining company at all, and doubly so that she had addressed her question to Harvey instead of to herself, and went on eating her dinner in her usual deliberate way. She had a fine appetite, and took excellent care of her digestion, as a wise young woman should.

"Then we'll say Tuesday evening," said Gladys, all unconscious of what was passing in Helen's mind, and mistaking her silence for acquiescence, she regarded the matter as settled.

It was not until the very day of the dinner that she discovered her error. By this time she and Harvey were on their old terms again, the coolness between them apparently forgotten. Helen's manner never relaxed; she had her own grievances and resented them in her own way. Gladys, however, gave no evidence that she observed anything amiss.

"I am sure you will like Mrs. Barr, Helen," she said at breakfast on Tuesday, hoping to draw the younger woman into conversation, for her persistent lack of interest in any talk in which she was not directly included was irksome. "She is a girl after your own style—an excellent daughter, now a capable wife. I hope you will become friends."

"Thank you," said Helen, in wintry tones. "I am not a believer in married women's friendships. My husband and my child suffice for me. A woman's home should be her kingdom."

She glanced at Harvey for the approving smile with which he always applauded her borrowed phrases, as though every word were a nugget of wisdom fresh from the mine, and added a trifle less deliberately:

"I dislike strangers, and care nothing for social pleasures, so I can not truthfully say I am sorry I shall not meet Mrs. Barr this evening."

"What do you mean, Nell? Have you forgotten she is to come here to dinner?"

"No; but you and I are to dine at father's. I promised him ten days ago."

Helen spoke calmly, though her color flickered as she encountered Harvey's astonished stare. Gladys, too, looked surprised.

"My dear girl," Harvey burst out, "why in the world did you not tell the mater so when she was making arrangements for her dinner?"

"Because she did not consult me. She addressed you, and took it for granted I had no engagements. I never offer unsolicited information."

Gladys saw an ominous look in Harvey's eyes, and rose hastily. She had no desire to witness a matrimonial squabble.

"It is not of the least consequence, Harvey. I should like Helen to meet Mrs. Barr, who has a great deal of social influence, but there will be plenty of opportunities for her to do so in the future, as I intend to open the house to my friends again. I have been living too quietly of late." She looked full at Helen, and there was a touch of defiance in the manner of both. "Do not give this little misunderstanding a thought. I shall not; for it isn't worth it."

She had left the room before the last word was uttered, and ran lightly down the piazza steps to the garden.

"What a woman!" she thought. "What a hard, narrow, revengeful, sullen woman! Poor Harvey! I hope he may continue blind to the end. It is his only chance for happiness."

She need not have been concerned for Harvey. Already Helen, her arms about his neck, her voice broken with emotion, was making her cause good; and although he could not see exactly where Gladys had erred, he was soon convinced that his wife had been wantonly insulted, and was grievously hurt in consequence. Nothing could have been further from the truth than either conviction; but gazing into seductive eyes, tear drenched, pressing warm, red lips quivering with sobs, few men are wise enough to discriminate between the chastening dews of sorrow and the bitter waters of spite or envy.

Gladys' dinner was a success. She felt Helen's absence to be a relief. It seemed pleasant to have the house to herself again, and to sit at the head of her own table. She threw off her sadness and became the charming, frivolous Gladys every one petted and loved. Her guests lingered late. Long after Harvey and Helen had retired the sound of their voices rang through the house, and Helen complained next day at breakfast that baby was fretful and unwell, having been robbed of his sleep the night previous.

Mrs. Atherton made no answer to this plaint. She had discovered that Harvey's geniality had vanished, and his manner toward her was cold. She divined the reason for the change, and while resenting his injustice was hurt by it. She could retain his favor only by submitting to his wife's caprices, it seemed. Her long years of devotion counted for nothing; all was forgotten when this woman, between kisses, accused her of some petty meanness of which she was incapable. How dared he listen to charges so unjust?

Before the meal was half over she rose from the table with a sudden hot anger that dismayed her, for she had never felt anything like it before. She realized that she should end by hating Helen and despising Harvey; a material love that crushes out all purer affections degrades a man; not even the sacrament of marriage can render it holy.

She rode further than usual that day, and was overtaken by one of the violent thunder storms peculiar to the season. She came home drenched and shivering with cold. Phebe, who was waiting for her on a side veranda with a thick shawl, almost carried her to her room, and without ceremony undressed and put her to bed.

"We shall have you down with a fever next," she grumbled. "You were about ready for it before."

Gladys, strangely inert, languidly opened her eyes.

"If I am ill, Phebe, and I fear I am going to be, no one must wait on me but you. I may be delirious and talk. Keep Harvey out of the room at all hazards. Poor boy! If he should learn the truth——"

"It would put him just where he deserves to be put," said Phebe, her smouldering anger against the married couple kindled into a flame by Gladys' condition. "But don't fret, dearie; I'll do as you say. Shall I give the keys to Mrs. Harvey?" she added, feeling that her mistress was very ill already.

"Yes; it will keep her out of your way," said Gladys with a faint smile. Then her eyes closed again and she sank into a troubled sleep."

Next morning she was tossing with fever, and for three months knew nothing of what was going on around her. One bright October day she opened her eyes and looked searchingly into Phebe's face. The faithful woman, wearied by her long vigils, was nodding in her chair by the bedside.

"Why, Phebe, how thin you are!" she exclaimed in a weak voice.

Phebe started up with a stifled cry.

"Oh, my lamb, my lamb, thank God you've come back to us again!" she said, tears streaming from her eyes.

"Why, haw long have I been here?" Gladys asked.

"Fourteen weeks."

"Fourteen weeks!" She lay thinking the wonderful fact over, then turned to Phebe with her own merry smile. "And haven't you given me anything to eat in all that time, you cruel woman? I am famishing."

THE HAIR HARVEST.

Over 12,000,000 Pounds of Human Hair Used Annually.

Perhaps there is no staple article about which less is known by the averge person than human hair as an article of commerce. It will doubtless surprise many when it is stated that the dealers in human hair goods do not depend on chance clippings here and there, but that there is a regular hair harvest that can always be relied upon. It is estimated that over 12,000,000 pounds of human hair are used annually in the civilized world for adorning the heads of women, says a writer in the Toledo Courier. Two-thirds of the ladies nowadays use false hair, more or less. The decree of fashion or the desire to conceal a defect or heighten a charm is the reason, of course. One woman, for instance, has a high forehead and wishes to reduce it in appearance. Another has worn off the front hair by continued frizzing, and would like to conceal the fact. Both make use of front or top piece, with a choice of many styles. Ladies' wigs cost from $20 to $100. Half wigs, top pieces and switches, from $5 to $50, according to quality.

NOTES FROM THE CAPITAL

Des Moines. December 17, 1900.

Dr. R. E. Conniff of the state board of medical examiners admitted in an interview that the board would use every means to keep from issuing certificates to graduates of the Still College of Osteopathy. At its last meeting the board postponed action, giving for its reason that there was too much other business on hand to consider the osteopaths, but Dr. Conniff said: "The board members propose to stand by their guns and protect the public health of this state just as long as they possibly can. It is true there is a law under which the board is required to issue certificates to osteopaths, but there are also provisions which allow the board to provide qualifications that must be met before persons can be admitted to the practice of osteopathy. I am convinced we should make every effort to keep them from practicing. They have begun mandamus proceedings against us in Polk county and threaten us with jail for contempt of court, but we are willing to let that come if necessary."

The Des Moines & Northern Iowa Railway company, incorporated in Des Moines recently to build a road north from Des Moines through Boone and Britt, will build into Des Moines. President Reynolds and members of the directory board have authorized the statement. An engineering corps to run the preliminaries and finally to locate the line between Boone and Des Moines is now being organized and will take the field at once.

A number of the leading physicians of Des Moines have organized the Iowa Physicians' Hospital association and intend to establish in Des Moines a hospital and sanitarium for the care and treatment of cases of tuberculosis. They have secured an option on the Hyde Park sanitarium, about three miles east of the state house and a half mile north of the state fair grounds, where the new institution is proposed to be located. The sanitarium will be devoted exclusively to the treatment of tuberculosis. It will be operated on a "broad, scientific and ethical basis." In the latter respect the institution will be the state's. The physicians say no other institution makes a specialty of tuberculosis, and that the "isolation" treatment is therefore impossible in them.

The large shippers of Des Moines have devised a novel plan to secure lower railroad rates. The Jobbers and Manufacturers' association has decided to form a pool in the shape of a transportation company, which will route all shipments, giving the business to the road offering the best rates.

At a meeting of the state agricultural convention Treasurer Ellison reported a state fair balance on hand of $28,616.61. Resolutions were adopted favoring the creation of a national park at the headquarters of the Mississippi river and the concentration of the control of the government forest reservation under the Department of Agriculture. Officers were elected as follows: President, R. J. Johnson, Humboldt; vice-president, J. C. Frazier, Bloomfield; finance committee, T. J. Gilson, Knoxville; W. N. Ousler, Humboldt, and E. R. Smith, Fairfield; directors—first district, J. P. Manatrey, Fairfield; second, C. W. Phillips, Maquoketa; third, W. C. Brown, Clarion; fourth, R. T. St. John, Riceville; fifth, S. B. Packard, Marshalltown; sixth, T. C. Legoe, What Cheer; seventh, M. J. Wragg, Waukee; eighth, W. W. Morrow, Afton; ninth, Michael McDonald, Baird; tenth, J. W. Wadsworth, Algona; eleventh, C. E. Cameron, Alta. At a meeting of the board of directors Geo. H. Van Houten was re-elected secretary and G. D. Elly son was re-elected treasurer.

A strong attack on the expe iment stations of the state was made by W. M. Bomberger of Harlan, retiring treasurer of the Horticultural society in a paper on "Correct Information," read before that body. Mr. Bomberger said the experiments had absorbed $3,500 of the funds allowed the society in recent years and had given the public only prejudiced local ideas. He maintained that in all ways the funds of the society had been improperly used. The treasurer held that the system of experimenting as carried on in the state was not contemplated in the law and offered to submit the question to the attorney general but a motion to that effect was ruled out of order.

Swift & Co., the big pork and beef packers who have operated a distributing branch in Des Moines for a number of years, have branched out in the dressed poultry business and have about perfected arrangements for making Des Moines one of the big centers in this department of their business. They are now employing 100 hands and picking and packing as high as 3,000 fowls a day, most of them chickens, but many of them turkeys. These fowls are shipped to Chicago, where they are placed in cold storage until sold.

Morrison Jury Didn't Agree.

Eldorado, Kan., Dec. 15.—After being out since Tuesday morning the Morrison jury failed to agree and was discharged by the court. The jury stood nine for acquittal and three for conviction. The case will now go to the spring term of court.

CONGRESS.

Washington, Dec. 10.—Senate—The senate spent almost five hours in executive session considering the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. Morgan took issue with Teller as to the purport of the first clause of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty, claiming it applied only to Great Britain's right to fortify the Nicaragua canal itself. Teller replied at some length, asserting that the provision was of more general import as, he said, any one could ascertain for himself by reading President Buchanan's views upon the subject when he was minister to England. The declaration then made showed plainly, he said, that England had attempted to extend her rights beyond the immediate vicinity of the canal. Teller repeated his declaration that the United States should construct the canal, if at all, regardless of the English position and without going through the formality of ratifying the pending treaty.

House—The first of the great supply bills, the legislative, executive and judicial appropriation bill, was passed by the house today in record time. The bill carries $24,496,308 and has 131 pages, but there was less than ten minutes debate upon it. No other business was transacted.

Washington, Dec. 11.—Senate—There were no set speeches on the Hay-Pauncefote treaty in the executive session of the senate today. Such discussion as there was consisted of questions and answers directed towards clearing up doubts concerning the effect of the treaty generally regarding the rights of the United States in Central America. Beveridge, Lodge, Foraker, Teller, Money, Mason and Spooner participated in the discussion. The Grout oleomarmarine bill was referred to the committee on agriculture. Clay of Georgia delivered a vigorous address in opposition to the ship subsidy bill.

House—The debate on the war revenue reduction bill opened in the house today. Mr. Payne of New York, chairman of the ways and means committee, spoke on behalf of the majority, and Mr. Swanson of Virginia on behalf of the minority. A resolution was adopted for the appointment of a special committee of five members to investigate the death of Oscar L. Booz of Bristol, Pa., who died recently, it is alleged, as a result of hazing, received while a cadet at West Point. This course was taken over the head of the military committee, which reported for allowing the war department to conduct the inquiry.

Washington, Dec. 13.—In accordance with previous agreement the senate in executive session took a vote at 3 o'clock today on the amendment to the Hay-Pauncefote treaty authorizing the United States to defend its interests in the canal. The vote was taken by yeas and nays, sixty-five votes being cast in favor of the amendment and seventeen against it. The negative votes were as follows: Baird, Beveridge, Frye, Foster, Hansbrough, Lindsay, Mason, McCumber, McEnery, McBride, Morgan, Money, Stewart, Tillman, Wellington, Wolcott and Gallinger. The committee amendment which was adopted, was a provision to be inserted after section 5 of article 2 of the treaty, and is as follows:

"It is agreed, however, that none of the immediately foregoing conditions and stipulations in sections numbered 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 of this article shall apply to measures which the United States may find it necessary to take for securing its own forces and the defense of the United States and the maintenance of public order."

In open session Hanna spoke in favor of the ship subsidy bill. A joint resolution from the committee on public buildings and grounds, directing the appointment of a joint commission to ascertain a feasible location for and probable cost of a hall of records to be located in the District of Columbia was adopted.

House—The debate on the war revenue reduction bill continued in the house today. It was dull and featureless.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Senate—Throughout nearly the entire legislative day the senate was in secret session, discussing the Hay-Pauncefote treaty. No business of importance was transacted in the brief open session. In executive session a general debate was carried on, but no action was taken on the treaty.

House—The ways and means committee sustained two signal defeats today. In connection with the beer tax Mr. Payne offered an amendment in the language of the bill passed by the house last session designed to abolish the use of small beer packages; one-sixteenth and eighth barrels, but it was defeated by 85 to 94, after charges that its purpose was to crush out the small brewers. Another defeat occurred in connection with the amendment offered by Mr. Henry C. Smith of Michigan. The bill abolished the one-cent stamp tax on express receipts and telegraph messages, but retained the tax on railroad and steamship freight receipts. Mr. Smith's amendment restored the tax on express receipts and altered the form of the section so as to compel the company instead of the shipper to pay the tax. The amendment precipitated a lively debate, in the course of which Mr. Smith made a personal allusion to a United States senator, who is connected with one of the express companies. Mr. Payne vigorously fought the amendment, but it was carried, 123 to 106.
